House Gets Billion Farm Bill; Parity Item Kept

Effort to Strike $250,000,000 From Measure Fails In Committee Tie

A record-breaking $1,067,000,000 farm appropriation bill, carrying $250,000,000 for unbudgeted parity payments to farmers, yesterday was reported to the House after an effort to prune the measure failed by a 17-to-17 tie vote.

Conflicting Senate and Administration farm program plans meanwhile brought a week-end truce as a series of conferences were called between Senate and House farm leaders and Secretary Wallace in an effort to break a farm subsidy impasse.

From the floor of the Senate, Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, charged an unnamed Federal agency is "playing hide and seek" with Congress and is attempting to launch an export subsidy cotton program without consulting legislators.

Barkley Denies Charge

As George threatened to press a resolution to investigate any such effort, Senate Majority Leader Barkley denied, on behalf of Wallace, that the Agriculture Department is fostering any such move. Barkley said an effort will be made "to work something out" during week-end conferences.

It was Representative Woodrum (Democrat), of Virginia, who moved in the House Appropriations Committee to strike from the regular farm supply bill the $250,000,000 added for farm parity payments. So close was the committee division that the motion lost on a tie after a member of the committee opposed to the payments temporarily left the room.

"Any idea this committee may have had of holding appropriations within the budget, as we have done on past bills, is now gone," Woodrum later told reporters.

$212,000,000 Parity Payments

"We are spending in the current year $500,000,000 for soil conservation payments and $212,000,000 for farm parity payments, in addition to another $1,500,000,000 for various forms of farm relief.

"This bill increases budget estimates for soil payments by $15,000,000 and adds $250,000,000 for parity not even included in the budget. Whatever our hopes, we can't hope to stay within the budget now.

Chairman Jones, of the House Agriculture Committee, who had expected to ask $500,000,000 for the parity price payments in a floor amendment, altered his plans following the close committee division. He announced he would fight instead to hold the quarter of a billion appropriation recommended by the committee.

Ready With Amendments

But Representative Ferguson (Democrat), of Oklahoma, indicated he was ready with amendments to double the parity price figure superimposed on the bill.

The farm bill reported by House Sub-committee Chairman Clarence Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, was $2,444,598,376 higher than the President's budget figure and $113,-

Col. F. S. Greene, Seriously Ill, to Go to Warrenton

Delray Beach, Fla., March 23 (AP).—Dr. Graham King said tonight that Col. Frederick Stuart Greene was seriously ill of a liver ailment and would be transferred tomorrow by train to Warrenton, Va., his boyhood home.

Col. Greene's impending resignation as superintendent of Public Works for New York State was announced in Albany by Gov. Lehman today. Ill health was the cause.

Dr. King said Col. Greene would be placed aboard a train departing from Delray Beach at noon, and would be met by Dr. James Sinclair of Warrenton at Washington.

Bloc Asks President Take Economy Lead

Demands Made After Eccles Says Cutting Might Mean Disaster

By Robert C. Albright.

Demands that the President take the leadership in a "national" program of economy yesterday followed a challenge to Congress by Chairman Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, chief advocate of the Administration's spending program.

Eccles reiterated his belief that retrenchment would be "disastrous," but said a majority of the people apparently believes prosperity will return with a balanced budget. In a democratic government, he said "the viewpoint of the majority should promptly be made effective."

Economy bloc Senators immediately accepted the dare, on condition the Administration itself take the leadership.

"If the statement of Mr. Eccles represents the views of the President and is indorsed by him, and he desires the Congress to determine the issue, I shall be glad to co-operate and assist in the formulation of a rational program for the consideration of Congress," said Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee.

Byrd Invites Leadership

Senator Byrd (Democrat), of Virginia, followed with specific proposals for immediate economies, a suggestion for a round-table conference, and an invitation to the Administration to take the lead.

"As Mr. Eccles properly says," declared Byrd, "in a democracy the will of a majority should always prevail. It is the duty of those in authority to translate that will into action."

The Eccles' statement, apparently designed to bring the economy-tax controversy to a head, was made before a special Senate committee

Taxicab Fares Boosted in All But First Zone

P. U. C. Adds 10 Cents To Rates for Trips In Zones 2, 3 and 4

Ten cent increases in taxicab fares for the second, third and fourth zones and several boundary line changes to benefit residents of Georgetown and Southwest Washington were ordered yesterday by the Public Utilities Commission.

The new rates, forecast exclusively in The Post Monday, become effective at 12:01 a. m., April 3.

The first zone change will remain 20 cents, that of the second zone will be 40, the third 60 and the fourth 80 cents. These rate changes were recommended by the independent rate and zone committee at public hearings conducted in February by the P. U. C.

Second Zone Extended

Both boundary changes are in the second zone. A portion of the third zone in the Southwest area between M and P streets, First street southwest and First street southeast was added to the second zone.

The Wisconsin avenue boundary for the second zone was moved to Thirty-seventh street, between the Potomac River and the intersection of Wisconsin avenue and Calvert street.

Between-zone rates under the new system follow: A trip confined to one zone, 20 cents; from zone 1 to 2 and vice versa, 40; zone 1 to 3 and vice versa, 60; zone 1 to 4, 80; from zone 2 to 3, and vice versa, 40 cents; from 2 to 4, and vice versa, 60; from 3 to 4, and vice versa, 40 cents.

Highest Rates $1.20

A trip between two points in any zone and passing through one different zone, including a trip between 2 points in zone 2 passing through zone 1, 40 cents.

A trip from zone 2 to 3, and vice versa, passing through zone 1, 60 cents; from zone 2 to 4, and vice versa, and passing through zones 1 and 3, 80 cents; a trip between two points in zone 3, passing through zones 1 and 2, 80 cents.

A.F.L. Rejects C.I.O.'s Plan For Armistice

Green Insists That Jurisdiction Is for Unions to Decide

Chances for labor unity were pushed far into the future yesterday as the American Federation of Labor executive council, at the close of a two-day meeting, rejected proposals by the Congress of Industrial Organizations for an armistice pending negotiations for a settlement.

William Green, president of the A. F. of L., insisted that the question of jurisdiction between the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. unions is a matter which the unions must solve individually.

Insist A. F. L. Prevail

The council also took the position that, if labor is reunited, it must be "under the banner of the A. F. of L."

Although it agreed to instruct the A. F. of L. negotiating committee to "do all in its power to effect a possible adjustment" on this basis, the proposal runs counter to the assertion of John L. Lewis that the C. I. O. would not be split "into a multitude of pieces."

The A. F. of L. and C. I. O. negotiating committees will hold their sixth conference today at the Labor Department. The A. F. of L. council agreed on a reply to C. I. O. peace proposals.

This reply, which was not made public, will be submitted to the C. I. O. committee at the meeting today.

Points to By-Laws

In emphasizing that the question of jurisdiction would have to be settled by the various unions, Green simply reiterated a previous position taken by the A. F. of L. It represents an approach to the problem totally at variance with C. I. O. proposals, which are based on the idea that the real road to peace lies in a general understanding, leaving jurisdictional disputes to be worked out through inevitably protracted negotiations.

Green, however, pointed out that the A. F. of L. constitution gives the council no authority "to barter away the jurisdiction of any af-

Model of Gen. Jackson's Horse Like a Bison, Says Gen. Evans

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 23.—To Gen. William McK. Evans, only living man who saw Lee and Jackson in their last conference, May 2, 1863, the model of Jackson's horse selected for a monument on Manassas Battlefield is "more like a buffalo than a horse.

"It'll never do," said the 91-year-old Confederate veteran. "That model makes the horse seem three times as big in front as behind. It looks more like a buffalo."

John Blizzard, 96, who was a courier for Jackson, declared simply, "I don't like it."

The design, submitted by Joseph Pollia, New York sculptor, of Jackson astride "Sorrel," was selected in a competition.

Objections to the model expressed by Richmond chapters of the United Daughters of the Confederacy and the Sons of Confederate Veterans will be considered at the next meeting of the Virginia Art Commission, Chairman Philip N. Stern said.

The sculptor, in reply to the criticisms, said by telephone he was willing to make changes in the statue if they were deemed necessary, but he declared the model was only a "rough sketch" of what the finished statue will be like."

Killer Slips Posse Set to Shell Lair

Mountain Slayer Of 4 Flees After Robbing Bodies of 2 Latest Victims

By the Associated Press.

Cody, Wyo., March 23.—Advancing posse officers tonight found Earl Durand, 26, slayer of four, had escaped from his canyon stronghold while a Howitzer and trench mortars were being rushed to blast him out.

Moving on the raw-meat-eating fugitive's boulder fort to recover the bodies of two slain possemen, Sheriff Frank Blackburn and a force of volunteers rushed into the lair to find Durand had vanished.

During the advance of divided posse forces, the cross-firing caused officers to believe Durand was answering their fire.

Two Bodies Recovered

Sheriff Blackburn said Durand must have scaled the steep ridge wall behind his fortress under cover of darkness last night. He probably reached the pinnacle formations at the ridge summit.

The renegade ranch hand who killed two officers after breaking from the Cody jail last Thursday and shot down two posse officers who tried to rush his lair last night, may have descended the ridge's west slope into the Sunlight Valley country, Sheriff Blackburn said.

On an open slope 50 yards in front of the rocky buttress from which Durand stood off 100 riflemen last night, Sheriff Blackburn's force found the bodies of Orville Linabary, of Cody, and Arthur Garlento, of Meeteetse, Wyo.

Fugitive Robbed Dead

Both were shot through the stomach. Linabary had fallen with his shoulders across Garlento's legs.

Sheriff Blackburn said Durand had taken Linabary's shoes off his feet, picked up the posseman's 30-06 rifle and snatched the laces from Garlento's boots.

The crafty Durand, slinking in the dark like the mountain wild cats he has tracked, evidently crawled down to the bodies last night before scaling the ridge wall to elude the besieging posse he had challenged would never take him alive.

Durand's escape was discovered as a detachment of the Howitzer Company of the 163rd Infantry, Montana National Guard, neared the siege scene from Livingston, Mont., with a 37-millimeter howitzer and a 3-inch trench mortar.

Having failed to get their man with he traditional weapons of the West—rifles and six-shooters—the mountain posse turned to modern military weapons for an assault its leaders had believed would bring out Durand, dead or alive.

But the heavy wartime weapons now were useless, Sheriff Blackburn admitted, unless the cunning slayer was holed up again.

Scouting Force Seeks Trail

While the bodies of Linabary and Gelento were carried from the ridge battleground where they died last night, Sheriff Blackburn started scouting up the ridge slope with a small force seeking signs of Durand's escape trail.

He ordered brought out from Cody two Colorado State penitentiary bloodhounds, which had aided tracking the ranch youth to

First Lady Insists She Has Resigned As D.A.R. Member

Los Angeles, March 23 (AP).—"I have resigned from the D. A. R." was Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt's answer today to a statement in Boston yesterday by Mrs. Frank L. Nason, registrar general of the Daughters of the American Revolution, that the First Lady's withdrawal had not been received. The President's wife was reported several weeks ago to have left the organization in protest against its refusal to permit Marian Anderson, Negro singer, to appear in Washington's Constitution Hall.

Ecuador Police Storm University, Quell Revolt

By the Associated Press.

Quito, Ecuador, March 23.—Students, strikers and police clashed here early today in what government circles described as an abortive "Marxist" revolutionary attempt.

A number of workers were injured by blows and overcome by tear gas.

The students have been holding out at the National University building for 12 days.

Advance Penetrates 12 Miles; Germany Pledges to Protect Sloyakian Frontiers

By the Associated Press.

Bratislava (Friday), March 24.—The Slovak government announced early today that Hungarian forces had been thrown back after penetrating 12 miles into eastern Slovakia from Carpatho-Ukraine.

The official press bureau said there had been skirmishes, but no casualties. Details of the fighting were lacking.

An official communique last night said the Hungarians sent three columns across the frontier early yesterday from Berezny (Beregszasz), three miles across the frontier in Carpatho-Ukraine.

Bicycles, Tanks Advance

One infantry battalion went to Starina, 12 miles northwest of the frontier line, a second infantry battalion and one bicycle unit pushed to Ubla and Stakcin, a short distance across the border, and a motorized regiment with tanks advanced to Sobrance, 12 miles to the southwest.

A group of Hungarian planes was said to have flown ahead of the advance, circling over Michalovce, 22 miles from the border, and proceeded toward Presov, 30 miles deeper in Slovak territory.

Slovaks mobilized Hlinka Guards and rushed them toward the invaded zone.

Directed at Railroad

It appeared from the Slovak official account that the Hungarian maneuver was directed at drawing completely within Hungarian territory the important Uzhorod (Ungvar)-Uzock Pass and Railway which connects Hungary with Poland.

No mention was made of earlier reports that Hungarians had crossed the border at Kosice (Kassa) and Uzhorod.

The treaty between Germany and Slovakia retained Slovakia's autonomous status and was signed by German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop and three Slovak representatives — Premier Joseph Tiso, Dr. Vojtech Tuka and Ferdinand Durcansky.

Provisions of Treaty

After a 150-word preamble, the treaty provides:

Article 1. The German Reich undertakes to protect the political independence of the Slovak state and the integrity of its territory.

Article 2. For execution of the protection undertaken by the German Reich, the German armed forces have the right at all times to erect military plants within a zone lying west of the borders of the Slovak state and east of the general eastern ridge of the Little Carpathians, the eastern ridge of the White Carpathians and the eastern ridge of the Javornitz Mountains and to maintain them at a strength deemed necessary.

The Slovak government will see to it that the ground and soil necessary for these plants are placed

Schacht Heads Reichsbank Again, London Hears

Berlin (Friday), March 24 (I.N.S.).—A report published by the London Daily Mail that Dr. Hjalmar Schacht has been restored to the presidency of the Reichsbank could not be confirmed in Berlin early today.

Authoritative Nazi quarters, however, discounted the report, saying it was exceedingly improbable Germany's "financial wizard" had been called back to the post from which he was deposed by Chancellor Hitler last month.

Dr. Walter Funk, economics minister, has been president of the Reichsbank since Hitler shook up the administration of Germany's financial institution.

Madrid Envoys Reported in Burgos

London (Friday), March, 24 (I.N.S.).—The Exchange Telegraph Agency reported from Rome early today that negotiations for the surrender of Madrid and Valencia to Gen. Franco were undr way.

Quoting Italian correspondents in Spain, th dispatch said envoys of the Madrid Junta arrived in Burgos, Gen. Franco's capital, by airplane last night to confer on conditions for the surrender of the two largest cities still controlled by the Spanish republicans.

Winston Churchill Says:

Hitler Errs in Belief Britain Won't Fight

'Revolution of Feeling' Spread Like Fire Through Empire After Seizure of Czechs; Anti-Nazi Forces Still the Stronger

By Winston Churchill.

By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post.

London, March 23.—I used the phrase, the European crunch, a month ago because it seemed certain that a great trial of strength impended between Nazidom and its opponents. It was clear then that the German preparations portended another violent stroke. By the beginning of March the final arrangements had been made for the industrial mobilization and for turning over German factories to their alternative war production. At the same time heavy movements of munitions and troops to the east was evident. The optimism in which those who could have had access to this information indulged, represented their wish but had no basis in known ascertainable facts. It is astonishing that any well informed and thoughtful person could have believed that the spring would pass without a renewed act of aggression by the German dictator.

CHURCHILL

The blow has been struck. Hitler, following exactly the doctrines of "Mein Kampf," has broken every tie of good faith with the British and French statesmen who tried so hard to believe him. The Munich agreement which represented such great advantages for Germany has been brutally vitiated. Neville Chamberlain has been disillusioned and affronted. The entire apparatus of confidence and good will which was being sedulously constructed in great Britain has been shattered into innumerable fragments. It can never again be mended while the present domination

Germany Wins Control of Rumania's Oil

Carol Agrees to Let Reich Develop Ports, Railroads, Rivers

By the Associated Press.

Bucharest, March 23. — Broad trade advantages for Germany in Rumania, in effect extending German commercial enterprise to the Black Sea, were disclosed in a synopsis of a five-year German-Rumanian trade agreement published today.

There were no political conditions in the published version. However, a political aspect was implied by the fact that one of the Rumanian signatories was Foreign Minister Grigore Fafencu, who ordinarily would not sign a trade agreement.

German capital, in co-operation with Rumanian money, will be permitted to exploit Rumanian oil fields and mines, according to terms of the pact.

Germany Gets Free Ports

Germany will receive free ports on the Danube River and Black Sea to facilitate German commerce.

Germany will buy on a "balanced exchange" basis more Rumanian fodder, fruits, textiles, materials and vegetable oils.

Rumania will adjust her agriculture to German needs and give Germany preference in the disposal of her products.

Rumania will get war materials, airplanes, machinery and technical assistance in establishing industries for processing agricultural products —such as sugar refineries and flour mills.

Germany will overhaul the Rumanian railway system, build roads and improve river transportation.

Coincidentally, the German gov-

Memel Added To Blacklist Against Nazis

Roosevelt Proclaims Suspension of Czech Trade Pact

By William V. Nessly.

President Roosevelt by proclamation last night terminated all rates of duty provided under the United States' trade agreement with Czecho-Slovakia, as further expression of this country's resentful displeasure at German seizure of Cezcho-Slovakia's territory.

At the same time, in line with this Government's contention that German and Hungarian occupation of the area is "temporary," the agreement itself was left in effect, to be made operative again when Czecho-Slovakia's independence shall have been restored.

Earlier in the day the Government, through Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles, accepted as a "constitutional" development Lithuania's cession of Memel to Germany, but did not relax in any particular its clear views against seizure of territory under threat of duress.

Memel on Blacklist

It moved, also, to place Memel under the trade blacklist already imposed upon Germany because of Nazi discriminations against United States foreign trade.

The trade agreement with Czecho-Slovakia was signed March 7, 1938, and amended April 15. The President yesterday terminated the rates, effective April 22.

The President's proclamation, after citing Section 350 of the amended tariff act of 1930 which granted him authority in the matter, and noting proclamations he had issued putting the rates into effect, said:

"Whereas, the occupation of the Czecho-Slovak provinces of Bo-

Murphy Answers Dies Demand, Offers to Publish Bund Report

Attorney General Murphy declared yesterday he would "be glad" to make public a hitherto secret 14-volume report compiled by the Federal Bureau of Investigation on activities of the German-American Bund.

The Department of Justice chief added that he would even authorize the publication of digests of current investigations into the workings of American Fascist groups.

Murphy's statement was in swift reply to a resolution introduced in the House yesterday by Representative Dies (Democrat), of Texas, who demanded that the Department of Justice immediately send to the Speaker of the House its "full report on Nazi and Fascist activities in the United States." The resolution provided for the printing of 50,000 copies of the report.

Apparently mystified by the Dies resolution, Murphy said yesterday, "I never had been asked to make the bund investigation public."

The resolution, introduced solely in the name of Representative Dies, chairman of the Committe Investigating Un-American Activities, was widely interpreted on Capitol Hill as rebuking the Department of Justice for its failure to publish results of the investigation.

Dies himself, however, insisted to

Chamberlain Tells Commons Cabinet Will Oppose Further Hitler Advance

By Frank R. Kelley

Special Cable to The Post.

London, March 23.—Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain today pledged the British Government to resist by all the means in its power any further attempt by Chancellor Hitler to subjugate independent states under the threat of invasion.

Chamberlain did not specify, however, the exact method by which Britain hopes to call a halt to further expansion eastward by Germany, nor did he state categorically that Britain would fight for Rumania, Poland, Yugoslavia or any other country which might be the next target for the application of the Hitler technique of fomented incidents, crushing demands and threats of aerial bombardment, accompanied by military invasion.

Chamberlain's declaration was made to the House of Commons at question time today. It had become known that Britain and France had exchanged written agreements under which France promised instant support to Britain in the event of a German attack on Belgium or Holland, and Britain undertook to back France in case Germany invaded Switzerland.

Result of Bonnet Talks

This exchange of pledges is one of the concrete results of the talks that Foreign Minister Georges Bonnet, of France, has had here with Chamberlain and Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, during the state visit of President Albert Lebrun.

In the three years following Hitler's re-militarization of the Rhineland, Britain and France have effected what amounts to a hard and fast military alliance on the pre-war model, but until the exchange of pledges this week, nothing so implicit had been placed on paper.

Britain and France have yet to announce they will back Rumania and Poland, or any other nation that comes under Hitler's menacing eyes. Chamberlain today was unable to give Commons any information about the declaration of common determination to resist aggression which Britain wants France, Russia and Poland to sign.

Negotiations for publication of this agreement have bogged down into an almost interminable series of conversations through diplomatic channels, with the result that hopes of the early formation of a united front against Hitler are dwindling.

Woos Smaller Nations

It is now believed Britain will propose a conference in London of the foreign ministers of those nations willing to stand up to Hitler. At such a conference, Britain would try to get the smaller nations to translate their hatred of Hitler into a more or less formal system of mutual assistance against aggression.

Negotiations through diplomatic

Vienna Denies Schuschnigg Has Been Freed

Vienna, March 23 (AP).—Rumors described as originating with friends of the family said today that former Chancellor Kurt Schuschnigg of Austria had been released early this week from Gestapo headquarters.

Schuschnigg has been a prisoner since shortly after annexation of Austria by Germany March 13, 1938.

Inquiries at the Vienna propaganda office brought the reply the reports were "incorrect."

Senate Boosts Sugar Quota For Mainland

Foreign Allotment Is Slashed From 44.41 to 40 Per Cent

By the Associated Press.

The Senate yesterday approved sharp revisions of the sugar quota act in a move to increase shares for mainland cane and beet areas.

It voted a series of amendments offered by Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, and other Senators from the Western sugar beet areas which Majority Leader Barkley (Democrat), Kentucky, said would increase the share of the American market for mainland growers from 55.59 per cent to 60 per cent with a decrease for Cuba and other offshore producers from 44.41 to 40 per cent.

Before passage of the bill Chairman Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, of the Senate Finance Committee, said he had not had time to study it to determine whether it would violate the trade treaty with Cuba.

Ellender Starts Move

He served notice that if he later found there was a conflict with the treaty, he would move reconsideration.

The move to change the quota system started when Senator Ellender (Democrat), Louisiana, offered an amendment to maintain cane and beet acreage quotas for this and next season at the same level as last season.

Senators from sugar beet areas at first objected to the Ellender proposal but later compromised by including their own proposals. Among these was a request of Senators McCarran and Pittman, Nevada Democrats, that their State get at least 6,000 acres of this increase.

One of the Adams amendments would increase the domestic sugar acreage quota by 200,000 acres. Adams said this acreage would produce about 300,000 tons of sugar. Importations of sugar would be reduced a like amount.

Insular Quota Unchanged

In response to a question by Senator King (Democrat), Utah, Senator Adams (Democrat), Colorado, said the proposal would not discriminate against Hawaii and Puerto Rico but would make no increase in the quotas of those islands.

On the basis of quotas recently announced for 1939, total quotas of domestic and offshore producing areas would be increased from 3,797,996 short tons raw value, to 4,099,294 short otns. Included in these areas are Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, and domestic beet and cane sugar areas.

The total quotas of Cuba, the Philippine Islands and other foreign countries would be reduced from 3,034,161 short tons, raw value, to 2,732,863 short tons.

Agriculture Department officials declined to comment on the Senate action in passing the Ellender bill.

On Capitol Hill

The name of former Representative David J. Lewis, of Maryland, was mentioned yesterday in speculation over who might be appointed to the vacancy on the Federal Communications Commission.

LEWIS

Others who have been recomended for for the post post left vacant by the resignation of Eugene O. Skyes, of Mississippi, include former Senator Fred Brown, of New Hampshire, and Theodore Granik, of New York, counsel to the United States Housing Authority.

The Senate pased and sent to the White House yesterday legislation which woud make permanent the Connally 'hot oil act."

The act, which would otherwise expire June 30, prohibits shipment of oil in interstate commerce when it has been produced in violation of State laws.

Walter E. Fuller, of Philadelphia, president of the Curtis Publishing Co., urged that the increase in social security taxes scheduled for next year be postponed.

Before the House Ways and Means Committee in behalf of the National Association of Manufacturers, Fuller said actuarial studies made by his organization made it evident that even if payment of benefits was begun next January 1, the present pay roll tax of 1 per cent "would be more than sufficient to adequately finance the plan for the next 15 years."

The Senate passed and sent to the President a resolution to authorize Commander Henry Coyle, of the Coast Guard, to accept a decoration conferred upon him by Greece.

The Grek government tendered to Commander Coyle the decoration and diploma of the Marine Medal of Class 1 (gold) for his services in the rescue of the crew of the Greek steamer Tzenny Chandris, which foundrede November 13, 1937, off the coast of Cape Hateras.

An informed source said Robert M. Hutchins, 40-year-old president of the University of Chicago, was being boomed for the chairmanship of the Securities Commission.

Hutchins, who became head of the University of Chicago at the age of 30, was said to be under serious consideration, with some others, for the post left vacant by the appointment of William O. Douglas to the Supreme Court.

Like Douglas, Hutchins taught law at Yale. Douglas was understood to have been offered a lucrative professorship at the University of Chicago by Hutchins before leaving Yale to take the SEC job.

Traffic League Head Testifies Against Lea Transportation Bill

By the Associated Press.

The National Industrial Traffic League expressed opposition yesterday to a provision of the Lea transportation bill calling for an increase in the membership of the Interstate Commerce Commission.

W. H. Day, chairman of the league's executive committee, told the House Interstate Commerce Committee that any fundamental changes should be evolved by the commission itself.

"In view of its many years of operation," Day said, "the commission should be better able to suggest the weaknesses of its own organization and methods."

Day said the league opposed another proposal of Chairman Lea (Democrat), California, of the committee, for Federal regulation of water carriers and various suggestions for creation of a special railroad reorganization court.

The National Association of Motor Bus Operators, through Ivan Bowen, Minneapolis attorney, charged that the railroads, through legislation they have indorsed, were attempting to accomplish by Federal regulation "what they hesitate to advance openly—a monopoly of transportation—a cartel to maintain prices above a competitive figure."

Meanwhile, the Interstate Commerce Commission heard concluding argument in the Missouri Pacific Railroad reorganization proceedings.

Next step will be the issuance by the commission of a final plan of reorganization for the bankrupt carrier.

The argument was devoted chiefly to the question of whether present Missouri Pacific stockholders should receive anything for their holdings. Spokesmen for bondholders continued present stockholders should be wiped out, while the railroad's counsel, E. S. Ballard, argued for a plan to give present stockholders warrants entitling them to purchase new common stock in the reorganized company.

The Gallup Poll

Roosevelt Holds Popularity With Voters Despite Party Fights in Congress

By Dr. George Gallup,

Director, American Institute of Public Opinion.

New York, March 23.—President Roosevelt's popularity with American voters showed virtually no net change during the month of March in the continuous monthly Presidential index of the American Institute of Public Opinion.

GALLUP

Freshly returned from his Caribbean cruise to face an economy-minded Congress and a tense European crisis, Roosevelt is approved as President today by 58.2 per cent of the major party voters. This compares with 58.0 last month and the month before.

The continued high level of his popularity coincides with his policy of taking an aggressive attitude toward dictator countries—a policy which previous institute studies show is approved by a large majority of American voters. In fact, his handling of the foreign situation has been one of the most popular acts of the New Deal to date.

Despite the squabbles of domestic politics and the continued split between conservative and New Deal Democrats in Congress, the President himself is more popular today than he was at the time of the Congressional election last November, when the institute's index showed him supported by 54.4 per cent of major party voters.

The trend of opinion on the President is shown in the replies of a cross-section of voters to the question:

"In general, do you approve or disapprove today of Roosevelt as President?"

Major Party Vote for Roosevelt

Today	58.2%
Last month	58.0
Last November	54.4
1936 election	62.5

Public approval of Roosevelt's conduct in the Presidency does not, however, indicate support of a third term at this time.

On the same ballot on which voters expressed their opinion of Roosevelt as President today, the institute has asked whether they favored the President for a third term. The last tabulation showed that only three persons in ten (31 per cent) definitely approved a third term at this time. This sentiment might, of course, change if the President actually announced himself as a third-term candidate and conducted a vigorous campaign.

The present session of Congress is one of the few during which the President's popularity with the masses has not declined. In the institute's 62 monthly surveys which have measured his standing there has been a drop in his popularity during every session except that of 1936.

Political observers will be watching closely for signs of a change in his popularity during the remainder of the present session, for Roosevelt's prestige with voters will play a large part in his plans to dominate the 1940 Democratic convention and name his successor in case he decides not to run.

The President's chief strength is still coming from the lower income levels and from voters in the large cities. Farm sentiment is about evenly divided, 53 per cent for the President, 47 per cent opposed. Urban voters are for him by approximately 6 to 4.

The income groups divide as follows:

Major Party Vote for Roosevelt
Upper income group	35%
Middle income group	54
Lower income group, including in reliefers	74
Reliefers only	83

100 Fight Woods Fire On W. Va. Mountain

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Romney, W. Va., March 23.—A fire on the west side of Jersey Mountain was reported as the most destructive one in that section for more than 40 years. Dry weather and high wind combined to make it difficult to control, although 100 citizens joined in the effort.

The fire orginated at the base of the mountain on or near the property of O. B. Calohan, and swept to the top in a comparatively brief period, burning over one of A. L. Ewers' apple orchards.

State Garden Club To Dedicate Tract Near Manassas

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Manassas, Va., March 23.—N. Clarence Smith, chairman of the Virginia Conservation Commission, will be the principal speaker at the Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs' dedication of Fernstrom Forest March 30 on the grounds, located on U. S. Route 211, 11 miles west of Manassas.

Miss Rebecca Robinson Williams, Woodstock, representing the Junior Garden Clubs of the federation, will unveil a plaque denoting allocation of the 25-acre tract of the Conway Robinson Memorial Forest to the use and enjoyment of the Garden Club Federation.

F. C. Pederson, State forester, will welcome the visitors on behalf of the Virginia Forest Service.

The Virginia Federation of Garden Clubs designated the plot the Fernstrom Forest as a memorial to the late Mrs. Cornelia Hodgeman Fernstrom, of Norfolk, one of the two founders of the organization.

At conclusion of the dedicatory exercises, the civilian conservation corps will give a practical demonstration of conservation by replanting the deforested area of the Fernstrom Forest.

New Age Aid Held Likely to Kill Reserve

Morgenthau to Testify Today on Cost of Expanded Program

The controversia social security old-age reserve, once held likely to reach $47,000,000,000 by 1980, would be wiped out by the cost of the new social security program President Roosevelt has recommended to Congress, it was aneuted in informed quarters yesterday.

Treasury Secretary Morgenthau will present to the House Ways and Means Committee today estimates of the cost of the new program, which would begin old-age benefit payments next January instead of January 1, 1942, increase monthly benefits in early years and provide benefits to widows and orphans and wives of retired workers, survivor for supplementary benefits to aged benefits to persons becoming disabled before reaching the retirement age of 65.

Estimates of the additional cost, it was learned, range as high as $750,000,000 to $1,000,000,000 annually. This would mean additional outgo of $25,000,000,000 to $40,0000,000,00 in the next 40 years.

Reserve Would Evaporate

The old age reserve, in consequence, would evaporate, notwithstanding the periodic stepping up of the old age benefit taxes, as provided in the social security act.

The old age taxes, under the program as it now stands, would permit a substantial reserve to be built up by 1980, thus permitting the program, with the continued revenue brought in by the taxes, to be in large part self-supporting.

The reserve was first estimated at $47,0000,0000,000, although later calculations showed nobody could forecast what it would be.

Moncure Quits Race for Va. Seat, Backs Mrs. Holmes

Fredericksburg, Va., March 23 (AP). Frank P. Moncure, member of the House of Delegates for two jerms representing Stafford and Prince William Counties, announced today that he would not be a candidate for re-election.

Mr. Moncure said he was withdrawing in deference to Mrs. Nell Hyde Holmes, of Manassas, who is expected to announce her candidacy for the office shortly. Mrs. Holmes was a candidate six years ago, being defeated by George W. Herring. She refrained from running in 1935, when Mr. Moncure was first elected, with the understanding that he would support her in the forthcoming campaign.

Another prospective candidate for the office is E. R. Conner, Manassas merchant and farmer, who has stated that he would make formal announcement soon.

Dog Catcher Seizes First Lady's Gift

Ardmore, Pa., March 23 (AP).—An Irish setter, a gift from the White House to Mrs. Curtin Winsor, was picked up by township dog catchers today and taken to the pound. The dog was unlicensed, the officers said.

Mrs. Winsor is the former wife of Elliott Roosevelt, son of President and Mrs. Roosevelt.

Hines Gets 4 to 8 Years; Starts Appeal

Long Sentence Final Blow to 62-Year-Old Leader's Following

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 23.—A political dynasty modestly begun in the 1870's by a blacksmith, whose party faithfulness got him the business of shoeing the city's horses, was eclipsed today by the sentencing of his heir, Tammany District Leader James J. (Jimmy) Hines, to 4 to 8 years in prison.

Judge Charles C. Nott, jr., ordered Hines to prison for acting as the hired political protector of the old "Dutch Schultz" (Arthur Flegenheimer) policy racket. As the Tammany leader pulled his big, aging body erect to hear the judgment, he pushed out his chin, and gulped.

"If it were not for your age," said Judge Nott, "I would not be so lenient with you. The evidence showed you were paid at least $30,000 annually to protect this vicious racket and in all previous cases of this type that have come before me, I have been much more stringent."

It meant the breakup of a career which made Hines one of the most powerful bosses the city ever knew—a supposed dispenser in recent year, said a probation report submitted to Judge Nott, of Federal patronage in this area.

Since his conviction on February 25, specifically on charges of conspiracy and operating a lottery, the 62-year-old Hines' iron grip on his upper West Side followers had loosened perceptibly, and the length of the sentence was the final blow to a leadership already only nominally held.

J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, lawyer for the Dutch Schultz mob, and "Big Harry" Schoenhaus, payoff man, named as follow conspirators of Hines, were sentenced yesterday.

Davis was given a year, and Schoenhaus a suspended sentence with two year's probation. The testimony of these two men was largely responsible for Hines' conviction.

White and silent Hines left the courtroom—the same courtroom from which he had walked with a thin smile two months ago to comment thus on the jury's verdict:

"It was like a kick in the belly."

Immediate appeal was planned by his counsel, from this, the most spectacular conviction yet obtained by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey in his announced campaign to smash what he has termed the "criminal alliances" of some politicians. Under State law Hines would be eligible for parole consideration after serving two years and eight months. The maximum sentence would have been 27 years.

Never Held Paying Job

Under the court's ruling, Hines must go to Tombs Prison, but until the matter of his bond is settled—pending the appeal—he will not be obliged to go to State prison.

Judge Nott refused to continue the $20,000 bail under which Hines has been at liberty, but granted a stay of execution of sentence to enable Stryker to make an application for a certificate of reasonable doubt—the first step towards an appeal.

The formality of passing judgment took 11 minutes.

From the probation report emerged the conclusions that while Hines had no considerable income in the last few years, his family's property was at some unknown figure wel labove $100,000, and that although he never in his life had any one position paying a substantial income, "he and his family have prospered financially."

Sees Self the Victim

There emerged, too, a picture of the development of an old-time politician up from the gas-light era—the little blacksmith shop which he made his first clubhouse while his father, James the senior, a politician, too, was shoeing all the fire and police department horses; the day of the hard-fisted, corpulent neighborhood "leader," when "the pay-off was on the winner."

Then these random observations of the parole officer: Hines with a court record—throwing his big fists in street fighting as a youngster . . . Hines the product not of schools but of a driving ambition and an "aggressive, persuasive, open-handed" personality . . . Hines the boy politician, an important man to Tammany before he was 21 . . . Hines the shrewd businessman, making a lot of money from the inherited blacksmith shop and getting out at the right time and going into the trucking business . . . City contracts, $10,000 profit in six weeks in garbage removal . . . Hines still going up in politics; an alderman in 1907, a district leader—soon to be most powerful of them all—in 1920 . . . Finally, Hines today:

". . . He seeks solace in his description of himself as the selected and symbolic victim of an era that is passing into eclipse, but, according to his professed conviction, into a temporary eclipse."

3 Boys Admit 20 Car Thefts, Guard Attack

Tell Police of Plot To Free Pal in Industrial Home

A month's career in crime which included theft of a score of automobiles and the robbery of an Industrial Home School guard was revealed yesterday with the arrest of three boys who, police say, blazed a trail of wrecked cars through Virginia and Maryland.

Their arrest came through an accident near Warrenton, Va., early yesterday in which an automobile owned by Henry Buckley, of New York City, turned over twice. The car was stolen Saturday night from a lot in the 700 block of Tenth street northwest and contained clothing valued at $1,000.

One youth, 18, was traced through descriptions furnished by passersby to his home in Arlington, Va., where he was arrested yesterday. The other two, 16 and 17, were seized in Washington on information he supplied.

District and Arlington police said the boys admitted theft of 15 to 20 automobiles and trucks, several of which already had been found wrecked or abandoned. Search for others is under way.

They also admitted, police said, attempting last week to free a friend from the Industrial Home School for Boys. Earle W. Cassie, superintendent, reported to police they held up a guard in the rescue attempt and when it failed, escaped in a truck.

Last week, police said, the boys wrecked a stolen automobile near Marlboro, Md., and attempted to hold up a farmer who passed in a truck. They failed when the farmer spied a gun in the hands of one youth and fled.

Later last week, according to police, they wrecked another stolen machine near Waterloo, Md.

Posse Seizes Man in Attack On Md. Women

Ellicott City Teacher And Mother Beaten On Lonely Road

By the Associated Press.

Ellicott City, Md., March 23.—A pretty young school teacher and her aged mother nursed painful bruises tonight, evidence of a narrow escape from a colored assailant after a struggle on a dark, barricaded country road.

In jail was Albert Gibson, 21, colored, who Sheriff Hobbs said admitted blockading the road with fence posts and lying in wait for Mrs. Elizabeth Zenter, 28, Clarksville High School teacher. Hobbs said Gibson told him he did not expect 74-year-old Mrs. Ada O'Donnell to be with her daughter.

Gibson was arrested by a posse at the home of a sister, 12 miles away, soon after Mrs. Zenter, her head bleeding from a deep cut, reported the attempted attack at the farm home of Ernest Snow.

Mrs. Zenter said she was taking her mother to Lenten services at St. Mary's Chapel when they were halted by the fence-post barricade.

"I stopped the car to remove the fence rails," she told officers later. "I sensed that someone was behind me. Before I could turn I was seized around the waist by a man. I recognized him as a man who had worked for my father on his farm."

He tried to throw her to the ground, she said, striking her several times in the face.

"Somehow I managed to break loose from him and ran to the car. I got the motor started, but he jumped on the running board and snatched open the car door and grabbed me."

He tried to drag her from the automobile, she said, but with the aid of her mother, who joined in the battle, she got the door shut and locked and drove away. Mrs. Zenter said the assailant struck her mother twice on the head.

State police joined the quickly formed posse and brought Gibson to jail here. He was charged with attempted attack.

Arlington authorities said an automobile stolen recently in Baltimore was found near the home of the boy arrested there. The truck in which they escaped from the frustrated jail delivery also was found in Arlington.

Parley Is Called, Md. Span Dispute Nears Showdown

Ocean City, Md., March 23 (AP).—The long and bitterly fought dispute over the location of a new Sinepuxent Bay Bridge was headed toward a showdown today at a public meeting for final arguments by the opposing factions.

J. Glenn Beall, State roads commission chairman, today called on all interested to speak their minds at a Monday night meeting in an Ocean City theater.

The hearing with the roads commission was requested by Clarence Miles, Baltimore attorney employed by the Ocean City residents opposing the north division street site.

Capital Made Gastronomic Proving Ground As Feud Over Silvery Smelt Splits Michigan

Washington yesterday became the main battlefield of a feud, which started in the streams of Michigan.

All because a man from Escanaba, capital of upper Michigan, mentioned smelts to a man from Beulah, in southern Michigan.

The battle began, when Representative Bradley, Escanaba district, announced he had order a ton of smelts to serve 250 guests in a dinner at the Congressional dining rooms April 6, and help to promote national interest in the Escanaba smelt jamboree, April 13 to 15.

Harry Smith, farmer of Beulah, visiting in Washington, retorted:

"Those finny-backed, bony-backed fish from Escanaba, are not smelts. They're whitefish."

"This is a hell of a thing. The only real smelts, the only legitimate smelts are the ones at Beulah and Crystal Lake. When the smelts run up to Crystal Lake there's more fish than water. We catch them with bushel baskets, eat them all, heads and tails. Some people don't like the heads. We cook them in deep fat. Smelts are better than trout, better than chicken, better than anything."

Smith is going home and will send a load of real smelts back to Washington, this week or next, he notified his Congressman, Representative Engel.

Engel said he was going to Representative Bradley's dinner to investigate the relative merits of Northern and Southern smelts.

If Representative Bradley's smelts showed real competition, he might arrange a later dinner to demonstrate the superiority of smelts from Beulah, he said.

A nonpartisan from Illinois, Fred Orsinger, director of the Aquarium in the Department of Commerce, agreed to act as judge in the smelt war.

He said he needed at least 200 smelts for a meal, with only a fair appetite.

"Just send me five pounds from each side of Michigan, and a bit of bock, and I'll give my opinion," said Orsinger.

Italians Must Quit Spain to Get Paris Pact

France to Require End Of Press Insults Also Before Negotiating

By the Associated Press.

Paris, March 23.—The French government has fixed its bases for negotiations with Italy in an effort to draw Premier Mussolini out of Reichsfuehrer Hitler's camp.

Informed sources said France would ask only two "minimum" guarantees to bring about conversations for a reconciliation with the Fascist government.

These were:

Steps toward withdrawal of Italian troops from nationalist Spain.

A halt in the anti-French campaign of the controlled Italian press.

King Vittorio Emanuele's address to Italy's new legislature was interpreted in French political quarters as an invitation to French-Italian negotiations.

Issue Dates to 1915

The King's revival of the issue was believed in French quarters to reflect an Italian desire for an accord with France since Germany has embarked on a campaign of expansion through Czecho-Slovakia and Memelland.

(The issue between France and Italy stems from the secret pact of London, signed April 26, 1915, under which Italy went into the World War on the side of Britain, France and Russia.

(It provided that Italy "may claim equitable compensations" in event that France and Britain increased their colonial domains in Africa at Germany's expense.

Britain Paid Off

(Britain paid off, apparently to the satisfaction of Italy, with several concessions, and sporadic negotiations between Italy and France finally resulted in the accord of January 7, 1935, signed by Pierre Laval, then premier of France, and Premier Mussolini.

(Following Italy's declaration in December that the treaty no longer was valid, France on February 18 established fixed garrisons in the area between Eritrea and French Somaliland which she had ceded Italy but which the latter had not occupied.)

Informed sources said Premier Daladier's government would await Premier Mussolini's expected speech next Sunday before deciding to send an envoy to Rome with the conditions for negotiations.

Daladier has arranged to broadcast to France on Monday.

ernment promised Rumania tonight that all war materials which Rumania previously had ordered from Czecho-Slovak factories would be delivered.

Rumania to Get Munitions

The German legation informed the foreign office that 30 carloads of munitions had been sent from the Czech Skoda Works by way of Poland to Bucharest.

This agreement to deliver munitions came after the signature yesterday of the German-Rumanian trade pact.

The pact provided for close cooperation between Rumanian and German banks and indications were the value of the Rumanian lei would be reduced in relation to the German mark for purposes of trade.

Germany will co-operate with Rumanians in construction of electric plants and introduction of new agricultural products for which Germany has a special need.

Rumanians did not say so, but there was a general impression Germany was expected to respect Rumanian sovereignty and territorial integrity.

Goes Into Effect In Month

The agreement may be terminated after five years on one year's notice. The text provided it would go into effect in one month, but both sides waived that condition and the accord went into immediate operation.

It was agreed on all sides, however, Rumania was entering a period of intense industrial and commercial activity and possibly a period of at least temporary prosperity.

Some commented Rumania still was free to make commercial engagements with other countries because Germany was given no monopolistic privileges. An English trade commission, it has been announced in London, is to be sent here.

But what worried the average Rumanian appeared to be whether any risk of his political security was entailed by the sweeping advantages extended Germany.

The German Legation, however, described the agreement as a "common trade agreement which seems to have attracted an extraordinary amount of attention"—an apparent reference to officially denied reports that Germany had pressed the negotiations by delivering an ultimatum.

Meanwhile, much of Rumania's army and reserves remained concentrated a short distance from her southern, western and northwestern borders.

Hitler Errs in Belief Britain Won't Fight, Says Churchill

Churchill

rules in Germany. This somber fact must be faced.

A veritable revolution in feeling and opinion has occurred in Great Britain and reverbrates through all the self-governing dominions. Indeed a similar process is taking place spontaneously throughout the whole British empire.

Nazis' Strength Gains

This mass conversion of those who had hitherto been hopeful took place within a single week, but not within a single day. It was not an explosion, but the kindling of a fire which rose steadily hour by hour to an intense furnace heat of inward conviction. Nothing is more impressive than the outward calm which has been preserved. It has hardly been thought necessary to argue the matter. Those who have been in these events the melancholy fulfillment of their belief and warning have not exulted. Too, those whose eyes are now opened have not recanted nor need they do so. Their aims were honorable. All are united in a resolve to meet the awful anger which threatens the civilization of the world. There is a pessimistic feeling that events have inexorably shaped our path and that we can do no other than follow it with steadfast perseverance.

That path has become more arduous and hazardous than in September. The military strength of Nazidom has received enormour reinforcements. The distribution of the well organized, thoroughly equipped Czech army and the capture by Germany of all the arsenals, artillery and munitions of the murdered republic constitute a loss to the western democracies of the first magnitude.

One can understand very readily how 'Hitler's mind has worked. He regarded Munich as an act of submission on the part of Great Britain and France under the threat of war. No one knew better than he the inherent weakness of his own position at that time. His generals and financial experts had warned him of the risk he ran. He thought that he knew the limits of the will power of those who threatened to withstand him. He was sure that the sincere love of peace that inspired the British and French governments would lead them to give way under pressure. He ascribed their actions when they did so only to the basest motives.

All their conscientious scruples about self-determination for the Sudetens were to him only the evidences of their lack of fighting qualities. When what he had predicted to his circle was confirmed by the events, his confidence in his instinct and in this star bounded high. "History," he had written in "Mein Kampf," "teaches us that nations which have once given way before the threat of arms without being forced to do so will accept the greatest humilations and exactions rather than make a fresh appeal to force. He who has obtained such an advantage will, if he is clever, only make his fresh demands in small doses. When dealing with a nation which has lost all forces of character owing to its having given way spontaneously he will be entitled to expect that his fresh but piecemeal demands will not be considered worth resisting by the nation on which they are made."

A Shock to Hitler?

It must therefore have come to him as an ugly shock that Great Britain should have reacted so violently against his seizure of Czecho-Slovakia. He had assumed that the Munich agreement implied the final ending of British and French resistance to his domination of Eastern Europe. He thought himself secure in giving full rein to his appetite and ambitions.

If the great nations of the west would not fight for Czecho-Slovakia while she was strong, why should they concern themselves with its fate once she was entirely in his power? If they would not fight for Czecho-Slovakia, how much less would they fight under less favorable conditions for Rumania? The guardian bastion had been abandoned. Henceforth, who would be so imprudent and, indeed, as it seemed to him, so illogical as to bar his passage? One must admit that in his own heart he had some grounds to be misled. If the Nazi dictator had the time to study British history he would see that on more than one famous occasion that island has lost great military advantages in Europe by its intense reluctance to be involved in continental struggles, and yet, in the end, led the way to victory. He had only to read the last two years of the reign of King William III of Great Britain and the opening years of Queen Anne to learn that an unwillingness to enter a quarrel may be succeeded by an unwearying and triumphant leadership in that same quarrel at a later and more difficult stage. How could Louis XIV believe that the Great Britain which had tamely watched his occupation of all the Belgian fortresses in 1702 should reach a long arm to strangle his armies on the Danube in 1704?

Hitler disillusionment does not rest only upon the resurgence of will power in the western democracies. The whole attitude of the east is hostile to Nazi aggression. Instead of being terrified by the fate of Czecho-Slovakia, Poland, Rumania, Turkey, Greece, Bulgaria and, by no means the least, Yugoslavia have been roused to a lively sense of self-preservation. The Rumanian monarchy has as its representative a man of masculine determination. The whole Rumanian people, in spite of the serious divisions of domestic politics, have rallied to the defense of their country. A strong regular army occupies the various defensive lines. Behind them both Turkey and Soviet Russia stretch forth friendly hands. The power and influence of Soviet Russia may be well underrated. The loyal attitude of Soviet Russia to the cause of peace and their obvious interest in resisting the Nazi advances to the Black Sea impart a feeling of encouragement to all the eastern states now menaced by the maniacal dreams of Berlin.

The situation which confronts Hitler is, therefore, stern, and the question which now lies in suspense is how he and his circle will respond to it. It is certain that no tolerable relations will be possible for Germany with the outer world until Germany has been liberated. There can be no question of trade pacts or cordiality while that crime still calls for justice and reparation. On the other hand, for a dictator to recede and disgorge is a step fraught with mortal danger. It is for this reason that the whole world position must be regarded as tense and grievous in the last degree.

One thing only is certain. The forces opposed to Nazidom are, in spite of what has happened, still by far the stronger. A period of suffering resulting from the slaughter of noncombatants may lie before us, but this, if borne with fortitude, will only seal the comradeship of many nations to save themselves and the future of mankind from a tyrant's grip.

at the disposal of the German armed forces.

In addition, the Slovak government will agree to such regulation as may be necessary for supplying the troops duty free and for supplying the plants, also duty free.

In the zone described above, military rights of sovereignty are exercised by German armed force (Wehrmacht).

Private German persons of German nationality who, on the basis of private contracts, are charged with erecting military plants in the zone described, are subject to German legal jurisdiction.

Article 3—The Slovak government will organize its own military forces in close collaboration with the German armed force.

Article 4—Corresponding to the relationship of protection agreed upon, the Slovak government will always conduct its policy in close co-operation with the German government.

Article 5—This treaty becomes effective at once upon signature and is valid for 25 years.

The two governments will come to an understanding well ahead of the passage of this period of time.

Advices from Bratislava said the Slovak cabinet had convened to discuss a situation deemed serious.

Sources close to the German government said that whatever occurred on Slovak soil today had been done without German permission to Hungary.

Since the new Slovak-German treaty went into effect immediately, it was assumed diplomatic activity was under way between Germany and Hungary over the Slovak military situation.

Richberg Leaves Mexican Oil Talks For Washington

Mexico City, March 23 (AP).—Donold Richberg left for Washington today "neither encouraged nor discouraged" over prospects of a settlement with Mexico on the nation's expropriated foreign old industry.

"It's a long road between the United States and Mexico," commented Richberg, representative of the major United States oil companies expropriated last Mach 18, in reference to viewpoints of the companies and the Mexican government.

He added, however, that he "knew the road better now" after two weeks of inconclusive conferences with President Lazaro Cardenas in search of a settlement.

Britain, Paris Sign Defense Agreement

British

channels so far have shown promise of nothing stronger than a vague, antiaggression formula, which would lack teeth. The difficulty of obtaining even this much is caused by the reluctance of the smaller nations, particularly Poland, to sign away their preference to "sit on the fence," when they are not sure that Britain intends to back them to the limit against Hitler.

If Poland and Rumania expected anything really "tough" from Chamberlain today, they were disappointed. In replying to a question from Maj. Clement Richard Attlee, the Labor leader, Chamberlain began by recalling his Birmingham statement to the effect that Germany's recent coup in Czecho-Slovakia had raised the question: "Whether that government is not seeking by successive efforts to dominate Europe, and perhaps even to go further than that."

"Successful Resistance"

Chamberlain continued:

"Were this interpretation of the intentions of the German government to prove correct, His Majesty's government feel bound to say that this will rouse the successful resistance of this and other countries who prize their freedom."

Chamberlain said he was not in position to say anything about Britain's current talks with other countries. Then he added:

"We must make it clear . . . that there is no desire on the part of the government to stand in the way of any reasonable efforts on the part of Germany to expand her export trade . . . nor are this government anxious to set up in Europe opposing blocs of countries with different ideas about the forms of their internal administration."

Silent to Laborite

Then followed the sting in Chamberlain's words:

"We are solely concerned here with the proposition that we cannot submit to a procedure under which independent states are subjected to such pressure under threats of force as to be obliged to yield up their independence. We are resolved by all the means in our power to oppose attempts that may be made to put such pressure into effect."

As soon as Chamberlain sat down, Aneurin Bevan, a Laborite, declared that Chamberlain was "entirely unsatisfactory in the existing situation.

Chamberlain made no reply.

Axis Alliance Threatened

Berlin, March 23 (U.P.).—Nazi leaders tonight said the Italo-German-Japanese pact against Communism soon might be converted into an outright military alliance as the totalitarians' answer to the "Stop Hitler" drive among other nations.

Eden Asks Conscription

London, March 23 (AP).—Former Foreign Secretary Authony Eden in a speech to the American Correspondents' Association called for conscription of Britain's wealth, industry and manpower to meet "the menace confronting Europe."

But the government was represented as unable to make up its mind on:

How far to implement its new "collective security" foreign policy by promises of military assistance for any powers threatened in the future by the Nazi advance.

How to meet growing clamor for some form of conscription to fit the nation internally for this new policy designed to replace the appeasement efforts which Chamberlain dropped after Hitler absorbed Czecho-Slovakia.

Hope Abandoned For 12 on Plane Down Off China

Tokyo (Friday), March 24 (AP).—A Domei (Japanese News Agency) dispatch from Dairen today said hope had been abandoned for 12 persons aboard a Tientsin-Dairen airliner after pieces of wreckage had been found floating off Port Arthur.

The plane disappeared yesterday, when it took off with nine passengers and a crew of three on a 250-mile hop across the Gulf of Chihli.

Among the wreckage was a part of the plane's fuselage and a mail bag. All the passengers were believed to be Japanese.

hemia, Moravia and Slovakia by armed forces of Germany, and of the province of Ruthenia by armed forces of Hungary and the assumption of de facto administrative control over these provinces by Germany and Hungary renders impossible the present fulfillment by the Czecho-Slovak republic of its obligations under the said agreement;

Effective Date April 22

"Whereas, this condition will obtain so long as such occupation and administration continue;

"Now, therefore, be it known that I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, acting under the authority conferred by the said tariff act of 1930, as amended by the said act of June 12, 1934, as extended by the said joint resolution of March 1, 1937, do hereby proclaim that my proclamations of March 15, 1938, and April 15, 1938, shall be terminated in whole on the 30th day after the date of this my proclamation."

The proclamation closes the door to other lands, which, under the most-favored-nation clause, could have continued to benefit from the tariff rates contained in the Czech-United States agreement.

Welles revealed yesterday that Lithuanian Minister Povilas Zadeikis had informed the State Department officially that his government had decided to cede Memel to Germany and that the Lithuanian Parliament had approved.

Reich's Economic Gain Slight

While saying that the cession was in accord with constitutional procedure and was officially announced by the Lithuanian government, Welles remarked that this country's views with regard to seizure of land "under threat of duress" had been made known so frequently that there was nothing to say now.

He told reporters at his press conference that the State Department was notifying the Treasury of the Memel situation so appropriate action might be taken.

Appropriate action by the Treasury, it was pointed out elsewhere, logically would consist of classing Memel as German territory under customs regulations and imposing on Memel products the high duties in force against German exports.

Meanwhile, the Bureau of Foreign and Domestic Commerce reported to Secretary of Commerce Hopkins that "Germany's economic gains in taking over Memel will be very slight."

Memel Port Loses Money

The Memel harbor has been improved by the Lithuanian government, the report said, but ordinary port receipts in 1936 amounted to only $230,000, with expenditures of $231,000. Lithuania has spent $6,540,000 on the port since 1923, but received only $1,594,000 in return from port receipts.

While the Memel port handles 80 per cent of Lithuanian foreign trade, Lithuania has started spending considerable money improving the harbor at Scentoji, which might be expected to take away some of Memel's trade.

United States exports to Lithuania, $300,000 yearly, may not be seriously affected by the new German coup. Principal American exports have ben automobiles, lubricating oils and varied manufactured goods. Lithuania, in return, ships $1,000,000 worth of goods here annually, chiefly cellulose and smoked meats.

Gas Explosions Terrify London

London (Friday), March 24 (I.N.S.).—A score of violent explosions and a fire in the medical storehouse of the Royal Military College of Science plunged a portion of London into a panic early today.

A wide area around the college and Woolwich Common was shaken by the explosions apparently caused by the bursting of gas cylinders in the storehouse which was demolished by the fire. No casualties were reported.

Hint of Peace Not in Hitler Memel Speech

Official Version Omits Statement Changes Are Near an End

By the Associated Press.

Memel, Germany, March 23.—Adolf Hitler paid a whirlwind visit to this Baltic port today to welcome Memelland's 150,000 citizens into his expanding realm and pledge to them that Germany was "ready and determined to master its own fate."

The Fuehrer sailed on the torpedo boat Leopard for an undisclosed destination just two hours after he had stepped ashore with the fanfare of a conqueror to deliver a speech to the jubilant Memellanders.

Behind him Hitler left a mystery. A vast audience heard him say.

Text Changed

"The damage which that other world did to Germany, however, had to be repaired again.

"I believe that now, in the main, we have arrived at an end to this unique process of reparation."

But hours later, DNB (official German News Agency) distributed an official text with a broad change in that section.

Before the official text was issued even diplomats, believing there might be implications of tremendous importance in Hitler's hint of a halt to German territorial acquisitions, eagerly had sought an interpretation.

Greeting Uproarious

According to the official text, Hitler said:

"The harm which the rest of the world had caused us ought to find an end. And so I greet old German volksgenossen (members of our community) as the youngest citizens of our great German Reich."

(Officials in Berlin said they did not know the reason for the change and as Hitler was on the high seas they could not venture an opinion. Carefully recorded stenographic reports as well as the preliminary unofficial text gave the earlier version.)

Hitler's declaration was made from a balcony of the Memel Civic Theater amid an uproarious welcome that matched the greetings he received in Austria and the Sudetenland when they were brought "home into the Reich," last year.

Armed Strength Displayed

Memel, a territory of 1,099 square miles, was detached from Germany by the Treaty of Versailles and was returned yesterday by Lithuania in exchange for German guarantees of nonaggression.

Whistles on craft in Memel Harbor were tied down when the 10,000-ton German pocket battleship Deutschland brought the Fuehrer into Memel Harbor.

Hitler gave his newest subjects an impressive demonstration of Nazi power afloat, in the air and on land. A large part of the German fleet convoyed him to Memel, the northermost German city he has ever visited. Units of the first army corps proceded him by land and warplanes roared overhead.

Fortification Expected

Ecstatic "heils" and cries of "We thank our Fuehrer" rose as Hitler went to the center of the city through streets strewn with flowers, resounding with bands and hung with streamers bearing messages of gratitude.

There seemed little doubt that Germany, having acquired her first additional naval base since Hitler's rise to power, would proceed without delay to fortify Memel.

The Memellanders' local district leader, Ernst Neumann, introduced Hitler from the theater balcony. Hitler decorated Neumann with the Nazi badge of honor, telling the crowds he could give no better expression to his feelings than by decorating their leader.

Italy's King Invites France To Make Offer

Rome Wants Peace, Paris Knows How to Settle Issue, He Says

By the Associated Press.

Rome, March 23.—King Vittorio Emanuele declared Italy's desire for peace in troubled Europe today with words which diplomats said left the way open for a negotiated settlement of her quarrel with France.

The sovereign of the Italian Empire, in a speech to the Senate and newly-formed Chamber of Fasces and Guilds, recalled a note which Premier Mussolini's government sent to France December 17.

That note, its complete contents never divulged, denounced a 1935 settlement of long-standing claims against France in Africa and called for a new colonial deal.

Italians considered the King's speech, marking fascism's twentieth birthday, an invitation to France to make Italy an offer.

Declares Italy Wants Peace

"Regarding France, my government has made known the questions which divide the two countries at this moment," the 69-year-old King said, referring to the December note. He declared Italy wants peace to last "as long as possible" so she can develop her African colonial empire.

What Mussolini says in a speech scheduled for Sunday may have important bearing on the situation.

Acknowledging that happenings in eastern Europe had brought uneasy times, Vittorio Emanuele said this had been demonstrated by "the recent collapse of some of the artificial political structures born after the World War."

He declared Italy was arming to "save peace for us and everybody."

Press Moderate

Press comment on the King's speech was as moderate as the monarch's words and refrained from the aggressive language toward France which filled Italian newspapers some weeks ago.

Italian newspapers showed concern over the British-French "halt Hitler" movement, which they said would involve Italy.

Virginio Gayda, authoritative Fascist spokesman, declared that Italy's "real and honest" desire for peace had been neither understood nor appreciated. He accused the democracies of opposing Italy's "need for space" and attempting to gain "the priority of positions" in Europe.

Text of Hitler's Memel Speech

By the Associated Press.

Memel, March 23.—Following is the official text of Adolf Hitler's address today from the balcony of the Memel Civic Theater:

Memel Germans! Fellow citizens!

In the name of the entire German people I greet you today and am happy to receive you into our great German Reich.

I thereby lead you back into that home which you have not forgotten and which has never forgotten you.

In the name of this German people, however, I express thanks to you for your bold, manly and unshakable insistence upon your right and upon your membership in the German Reich.

It has seemed to me that I could give no better expression to this thanks than by just now conferring upon your leader that badge which the best fighters for our new German Reich are carrying upon their breasts.

For, the fact that you can celebrate this day you owe not to an accident but to untold labors, to a very hard struggle and to very severe sacrifices.

Assails His Predecessors

You had been left in the lurch at one time by a Germany that surrendered to disgrace and ignominy.

Now, however, you have returned into a mighty new Germany that again knows the unshakable conceptions of honor, that does not want to and will not entrust its fate to strangers, but that is ready and determined to master its own fate and to give it form even if another world does not like it.

For this new Germany today over 80,000,000 Germans stand sponsor.

You will now flow into this great srteam of our national life, of our labor, our faith, our hopes and, if necessary, also our sacrifices.

You will understand this better than other Germans who have the good fortune of being permitted to live in the heart of our great Reich.

"You Are the Frontier"

You are the frontier of the country and you will feel what it means not to be forsaken but to know that behind you is a powerful Reich, a consolidated nation.

Just as you were the sufferers from German impotence and disunion, so also were other Germans.

From dire need and suffering, however, there has now sprung up for us a new community spirit. Let it be our will and our determination that it shall never again break asunder and let it be our oath that no other power on earth shall ever break or bend it.

Intends No Harm

The 20 years of misery and suffering shall be a warning and a lesson to us for all time to come. What we have to expect from the rest of the world we know.

We have no intention on that account to inflict harm upon it. However, the harm that it had caused us ought to find an end.

And so I greet old German volksgenossen (members of our community) as the youngest citizens of our great German Reich.

Just as at this minute all Germans in the entire Reich are doing it, so, too, we want to express our love, our affection and our readiness for a sacrifice, our faith, our fidelity and our confidence in the battle cry:

Our people and our German Reich, sieg heil!

Brazil to Pay U. S. Debt if Exports Gain

Aranha Forecasts Bond Settlement Within 3 Months

Rio de Janeiro, March 23 (AP).—Foreign Minister Oswaldo Aranha said today in a statement upon his return from Washington that resumption of payment of Brazil's debts to the United States depended upon an increase in Brazilian exports and monetary surpluses.

Aranha reiterated he was "in principle for payment of public debts" but added "I always subordinated that moral obligation of payment to material capacity to do it."

"Everything depends upon possible capacity to pay," he said.

An agreement was signed in Washington March 9 for a liberal extension of credit to Brazil.

"In my letter (to Secretary of State Hull) announced in Washington March 9," Aranha's statement said, "I said the government's economic plan considered resumption in July of the payment of interest and amortization on the dollar debt.

"My theory in making this assertion was to tranquilize more than 500,000 holders of our bonds whose attitude during our stay was the most sympathetic possible for Brazil and also because one cannot have an economic plan based upon nonpayment.

"I declared, however, the scale of payments and other conditions would be discussed by the Brazilian government directly with the bondholders, not with the bankers—all depending naturally upon an increase in our exportations and our surplus."

Aranha said he believed "no one except a Communist" favored repudiation of debts.

Let Gold Keep Coming In, Says Morgenthau

Restrictions Would Prove Disastrous, He Tells Wagner

The only safe thing to do about the huge inflow of gold from abroad is to let it alone, Secretary Morgenthau declared yesterday.

In a letter to Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, chairman of the Senate Banking Committee, he revealed that the Treasury had examined "scores of proposals directed toward possible action to redistribute the world's gold."

"The major conclusion we have drawn," he said, "is that any measure which would take the form of restrictions on the flow of gold into this country would have, at this time, detrimental effects upon our economy."

Wagner Asks 12 Questions

Wagner had submitted to Morgenthau 12 questions concerning the gold problem. The questions were prompted by discussions in the committee over Administration legislation to continue the power to devalue the dollar and the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund and concern among Senators over the fact that Treasury gold holdings have risen beyond the $15,000,000,000 mark.

Morgenthau's outstanding comments were:

Owing to the fact that foreigners in trouble centers are sending their money here for safe-keeping, there is little hope that the huge gold inflow will subside in the near future.

Current new gold production has increased to a point where mine output of the metal totals more than $1,000,000,000 a year. So long as war scares and the armament race continues, the United States will get a substantial share of this new gold.

About the best way to tackle the problem is to promote business recovery. That will stimulate purchase of foreign raw materials by American industries. The resultant decline in this country's favorable trade balance will reduce the gold inflow attributable to this factor.

Exchange of American securities for foreign gold admittedly is of "dubious advantage" to this country. But the "cure" would be worse still. Besides, the amount of securities exchanges for gold is relatively small—only about $1,200,000,000 in the last four years.

Restoration of the dollar's former gold value, cut to 59.06 per cent five years ago, would be disastrous, since the value of foreign currencies in terms of the dollar immediately would fall 70 per cent, meaning that this country's tariff wall would be lowered to that extent. Trade would be disrupted. Another depression might be precipitated as disastrous as that which existed from 1930 to 1933.

The same would be true, in lesser degree, of any reduction in the flat $35 per ounce price which the Treasury pays for gold. The consequences of an embargo against gold would be even more disastrous than a cut in the gold price.

Nothing would be gained by again permitting the public to have gold as money. This would again invite trouble from private domestic hoarders. Moreover, "unnecessary difficulties" would arise in case the gold content of the dollar should be cut still further—although the latter prospect is remote.

No Immediate Danger

The heavy gold inflow, by broadening the credit base, admittedly has depressed interest rates. The resultant huge volume of idle bank funds create a potential source of future injurious inflation, although there is no immediate danger of such a development.

Existing "breaks" on inflation possessed by the Federal Reserve Board admittedly are inadequate. Monetary authorities, as a result, "must be prepared, when and if the occasion arises, to apply appropriate supplementary control."

The danger that gold no longer will be used as a medium of international exchange "is so remote as not to merit serious consideration."

With conditions as unsettled as they are, prospect for any outflow of gold through repatriation by foreigners of their funds here is remote.

The Treasury is not paying too much for gold, either in terms of dollars or in goods or services. Neither is the fact that the price is fixed a factor in the amount of gold which has entered this country. The heavy inflow is due to mainly to superiority of this country's investment opportunities, the greater chance that funds will be safe here, and the stability of the dollar compared to foreign currencies.

The historic mechanism whereby a heavy capital inflow finally takes the form of goods and services instead of gold has operated badly in recent years, due to impediments.

Senator Frazier (Republican), of North Dakota, yesterday introduced a bill to abolish the Federal Reserve System, create a United States bank, and print $7,000,000,000 in notes. The latter would be a revolving fund for the bank from which to make loans to States and politican subdivisions for public improvements.

Walter H. Byron, Boston businessman, told the House Coinage Committee yesterday that business fears were due to world conditions rather than to the existence of Presidential power to devalue the dollar.

filiate." Only the union affected can relinquish any of its territory, he said.

Action Demanded

The council demanded that Congress take action on amendments to the Wagner labor relations act, which the C. I. O. is opposing. It insisted that further delay in holding hearings "will lead to serious misunderstandings."

"It is our belief," the council declared, "that an immediate hearing will tend to clarify the present situation and aid rather than injure current negotiations for an adjustment of existing differences.

"Further delay cannot be attributed to impartial desire for the adjustment of a serious situation, for it could only contribute to the advantage of one party to the controversy."

Unity Need Recognized

The one optimistic note in the council's announcement was its avowed willingness to "go to any reasonable length" to bring about labor unity and to put an end to the warfare between the rival labor organizations which, in some instances, seriously has disrupted business.

The council said it wanted President Roosevelt, who asked that peace negotiations be undertaken, to know that "it is in complete sympathy with his appeal and is ready to render every service possible toward the attainment of that objective consistent with the organic structure and form of the A. F. of L."

"It would aso," it said "have organized labor understand that it recognizes the imperative necessity for unity in our labor movement as well as for order in our industrial life."

Criticism Regretted

At the same time, the council expjressed regret that, during the negotiations, Lewis should have "found occasion not only to criticize the officials of the A. F. of L. and the executive council, but to indicate a procedure and manifest a determination that may make more difficult an adjustment of pending differences upon a mutually satisfactory basis."

"We hold," the council said, "that bitterness, projudice, name-calling, et cetera, cannot contribute anything to a fair and equitable adjustment of differences that divide the ranks of labor."

The council encouraged continuance of efforts by A. F. of L. unions to outdo the C. I. O. in organizing the unorganized. Peace negotiations, it said, "must not retard our efforts and those of our affiliates" in this direction as well as in "resisting any and all efforts to harm, weaken or destroy our organizations."

The question before the council was whether, in case the C. I. O. unions that left the A. F. of L. should come back, they merely would be restored their old charters or their expansion into new labor fields would be recognized.

Take Economy Lead, Senators Ask President

on silver legislation, and mimeographed copies were handed to reporters. He said uncertainty and hesitation impair recovery and "the country is entitled to a clear-cut and prompt determination of this vital issue."

The statement, made not without tongue-in-cheek allusions, such as a suggestion for an immediately balanced budget, followed a Congressional economy bloc drive for readjustment of business corporate taxes and 10 per cent slashes in spending.

Harrison recently has been cooperating with the Treasury in an effort to remove business tax "deterrents" and Byrd has engaged in repeated skirmishes with Eccles over their conflicting spending views.

Must Reduce Large Items

"In order to effect sufficient economy and reduce taxes Congress would have to reduce substantially all of the large items in the budget," Eccles warned.

"Not much economy could be effected in the regular establishments of the Government, which in the aggregate absorb only about one-tenth of the National budget. Such items as work relief projects, CCC camps and public works of all kinds, veterans' benefits, all farm payments, and national defense, some or all of these would have to be drastically curtailed.

"This would not be my program, but if, as would appear, it is the program of the majority, they should assume full responsibility for it and put it into effect without delay and without compromises for the benefit of any special groups."

The proposal came as Congress was breaking budget bounds on the farm front and log-rolling threatened between big city and farm blocs to force through both the deficiency relief appropriation asked by the President and millions for farm parity payments not recommended by him. Another fire was being built under the economy movement in the House Veterans Committee where a new veterans' pension bill will be considered today.

Tax Negotiations Proceeding

Although Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau reiterated yesterday that tax revision negotiations are proceeding "in an orderly way and according to schedule," Senate hopes of winning White House support for lower tax schedules have been dimming.

Commenting on the Eccles statement, Harrison said no one believes that the Federal budget can be completely balanced at this time.

"The expenditures are too large and the continuing deficits too great," said Harrison. "But the American people do believe that some approach should be started immediately by the Congress, acting in co-operation with the Executive, to balance the budget.

"In my opinion, that can best be done by reducing these large Government expenditures. Everyone appreciates, in view of the fiscal conditions of the Government, that there can be no reduction in revenues from taxes at this time. I know of no one who is advocating such a policy."

Byrd said members of Congress who have been working for retrenchment would welcome co-operation from the executive branch and "such leadership by the Administration would be a great step toward restoration of business confidence, necessary for our future progress."

As a first step for immediate economies, Byrd suggested that Congress cancel all lump-sum appropriations, and resume full control over all Federal expenditures. He said only 2 per cent of this year's $2,000,000,000 increase in spending is for national defense, and suggested an "analysis and survey" of recent increases. The approach to a balanced budget, he said, should be gradual, and a "diagnosis" should precede treatment.

"The time has come," the Virginian said, "for those who hold divergent views to sit around the table and by a combined executive and legislative leadership to adopt those measures necessary to bring a confidence to the business world to restore sound fiscal policies, to eliminate needless frictions and restraints, and to free the enterprise of a great people, who want jobs, not charity, work not taxes."

Byrd said he would "co-operate in the fullest measure in dealing with this crisis, so adequately described by Mr. Eccles today."

Special Charges the Same

The commission stated that compliance with the compulsory liability insurance act had caused a material increase in the cost of operating taxicabs. It added that sentiment expressed at the hearing by taxi drivers and religious and civic bodies was that earnings of drivers are "too low to provide a proper standard of living or to yield just compensation."

Members of the commission believe the only solution would be limtation of the number of taxicabs in operation. That now is considered by a House District sub-committee.

The additional charges, including the 10 cents for each passenger more than two, personal service and others, will remain as at present. The present rate and zone system has been in effect since 1935.

House Gets Billion Farm Bill; Effort to Kill Parity Item Fails

169,148 above the regular appropriation last year. The high total was recommended despite the fact that special loan, relief and rural rehabilitation items, for which Congress appropriated $175,000,000 last year, were left for deficiency bill consideration.

Among items decreased in the bill were appropriations for Bureau of Public Roads elimination of grade crossings, reduced $10,000,000, and for forest roads and trails, cut $2,000,000.

Originally Provided Last Year

The parity price payments, based on 1909-1914 purchasing power of farm products, were originally provided last year, but Congress did not heed the President's request for taxes to finance the $212,000,000 being currently paid out for this purpose.

The committee said the President's failure to include the item in the 1940 budget "is not believed to reflect executive disapproval of the item itself." It declared last year's appropriation "clearly indicated the legislative policy" and imposed on the committee a "duty" to recommend $250,000,000 more.

As House debate opened on the measure, Representative Cannon said "the woods are full of men who want to increase it" although it is already the largest agriculture appropriation bill in the history of Congress, and the first bill above budget estimates reported by the appropriations committee.

Cotton Subsidy Bill Postponed

Meanwhile, across the Capitol, the Senate postponed consideration of the $275,000,000 Smith cotton subsidy bill, opposed by the President as too costly. Senator Smith (Democrat), of South Carolina, consented to the postponement until next week in order to confer with House farm leaders and Secretary Wallaceon farm program objectives.

In its present form, the Smith bill applies only to cotton. It would pay up to 5 cents a pound to cotton farmers who agree not to seek Government loans and would permit farmers to repossess cotton on which they already have received 8 cents in Government loans, on payment of another 3 cents and promising to reduce their next crop by that amount.

Senators advocating aid for growers of other commodities, such as wheat, corn, tobacco and rice were ready with amendments to widely extend its application and possibly write parity price payments on all major commodities into the Smith bill.

Postponed along with the Smith measure was action on the George resolution placing the Senate on record against sales of America's 11,250,000-bale Government loan cotton abroad at below-cost figures.

HOLC Mortgagors To Ask Senators For Act Revision

Representatives of the Council of Home Owners' Loan Corporation Mortgagors announced yesterday they would appear at hearings of the Senate Banking and Currency Committee, April 18, to seek revisions in the HOLC act.

Mrs. Frank Goetz, vice chairman, and Mrs. Greene-Fogel, treasurer, said they had received word from Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, that he planned to arrange for their appearance.

The council, in co-operation with the Consolidated Home and Farm Owners Mortgage Committee, wants extension of the amortization period from 15 to 30 years, reduction of interest rates, the right to redeem homes already foreclosed, elimination of deficiency judgments, and provision of a two-year moratorium on payments, where the owner pays interest and taxes.

Leahy Urges Superdock For Battleships

Admiral Asks Congress To Build Unit, Let Democracies Use It

Construction of a huge dry-dock capable of repairing damaged foreign battleships was proposed by the Administration yesterday as another means of aiding the democracies in an European war.

Admiral William D. Leahy, Chief of Naval Operations, asked Congress to authorize the Navy to participate in the building of a graving dock at New York capable of handling the "ultimate" battleships which may be built here or abroad. He justified the $8,500,000 project on the "probability" that the United States will soon inaugurate construction of 45,000 ton battleships.

While the United States has not laid down any battleships of more than 35,000 tons, Leahy's letter to Congress indicated that the two dreadnaughts in next year's program would be 45,000 tons. Great Britain recently laid down 40,000 ton ships and Japan is reputed to be building even larger vessels.

$10,000,000 Added for Army

Meanwhile, the Senate Military Appropriations Subcommittee added more than $10,000,000 to the $499,000,000 Army supply bill, and prepared to put its recommendations before the full Appropriations Committee this morning. A two-year $16,000,000 plan to modernize Government arsenals was approved by the group and $6,000,000 for new tools and machinery for the plants was included in this year's bill.

Expansion of the number of reserve officers was provided in authorizing 54 additional R. O. T. C. units at colleges throughout the country. Nearly $2,000,000 was added for construction at National Guard camps, $1,500,000 for construction at Albrook Field, Canal Zone; $332,480 for modernizing 40 75 mm. guns, and $1,000,000 for aircraft research. The latter sum is for payment of construction costs of unsuccessful bidders in airplane design competitions.

Of importance to the air training program was the allowance of funds for additional flight surgeons, an item rejected by the House.

Developments of Day

Other developments:

Congress was told that a new deadly aerial bomb developed by Germany made Washington and Eastern seaboard cities "wide open to attack." Senator Lundeen (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota cited statements of the bomb's devasting effect on gas storage tanks by inventor Lester Barlow and other experts in asking for a Senate investigation of the danger.

The House Military Affairs Committee heard secret testimony from Brig. Gen. C. S. Ridley, Governor of the Panama Canal, as to the ability of the important waterway to withstand attack in war.

Attorney General Murphy revealed that the committee coordinating Government counter-espionage agencies had evidence that the activities of foreign agents was increasing in this country. He stated, however, that the new committee had developed facilities to meet the situation.

By unanimous consent the House passed a bill authorizing the deportation or exclusion of aliens who advocate fundamental changes in the American form of Government. Representative Dempsey (Democrat), of New Mexico, sponsor of the bill, said it would effectively curb Nazi, Fascist and Communist activities here.

Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson awarded a $185,750 contract to the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. to provide a gas mask assembly plant, capable of turning out gas masks at about $1.25 a piece.

Asks Private Funds

In recommending construction of a graving dock, Admiral Leahy asked that the Navy put up $3,500,000 and commercial interests $3,000,000. With the fleet usually maintained in the Pacific, he said, naval use alone would not justify the cost of another dock on this coast.

While four docks on the Atlantic coast are capable of taking the existing 35,000-ton battleships, prevalent in American, British and French navies, only one, at Norfolk, is fully prepared to receive a super-dreadnaught quickly, the Admiral declared. He called attention to the absence of graving dock facilities in New York to care for large ocean liners.

Referring to "unsettled conditions in Europe" as making the dock necessary, Leahy said:

"In case of a European war it is highly probable that the dockyards (in Europe) will be heavily bombed, and it would be desirable to have in New York Harbor a dock which can take not only the largest merchantmen but the largest foreign battleship."

Barlow Quoted

Senator Lundeen, in asking investigation of the effect of new "super-destructive" bombs on large gas and oil tanks in cities, declared Barlow had certain information as to their devastating results, which "because of the hostility of the War Department" he could not present there.

Barlow, a consultant of the Glenn Martin Aircraft Co., has been awarded a judgment of $600,000 in the Court of Claims, growing out of a dispute with the War Department over patent rights. He contends that Army and Navy officials have overlooked the danger of liquid oxygen bombs to gasoline storage tanks, and contends that the Nation's Capital could be destroyed because of four such tanks in the District.

Possemen Ready to Dynamite Wyoming 'Bad Man'

the ridge rocks yesterday after Durand kidnapped a ranch couple, Mr. and Mrs. Art Thornburg, and forced them to drive him to the mouth of Clarksfork canyon.

Durand broke out of the Cody jail last Thursday, while serving a term for game poaching. He shot and killed two peace officers that night.

No Firing Overnight

After Durand beat back the posse's efforts to reach Linabary and Galento last night, Sheriff Blackburn prohibited any attempt to advance as suicidal.

Holding their watch at the ridge base until late today, the posse men had noted no fire from Durand since late last night.

The advance to recover the posse men's bodies late today disclosed the escape of the poacher, who grimly labeled a "farewell" note to Sheriff Blackburn with the return address: "Undertaker's office."

Plane Drops Gas Bombs

While the mortars and howitzers were en route, Bill Monday, Cody Pilot, flew over the rock of the fugitive today, dropping gas bombs. Monday said he saw no sign of Durand.

Posse members could not confirm a report that Durand had taken a gas mask from a Cody war veteran Tuesday night, when he left a letter at a ranch house telling Blackburn he knew he "was done for."

In the letter, the hunted man suggested the sheriff "have my head mounted and hang it up in the courthouse for the sake of law and order."

Blackburn said there was a possibility Durand had fled up the ridge wall during the night, but added he believed the fugitive still was in the hideout, and was holding his fire to conserve ammunition for his five rifles, collected since he escaped from jail.

Plaintiff Jailed Because He Had Hangover

Justice Laws yesterday jailed James Cody, 40, until Monday to recover from the nervous condition which prevented Cody from going ahead with his $10,000 damage suit when it was called.

Cody sued Malcolm McConihe and Leonard Nicholson for injuries he claimed he suffered in a fall down unlighted stairs in an apartment at 1309 L street in 1935. The case was called Monday and Tuesday and each time was postponed. On Wednesday Cody was in Emergency Hospital near collapse from alcoholism.

Cody was extremely nervous when the case was called yesterday, and Justice Laws held Cody was in contempt for drinking himself into such a state when due to attend court.

"I don't want you to feel the court is being severe," he told the trembling man. "The court is trying to help you."

Cody thanked Justice Laws.

France Sets Up Offices Here To Check on Plane Production

Permanent offices have been established by the French Air Commission in the Normandy Building, it was learned yesterday.

Although officials were reluctant to discuss their activities—asserting pointblank: "We don't want any publicity and have had too much already"—they admitted French aircraft inspectors were stationed throughout the United States to examine planes destined for shipment to France.

In recent months nearly 615 light bombers, pursuit and training planes, costing approximately $65,000,000 have been bought in this country for French military purposes.

Machinery for the construction of American-type planes in France also has been obtained by the commission or its predecessor, the French Air Mission, it was said.

Government officials here appeared universally pleased at the report that French purchases of planes were rapidly going forward, but unanimously denied any participation in the activity by Federal agencies.

State Department authorities asserted: "The Government is definitely out of all these transactions."

They were seconded by Treasury officials who said a policy of "absolutely nix" had been laid down on extension of Federal credit to the French government.

FLASH!.. Carloads of this different Bonded Whiskey "going to town"!

Never before has an American bonded whiskey been aged the way Signet is. Only the finest whiskies of Scotland; the rare, costly wines of France; the proudest brands of Canada. Now you can enjoy the first American bonded whiskey of its kind! A new taste-thrill!

Age-old Method Americanized

Signet, like fine Scotch and Canadian Whiskies, is aged in aged wood. For four long years it sleeps in casks pre-mellowed, enriched by previous use in aging other fine Hiram Walker whiskies.

That's the secret of its light body... incredibly light for a bottled-in-bond whiskey!... its "non-woody" ripeness... its delicate flavor.

It took an ancient method—used for generations in our own distilleries in Canada and Scotland—to achieve this modern bonded whiskey. And... for the first time... here it is!

1. "Here's how," said the guest... and then ..."Here's something new. Delicious! What is it?"
2. "Signet," said the host. "First bonded whiskey so light-bodied and delicate. It's aged like fine wine.
3. "Signet is different because it's aged in fine old pre-mellowed casks—like Scotch is aged...
4. "... and the funny thing about it," continued the host, "it costs no more than any other good whiskey!"

Court Quashes 3 Indictments In Montgomery

Prosecutor Drops Charges Against Warthen, Mannar

Montgomery County Bureau of the Post, 8213 Clark Ave., Silver Spring, Md. Telephone SHepherd 4200.

Embezzlement indictments which have been hanging over Gerald Warthen, former assistant county building inspector, and Peyton M. Mannar, former manager of the Bethesda Liquor Dispensary, were nolle-prossed yesterday by State's Attorney Ben G. Wilkinson.

Wilkinson told Judges Stedman Prescott and Charles W. Woodward as he offered the nolle prosse in each case: "I could not find sufficient evidence to justify the State in trying this man."

The judges entered the nolle prosse in the case of Mannar, but held the case of Warthen until his attorney, State Senator Robert Peter, can be present to approve the verdict. Senator Peter is in Annapolis attending the session of the State Senate.

The State's attorney also entered a nolle prosse in the case of Joseph E. Rowan, of Takoma Park, whose conviction in Montgomery County Circuit Court on gaming statute charges was set aside by the Maryland Court of Appeals on the ground that wiretapping evidence was not conclusive since the State had not proved the identity of the voice.

The court fixed May 1 as the date for the trial of John E. Gray, former county building inspector, on charges of embezzlement.

Justice moved swiftly in the cases of three persons arrested on gaming charges in Bethesda Monday. Indictments charging them jointly and separate indictments charging them individually with offenses were returned by the grand jury, which recessed yesterday.

Those indicted were Joseph E. Hilleary, alleged "pick-up man" for a Washington numbers gang; Cora Kenney, colored, alleged to be the collection point for the numbers gang in Bethesda, and Randolph Brice, colored, alleged numbers runner. All three were arrested Monday at the Kenney woman's home in Bethesda.

Indictments alleging malfeasance in office through failure to keep proper records were returned against Peace Justice Charles Woodson, of Silver Spring, who has resigned.

Indictments alleging criminal assault upon a 13-year-old girl were returned against Luther Jarels, of Boyds, Md.

Jesse Paul Parker, colored, was indicted for attempted criminal assault on a white woman in Chevy Chase and for criminal assault on a colored maid in the same neighborhood. Parker pleaded not guilty to both indictments.

Others indicted by the grand jury are John Welford Payne, larceny of a $30 watch; Wendell Morris, colored, and Rufus Stockley, colored, larceny of clothing from a CCC camp; Jack Archie Scott, colored, larceny of automobile; Henry Porter, malicious destruction of property; David Robinson, colored, housebreaking and larceny; John Cook, colored, burglary and larceny; Howard Dorsey, colored, assault with intent to kill; Howard Dorsey, colored, carrying concealed weapon; John Lee Crouch, violation of the gambling statutes involving a pinball machine which paid off in cash; William Collins, colored, burglary; William H. Cloyd, bastardy; Vernon Dorsey and Willie Simms, both colored, housebreaking and larceny; Willie Simms, colored housebreaking and larceny; Stanley DePue, false pretenses; James Pride, colored, attempted burglary; Milford Wilson, bastardy.

The grand jury returned 23 indictments after examining 64 witnesses in 27 cases presented. The inquisitorial body approved the condition of county property, including the almshouse, the courthouse, the jail and both county buildings. George P. Henderson was foreman.

The original appeals docket is one of the smallest in the history of the court, with only 13 cases pending. Trial of criminal cases will begin March 30.

Get Vote Ruling

Takoma Park.—Civil service employes living in Maryland but carrying a voting residence in other States may register as voters in Maryland without injuring their civil service status, the Young Men's Democratic Club of Takoma Park has been informed by the United States Civil Service Commission.

Receipt of the ruling was announced by F. Byrne Austin, president of the club, at a public hearing at Annapolis Wednesday night over proposed charter amendments for the town of Takoma Park. The latter was signed by William C. Hull, executive assistant to the commissioners of the Civil Service Commission.

The proposed charter amendments, in addition to requiring town voters to be registered voters of the State, would have elections every two years instead of annually, and would require that two councilmen be residents of the fourth precinct, two residents of the sixth precinct, and one a resident of the ninth precinct in Montgomery County, and that the sixth councilman be a resident of the Prince Georges section of the town. No restriction would be placed on the mayor's residence, and all of the officials would be elected by the votes at large.

The present charter provision requires merely that at least one councilman be a resident of Prince Georges County and makes no provision for insuring representation on the council for each of the three Montgomery County precincts.

Health Fund Boost Refused

Upper Marlboro. — The Prince Georges County commissioners yesterday turned down the county health department's request for a $12,000 increase in its appropriation.

The increase had been urged by the State Health Department and was supported by the county Red Cross chapter and various civic groups. The additional funds would have been used to employ another sanitarian, two more nurses, an assistant health officer and another secretary.

The commissioners said funds were not available. The county's present allotment to the health department is $8,000. The State contributes $19,000.

Frame Dwelling Burns

Upper Marlboro.—A frame dwelling, owned by John Farrell, 50 yards from the courthouse here, was destroyed by fire yesterday. Firemen said an overheated stove was the probable cause.

Alexandrians Asked to Aid Postmaster

Householders Urged To Report Changes In House Numbers

The Washington Post Bureau, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Temple 3787

Postmaster J. Owen Lynch and postoffice workers yesterday asked householders in the city whose house numbers have recently been changed to advise the postoffice of their new numbers, to expedite the delivery of mail. They also were asked to notify business firms with which they deal, and magazines to which they subscribe of any change in their number.

A committee appointed by the city council recently changed the names of a number of streets, to eliminate duplication since annexation of suburbs, and also changed house numbers in several sections of the city. This situation has worked a hardship on letter carriers due to the failure of proper notice sent to the postoffice.

18 Planes Arrive, Middies to Start Training Course

Annapolis, Md., March 23 (AP).—Members of the graduating class at the Naval Academy looked forward today to a course of instruction on 18 Navy patrol planes which arrived here from the Norfolk air base.

The planes comprise Patrol Wing 5, led by Commander Virgil C. Griffin. Divided into two squadrons, they roared into an anchorage on the Severn River off the Academy about noon.

Beginning next week members of the senior class will be taken on training flights. They will be shown how air squadrons co-ordinate with surface fleets.

This course will continue until May 13, but on June 5 the planes again will be used for the training of second class midshipmen, who remain here during the summer while the first (senior) and third (sophomore) classes are on a summer practice cruise.

Planes have been used for similar training at the academy each spring and summer for several years.

NEPTUNE APPROACHES: The new Neptune Room in the Earle Theater Building will open on Tuesday, April 11. Not only will Neptune be a big spot (seating nearly 400), but its going to be as beautiful as a sea nymph's dream. Barry Barretto's nearly completed murals show an under-water wonderland with troops of fantastic tropical fish sailing to and fro amid aquatic plants. The "aquarium bar," it's rumored, will house a flock of our living finny friends. Lighting will be in transparent under-sea blues. Liquid melodies by Johnny de Leon and his Hawaiians. South Seas dances by Rita Lopez (see picture above).

The Heigh Ho tap room will probably be reopened in a couple of weeks,—by the Washington people who've been interested in it right along.

KURT IS KEEN: Among the curter and smarter caricaturists is Kurt, who's just set up headquarters in the Pall Mall Room. Kurt looks very Left Bank, has a picturesque Van Dyke beard that waggles when he talks, which is most of the time. He adeptly catches both the likeness and character of his subjects, using lithograph pencil and pastels.

RIVIERA PICTURE: Blonde Kitty Fuqua dancing with a new beau . . . Dr. and Mrs. Irving Brotman, she very chic in black and white print . . . Peggy Gibbons with brother Hank . . . Mr. and Mrs. Laird Dunlop, jr., asking Pete Macias to play their favorite, "Danny Boy" . . . Angelica Lloyd with Count Biondi.

Cynic in Caprice: No, she doesn't drink. But she gets plastered in meringue glacies.

DIETETICS: Warbler Eve Knight (King Cole Room) has a unique system of dieting. She fasts all day, but eats all the steaks she can get in the evening. Eve's dear friends are suggesting that perhaps the fact that she has to cook her own breakfast or go without has something to do with the daytime dieting.

Sad Recollection Department: What famous movie stars was missing for more than a week after the President's Birthday Balls. No, it wasn't Errol Flynn.

CAROLINA ACCENT: It isn't true—that rumor that Rainbow Room's Lyde Swygert is losing her Carolina accent. Lyde is not only one of the town's thriller warblers, but her Dixie drawl gives the touch perfect to "Good for Nothin'." Lyde's heroine is Helen Forrest, who used to sing at Madrillon and is now with Artie Shaw.

Steak on the bias: "The prime steaks served in the Shoreham Blue Room are so thick that they are sliced at a 45-degree angle." Excerpt from a billet doux from Shoreham's publicist, Cynthia Powell.

Mr. Russell Conn, manager of the Ambassador Hotel, where Hi Hat is a favorite spot

Rita Lopez, who will dance in the new Neptune Room

Short'nin' Bread: Angie Rodeate and the Hi Hat's Red Jackets are getting up a dramatic version of "Short'nin' Bread." Angie will play the mamma and "Chuck" Palmer the kid who steals the short'nin' bread.

PIRATICAL PUZZLE: A bulletin from the ever-intriguing Capt. Don Dickerman informs us that one of his buccaneers is playing a "terrapatch." That one has us stopped. We'll have to go right over to the Pirates' Den and find out what a "terrapatch" is and let you know. Bet it's first cousin to a ukulele.

AMBITIOUS IRWIN: Though Irwin Deveron (Paul Kain's Metronome Room Orchestra) is one of the smartest piano players in this territory, he's looking forward to new fields—plans to branch out into the composing and arranging end of the music business. Since Irwin's only 22 now, he has plenty of time to go places.

DEVRON

Brown Derby Echo: So I called up this radio announcer. And his secretary said, "Mr. So-and-so can't be disturbed. He's listening to himself."

THIRTL YEARS: That big and happy big party crowding the Bamboo Gardens at luncheon time the other day was in honor of Mrs. Ida L. Meade, who had just completed 30 years of employment with the telephone company.

Our New York operative tells us that Dale Sherman, who delighted patrons of the Shar-Zad Room so much a cople of months ago, is now singing with Nat Brandywynne's orchestra at the Casino-on-the-Park of the Essex House.

BRUNETTES PREFERRED: There's a reason why all of those luscious Frances Allis dancers at the Lotus are brunettes. Miss Ardath James, manager of the troupe, tells us that she selected brunettes because she thinks that the dancing of dark-eyed girls has "that certain something."

What next? What next! The Countess de Bournet, Mayfair's remarkable psychiatrist, is studying theology.

LUBINA VS. ST. DENIS: Remember St. Denis, the famous dancer? Well, Anna Lubina, Troika's fiery new singer, is the exact image of the St. Denis as she was when she introduced classic oriental dancing too long ago.

For Giggles in Uptown: Just get Manager Irving to tell you some of his adventures in Baltimore night clubs.

FRANCES SINGS: Discovery! Frances Chapman, hostess at the Anchor Room, has a sweet, husky "blues" voice, is singing occasionally with Matt Windsor's accompaniment. But she's so bashful that she goes away over in a dim corner to warble. "I'm a-skeered of that spotlight," says Frances.

World's Fair House to Be Built Here

'Home of Tomorrow' Will Be Replica Of N. Y. Structure

A New York World's Fair demonstration "Home of Tomorrow" will be constructed in Washington, according to an announcement yesterday by C. Stanley Taylor, director of Shelter Exhibits and in charge of the Home Building Center of the fair, who is visiting here.

The World's Fair representative yesterday formally completed arrangements by visiting the site of the exhibit home at/nearby Northwood Park, Md., developed by Garden Homes, Inc., which has been appointed to duplicate exclusively in Washington a faithful replica from the "Town of Tomorrow," a feature of the New York exposition containing 15 examples of the finest home construction.

At Northwood Park, Taylor congratulated James Wilson, president of Garden Homes, Inc., for making available to residents and visitors of Washington and the surrounding area "an authentic preview of this important phase of the World's Fair."

Taylor said the movement was not an attempt to educate the public in planning of homes but to inform it of dependable materials and methods available in today's markets. Because of the extent to which gas will be utilized in the demonstration project on the New York Fair grounds, as well as here, the Washington Gas Light Co. is included among local agencies serving in consultation.

The local project bears the indorsement of the New York World's Fair Association, whose president, Grover Whalen, has accepted the honorary chairmanship of an advisory committee assisting the Washington program. This committee will include Charles B. Dulcan, president and general manager of the Hecht Co., Fred L. Lutes, cashier of the Suburban National Bank, Odorian W. Roby, Montgomery County Commissioner, and Taylor.

New England Fire Hazard Alarms U. S.

Forest Service Fears For Timber Razed By Fall Hurricane

United States Forest Service officials yesterday described the New England States that were swept by the hurricane last September as potential tinder boxes.

FLEMING

Trees uprooted by the wind cover more than 15,000,000 acres and all of this timber is drying out with the approach of spring when fire hazards are tremendous even in normal times, it was stated.

The service views the situation with such alarm that it is sending Hugh N. Fleming, forest fire prevention specialist, to New England to begin an educational drive to acquaint people with the hazards in the fallen timber.

Foresters are disturbed, particularly, because the tourist season opens in early summer in New England and visitors are unfamiliar with the potential danger in the fallen trees.

Since October, enrollees from 40 CCC camps and 12,000 WPA workers have been clearing the ground. But millions of acres still are covered by the fallen timber. A $5,000,000 deficiency appropriation from Congress will be used, possibly, to establish 26 50-men camps to combat fire hazards and speed work of clearing the area.

A tentative plan is to man these camps with graduates from the CCC camps. Supervisory forces will be employed under civil service regulations. Day laborers will be hired as such. The new funds will enable the work to be extended into areas hitherto untouched.

Danger, it was said, will increase with the coming of next fall and the spring of 1940. "Foresters are prepared to use every means possible to save towns and villages which are located near serious fire hazard areas and which would be threatened with loss of property and human lives in the event of a serious conflagration," the foresters stated.

Dr. Ballou, told of the news yesterday, said he had expected his son would go to Maine. "He has been there practically every summer in his life," he said. Dr. Ballou indicated he would talk with Charles Stewart's father before deciding what to do.

Two Pedestrians Hurt in Traffic

Two pedestrians were injured, one seriously, yesterday when struck crossing streets.

Mrs. Grace Capone, 52, of 6519 Seventh place northwest, suffered a possible skull fracture when she was knocked unconscious by a street car in the 6500 block Georgia avenue northwest. After preliminary examination at Walter Reed, Mrs. Capone was transferred to Emergency Hospital.

Police said Lonnie Beach, 32, of 926 Madison street northwest, was the operator of the street car.

The second pedestrian victim was Maurice Jacobson, 70, of 1824 Belmont road northwest, who was struck at Seventeenth street and Pennsylvania avenue northwest. Taken to Emergency Hospital he was treated for injuries to his face and legs. His condition was not serious.

Stinson Bought Dress for Wife's Nurse, Shop Owner Testifies in Annulment Suit

The close attention inspired by previous spicy testimony in the suit of the wealthy, 54-year-old Mrs. Pepita Crounse Stinson to annul her marriage to Joseph Whitlaw Stinson, 56, gave way to nodding and daydreaming yesterday when lawyers droned all day, reading depositions given by out-of-town witnesses.

Mrs. Stinson claims the former State Department lawyer drugged her and married her for her money. He has denied it.

Wyman Wadleigh, town clerk of Bar Harbor, Me., said in a deposition read yesterday, that he attended the wedding and that he noticed nothing unusual about Mrs. Stinson's behavior. She claims she did not know what was going on. Mr. Wadleigh said she was helped into an automobile after the ceremony.

Robert Taylor Bateman, manager of a Bar Harbor hotel, said the Stinsons and Miss Jessica Shoemaker, Mrs. Stinson's nurse, remained eight days at his hotel and that Mrs. Stinson kept to her room most of the time.

Mrs. A. G. Goodrich, who runs a Bar Harbor dress shop, told how Mrs. Stinson bought clothes at the shop and that Mrs. Stinson came there to change to travelling clothes on her wedding day. Stinson bought an evening dress for Miss Shoemaker, Mrs. Goodrich said, and had it shipped to him in Washington, in care of an attorney. Mrs. Stinson has charged Miss Shoemaker with plotting with Stinson to dupe her into the marriage. The nurse is due to tell her side of the story next Tuesday.

Dr. A. L. Anderson, of New York, testified that he examined Mrs. Stinson and she appeared to have been "drugged heavily." Besides that, said Dr. Anderson, the plump poetess "talked childishly."

Roosevelt Calls Waterways Defense Need

Rivers and Harbors Congress Here Gets President's Message

By the Associated Press.

President Roosevelt told the National Rivers and Harbors Congress yesterday that proper development of waterways was essential to the safety and defense of the Nation."

Former Representative W. J. Driver, of Arkansas, president of the congress, read the message from the President at the luncheon meeting of the organization, in which the President credited to the Rivers and Harbors Congress "in no small measure" the great strides we have made during the past six years in the effective development of our waterways and the solution of flood-control problems."

Chairman Whittington (Democrat), of Mississippi, of the House Flood Control Committee, told delegates that projects authorized by past sessions of Congress were imperatively needed and added:

"It is for the Senators and Representatives to see that appropriations are made to provide for the construction of projects authorized."

Strikes at "Hollow Bombast"

He said flood control authorizations under the 1936 and 1938 acts contemplated expenditure of $148,000,000 annually, in addition to autorizations for the Lower Mississippi Valley and that the Bureau of the Budget had recommended appropriation of but $110,000,000 for the next fiscal year. The bureau recommended spending $37,000,000 in the lower valley next year.

Whittington said officials who raised the issue of States' rights against the flood-control program were guilty of "hollow bombast."

"The spokesman for States' rights is Gov. George D. Aiken of Vermont," Whittington said.

The Congress is made up of flood control and river and harbor improvement enthusiasts of every section of the country. Its function is to assist States, counties and cities in obtaining passage of Federal legislation authorizing control and harbor works.

Gov. Winship Speaks

Gov. Blanton Winship of Puerto Rico told the congress improvement of the island's seaports and maritime facilities were "of vital importance to the 1,800,000 American citizens resident there."

Winship said Puerto Rico was the place "where the Americas meet," because of its strategic location almost midway between New York and the Panama Canal.

Chairman Harcourt A. Morgan of the Tennessee Valley Authority contended before the congress that controversy over the sale of TVA's electricity had largely obscured from public attention the TVA's navigation, flood control and conservation program.

"The isolation of this narrow issue," Morgan said, "had distorted the perspective in which this project should be viewed. Essentially, the Tennessee Valley Authority was established to aid in controlling, conserving and utilizing the water resources of an entire region."

Goldsborough Is Fined $5 On 45-Mile-an-Hour Charge

Representative T. Alan Goldsborough, whose appointment to the bench of the District Court of Appeals has been approved, was dealt with "just as any other person" by Traffic Court Judge John P. McMahon yesterday and fined $5 on a speeding charge.

The future judge pleaded not guilty, when he appeared in court accused of speeding 45 miles in a 30-mile zone on Benning road northeast. He had been arrested March 14 by Motorcycle Policeman Richard T. Meyer.

Goldsborough testified he did not know whether he was going more than 30 miles an hour or not. "But I can say I wasn't going 45 or even 40," he declared.

The policeman testified that the representative passed three other cars, which the defendant admitted "may have happened."

The defense attorney brought out that Goldsborough was on his way to his office. Judge McMahon asked concerning this point: "Is there any question in this case with regard to alleged Congressional immunity?"

The attorney said there was not.

In passing sentence, Judge McMahon said:

"I'm sorry to see the judge here, but I have to deal with him just as with any other person."

Murphy Offers To Publish FBI Bund Report

Dies

The Post last night, "I didn't have the slightest intention of criticizing the Department or the Attorney General. I offered the resolution because there is so much interest in the extent of Nazi activities. The resolution comes from me alone—the committee has nothing to do with it."

Nevertheless, the surprise action of the chairman tore the committee apart as three of its five Democratic members pointed out that in the public mind Dies' move would be interpreted as having full committee backing.

The three members, Representatives Healey, of Massachusetts; Dempsey, of New Mexico, and Voorhis, of California, emphatically said they disapproved the resolution, had nothing to do with its origin and did not know it was going to be introduced.

Representative Dempsey, who had been explicitly named by the committee to handle relations with the Department of Justice, declared with some heat that "the committee hasn't had a meeting in a month, and I certainly think one ought to be called tomorrow."

Visibly angered by the fact Dies had offered the resolution without consulting them, Healey and Dempsey asserted the committee had full access to the department's study of the Nazis and, in fact, had made use of it in the Dies report. They agreed the department had been "very co-operative."

At a loss to explain the Dies resolution, officials of the Justice Department confirmed last night that the Dies committee had access to the Bund investigation report and could have published it merely by making the request to the Attorney General.

Chairman Smith, of the Rules Committee, to which the Dies resolution was referred, observed yesterday, "I haven't read the resolution yet, but I hope it was not offered for publicity purposes. Furthermore, I wonder whether there might not be some danger of giving information to the Nazis if the Department of Justice report is made public."

Dies complained bitterly last year that his committee had received no help in its investigations from the Department of Justice or any other department.

Gov. Stark Asks Legislature For Kansas City Police Control

Pendergast Camp Hurls Charge Of Hitlerism; Executive Says He Seeks Removal of Political Shackles

By the Associated Press.

Jefferson City, Mo., March 23.—Gov. Lloyd C. Stark reached through the Legislature for control of Kansas City's politically shackled police department today and brought shouts of "Hitlerism" from the enemy camp of "boss" Tom Pendergast.

In a surprise personal appearance, Stark urged the Legislature—studded with Pendergast's friends—to lift the police from the control of "political bosses and ward leaders" and place the department under a bipartisan State board of four members to be appointed by the Governor.

"Your plain duty is to emancipate the police department, to free it from political slavery," Stark said while Pendergast-affiliated legislators sat in silence.

"Hitler Government"

"Hitler government," said the Kansas City organization's city manager, H. F. McElroy, who heretofore all but ignored the Governor's frequent raps at his administration. "This is the United States," McElroy snapped. "We believe in home rule. I believe the people of Kansas City are entitled to exactly the kind of rule they want, whether by Kansas City, Jefferson City, Berlin, Moscow or Warsaw."

At the Capitol a veteran Kansas City State Senator, T. E. Casey, stalked from the House of Representatives after Stark's speech muttering, "Hitlerism. Hitlerism and just dirty, plain politics."

Representative William H. Lafferty of Kansas City, Democratic caucus chairman, commented "the speech was designed to further Stark's own political ambition. It is a well known fact that he wants to be United States Senator in 1940 and that he hasn't a chance."

Opposition Surprised

The Senate seat which will be open in 1940 is now held by a Pendergast man, Harry S. Truman.

Stark caught the Pendergast forces in complete surprise with his blistering message—latest offensive in his war on what he termed Kansas City's "alliance of politics and crime."

"The police department of Kansas City . . . has become a signal and notorious failure," he said. "As a police department it has virtually ceased to function . . . It has become the instrumentality of politicians . . ."

Mrs. Mary Rowe Funeral Today

Funeral services for Mrs. Mary Elizabeth Lowe 82, for 16 years a resident of this city, will be held at 10 a. m. today at her home, 2700 Rodman road northwest, with burial in Oak Hill Cemetery. She died Wednesday in Emergency Hospital after an 18-day illness.

Born in Hartford, Vt., she was active in the Sunshine Club here and aided innumerable charities.

Besides her husband, Harry Lowe, she is survived by a sister, Mrs. Lucy Hubbard Hurlburt, of Worcester, Mass., and several nephews and nieces.

Traffic Delayed 2 Hours on Bridge As Boom Collapses

Rush-hour traffic was tied up for two hours on the Pennsylvania Avenue Bridge yesterday morning when a boom from a piledriver working on the new bridge broke from its supports and crashed against the guard railing.

The force of the blow tore the railing loose and lodged the boom in a position that it blocked half of the span. Police detoured eastbound traffic over the Anacostia Bridge until arrangements could be made for one-way traffic over the unblocked portion of the bridge.

This Mother Asks Short and Simple Name for Child

A short and simple name is the kind Mrs. Jerome C. Scooler, 4812 Forty-third place northwest, would like. The Post to find for the baby she is expecting today.

Her request was received just as The Post's library forwarded a list of more than 400 "fancy" names to Mrs. Del H. Freitag, 2747 Woodley place, who wanted nothing plain for her first born.

Because Mrs. Scooler had to go to Garfield Hospital soon after she telephoned, the baby may arrive before the second list is compiled—but Mrs. Scooler said there'd be no naming until the research was completed.

"I read about Mrs. Freitag," she said, "and need the same sort of help."

Twentieth Century-Fox picturization of the story by Frances Hodgson Burnett, adapted to the screen by Ethel Hill and Walter Ferris, starring Shirley Temple, with Richard Greene, Anita Louise, Ian Hunter, Cesar Romero, Arthur Treacher, Mary Nash, Sybil Jason, Miles Mander, Marcia Mae Jones, Beryl Mercer, Clyde Cook, Holmes Herbert, Kenneth Hunter and Lionel Braham. "Fantasy" by Walter Bullock and Samuel Prokrass; ballet staged by Ernest Belcher. Directed by Walter Lang. Previewed Tuesday, March 21. At Loew's Palace Theater.

In an early-week enthusiasm over the preview screening of this subject, we committed ourself to the opinion that "The Little Princess" is Shirley Temple's best picture to date. We still adhere to that belief.

"The Little Princess" has been adapted from the Frances Hodgson Burnett novel, with fine fidelity to the original text and movement of the story, by Ethel Hill and Walter Ferris. These collaborators, to be sure, have included in their film treatment of the narrative practically all of the specious qualities of Mrs. Burnett's original creation, but that reacts rather more favorably than otherwise to the final appeal of the film in the view of audiences that will range—with equal pleasure to themselves—from the kindergarten age to those living on borrowed time.

BELL

The story of "The Little Princess" is too well known to need any very extended recapitulation here. It concerns the heart-breaking experiences of Sara Crewe daughter of a captain in the British army who leaves his only child in Miss Minchin's hyper-exclusive seminary while he goes to South Africa to teach the Boers a lesson. His small daughter at the time of his departure is surrounded by all of the luxuries to which the child of a man of wealth might be entitled in the eyes of a headmistress whose estimate of social values is predicated solely upon the expansiveness of the parental bank account. When it is reported that Capt. Crewe had been killed in the siege of Mafeking and has left his precocious daughter penniless Sara is reduced from the rank of most opulent student to that of slavey in the kitchens of Miss Minchin's fabulously swanky establishment.

Having telepathic rendezvous with her father and sure that he has not been killed Sara institutes a constant search of the hospitals to which the wounded are being returned to London from the Transvaal. She finally discovers her daddy, his mind a blank from the hardships and head-wound he has endured, and the whole sentimental fable comes out as it should.

In the meantime, there have been introduced sequences that can have no defense from the viewpoint of dramatic integrity — except that Shirley Temple is their chief protagonist. Her first musical number, with Arthur Treacher, is interjected into the action without rhyme or reason. It is a pleasing number, but it is completely foreign to the spirit and the content of the scene in which it is introduced. After that, the few and brief musical interpolations are wholly logical and justifiable.

A Bit of Pure Fantasy

While it may be said to interrupt the orderly progress of the dramatic recital with which "The Little Princess" principally concerns itself, the dream sequence, involving the fanfare of trumpets, the graceful exercises of an accomplished ballet corps and all of the other concomitants of pure fantasy, is one of the most richly beautiful sequences in the picture. I am told that it cost $150,000 to produce. If that is so, I still am of the opinion that it was worth it.

"The Little Princess' gains much from the superb quality of its Technicolor photography. It has come to be the custom to say that each Technicolor picture is better than the last. That, in this case, seems to be eminently true. The gentle tints of "The Little Princess" are such that they cannot fail to elicit the warmest approbation of all those who appreciate artistry at the highest point so far reflected on the silver sheet.

There is, of course, one aspect of the picture that strikes a jarring note. That is the attempt to make the prodigious Miss Temple, with her round face and plump little body, serve as the symbol of persecution and the victim of deprivation that verges close to the borders of starvation. Miss Temple encounters a major hazard when she undertakes the anomalous task of looking emaciated. She is the best fed "starving Armenian" of whom I am aware.

Distinguished Adult Support

But reverting to the general excellence of this vehicle for the talents of the four-year box-office champion of the world, it may be said that never before has Shirley had such admirable adult support as in this subject. Richard Greene and Anita Louise contribute an intermittent, but entirely adequate love interest; Ian Hunter is splendid in the role of the military father; Arthur Treacher, once more, is the diminutive Temple's constant "friend-in-need" and Cesar Romero is valuable as an East Indian servitor who does much to appease the anguish of a small child in a desperate situation. Little Sybil Jason, as a Cockney kitchen girl, crowds Shirley close for first honors in the scences in which they appear together. Mary Nash is the acidulous Miss Minchin who manages to heap so much of trouble and sorrow on the shoulders of one of her charges when it appears that the family fortune has evaporated.

There are many others who do much to make "The Little Princess" a worthy addition to the cinema's finer exhibits. They include, Beryl Mercer, as Queen Victoria; Holmes Herbert, as a doctor, appearing briefly; Marcia Mae Jones, a close rival of Bonita Granville's, as the screen's most obnoxious little "cat"; Miles Mander, as a relenting Lord Wickham, and many more.

To sum the matter up, "The Little Princess" appeals to this department as a film play that has a rightful place among the royalty of the celluloids.

The foremost short subject, supplementing "The Little Princess" on the Palace screen this week, is Pete Smith's inimitable "Heroes at Leisure." The new issue of the "News of the Day" places on view the important world events of the past week. No one needs to be told that they really are important.

So sure is Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, of the wide public appeal that will be exerted by "Love Affair," co-starring Irene Dunne and Charles Boyer, with Mme. Maria Openskaya leading the support, that he has put a back-breaking schedule in effect for tomorrow. Doors at Keith's will open tomorrow at 9:30 a. m., with the first showing of the feature down for 10. In all, "Love Affair" will be run off seven times during the day. That is a great many times, the usual custom in such circumstances being what it is.

Children of the Behtesda-Chevy Chase area will be treated to their first Easter egg hunt on Saturday moring, April 8, at 10 o'clock. The event will be sponsored by W. P. Allen, publisher of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Tribune and Sidney B. Lust's Boro Theater, and will be held on the grounds adjacent to the theater on Wisconsin avenue. One thousand eggs, boiled and dyed by the women of the community and contributed by the Chestnut Farms Dairy, will be hidden. Some of them will be wrapped in cellophane. These will be prize eggs, entailing cash awards ranging from 5 cents to $1. Radio, with Art Brown, of WOL, presiding; a 100-piece band, a Punch and Judy show and Ken H. Sheelor's magic will add variety to the entertainment.

"Cardinal Richelieu," starring George Arliss, has been added to the current week's bill at the Little Theater. Prompted by the recent election of a new Pope in Rome, the Little went on an intensive search for a satisfactory print of the Arliss picture. They finally found one.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, March 23.

LIBERTY: Ralph Whitehead, head of the American Federation of Actors, who promulgated a rule that no member-actor shall tell any WPA gags—on pain of fine or suspension—and who then eliminated the suspension element from the penalty, will make his reversal complete . . . The ruling will be eliminated entirely, to remove all criticism of censorship . . . When Mr. Whitehead illustrated the type of jokes he meant he asked the reporter's name . . . "Miller," was the reply. "Joe Miller."

NUDITY: Although the World's Fair has announced that it will not permit Sally Rand to display her fan dance there, the officials have sanctioned a new exhibit, to be staged by Georgie Hale . . . The exhibit will have the most come-on name in the history of nudity displays. It will be called "Adam and Eve" . . . And part of Mr. Hale's financial backing will come from the fair itself.

DEFEAT: The State Department soon will take action in the case of the American ship, captained by Commander Riis, which was grabbed by the Nazis while the vessel was docked in a German port . . . The reports did not detail the full story . . . That boat will be used by the Nazis as a training ship . . . And Commander Riis boasts of an interesting Russian background. He was an attache in Petrograd during the Russian revolution . . . He was so popular there that he was made an honorary commissar—and his named changed to Maxim Galensky . . . In these early revolutionary days his doorman—to whom he taught English—was Troyanvsky, who became Ambassador to America.

TRIUMPH: Monday night, at the Rainbow Room, the judges who participated in the contests there departed without realizing how strange their decisions had been . . . As the first prize waltzer, they selected a young man who proved to be David Rockefeller, youngest son of John D. Rockefeller, jr., . . . A prize for the prettiest and most attractively gowned girl was awarded to Jane Muhfeld, of Scarsdale . . . the only one in the room who could not see that Miss Muhfeld really was the prettiest and most attractively gowned, was the winner herself. She's blind.

CHAPTER: Walter Wanger, who produced the anti-Fascist movie, "Blockade," yesterday registered "Mein Kampf" as a movie title . . . News-Week, which had arranged to have Hitler's photo as a front cover for its next issue, switched to a photo of W. O. Douglas, the new Supreme Court justice. 50,000 covers of the Hitler picture already had been printed—and so were scrapped . . . Tony Galento and his manager, Joe Jacobs, who will appear at Loew's State have joined the American Federation of Actors. Tony will have eight dummies of Joe Louis onstage and will punch them during the show . . . Gloria Swanson will appear in a show at the World's Fair . . . Enzo Fiermonte will return to America in two weeks.

ACHIEVEMENT: All the photos from Nassau featured Brenda Frazier, the debutante, being escorted by Billy Livingston, who was ever at her side . . . Mr. Livingston is having his reward . . . Now that Brenda has received movie offers, he is being screen-tested this week.

ART: Salvadore Dali, the surrealist who made the front pages last week by leaping through a Fifth avene department store window because his display had been changed, visited the Coq Rouge and made some pencil notations on the tablecloth . . . "Save that tablecloth," the proprietor instructed the waiter. "Dali's paintings are being exhibited this week and we might have something valuable" . . . The tablecloth was preserved and the cafe proprietor was extremely puzzled by Dali's ultra-surrealist sketches, thus preserved on linen . . . He was puzzled, that is—until a customer explained that the mysterioue lines merely were four games of tick-tack-toe.

ENTERPRISE: Decca soon will issue two unusual recordings. The records will be those of Civil War songs—the first containing Northern songs and the other Southern songs . . . The songs were selected by the man who has written the introductions for them—Carl Carmer, author of the best-sellers, "Stars Fell on Alabama" and "Listen for a Lonesome Drum."

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, March 23 (I.N.S.). When Ronald Colman asked for the world with a fence around it to play Ransome in "The Rains Came" we thought it was because he had that other best seller, "Rebecca," up his sleeve—but now that is cold, too. Instead, the aloof Englishman's next studio address will be the Paramount lot, where he is scheduled to star in the remake of "The Light That Failed," Rudyard Kipling's famous story of the blind hero. Years ago this was one of Para's biggest money-makers, with Percy Marmont in the featured role.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I don't know whether the "Rebecca" deal chilled because of Colman's high salary demands or because Bill Wellman, who will direct the Paramount picture, was quicker on the trigger than the David Selznick office. Bill went directly to Colman with the excellent script of "The Light That Failed," okayed by Kipling before his death, when Arthur Hornblow took it to him to read. Ronnie was so interested that he promised to report for work no later than June 1.

Joan Crawford left today for New York, but don't let that fool you. She is not going to Brazil. She will be back here in a week to co-star with Norma Shearer in "The Women." After testing several of our important stars Louis B. Mayer and Hunt Stromberg decided to let Joan have her way and play "Crystal," the home-wrecker—the role created by Betty Lawford on the stage. I can't understand why all these gals are battling for that particular role, but with no male star it's important to get big femme names.

Don't say that Warners aren't playing the George Brent-Bette Davis romance up to a fare-thee-well. Today George was rushed into "The Old Maid" with Bette and Miriam Hopkins, thus upsetting a couple of applecarts. It means that Humphrey Bogart, originally scheduled for the part, will be out and Brent will have to be hustled through the picture in order to report on time to Twentieth Century-Fox for "The Rains Came." This is no reflection on Humphrey, who is a swell actor. But he's a happily married gent with no romantic angles involved in casting him opposite Bette, as there are with Brent. Besides, Hal Wallis has another job for Humphrey.

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt isn't going to run the risk of being late to the "Wuthering Heights" preview tomorrow night at Warner Brothers. She will dine early with Frances and Sam Goldwyn, arriving at the theater by 8:15 o'clock so that she may see the stars as they come to the theater and the assemblage of fans who never miss one of these gala nights. As a working newspaper woman with a column to write, our First Lady wants to get all the color of her first Hollywood preview, and you can't cover all the details unless you are on the job early.

The Government investigation into the recent spectacular air crashes when important foreign officials were aboard, looks like a screen idea to Sam Goldwyn. Dreadful to think that our country is so infested with foreign spies and meddlers that sabotage is the secret back of the accidents. But it is dramatic material, to say the least, and that is probably why Sam is calling his air thriller "Sabotage." The Douglas Aircraft plant here will be the location of his movie and he will bring in Donald Douglas, the late Jerry Vultee and W. E. Boeing, all of whom have been leaders in the manufacture of planes. Gary Cooper and Joel McCrea are supposed to be teamed—but when, we ask—with all the other things lined up for Gary?

A line or two: Peggy Fears is madder than a wet hen because somebody printed she was getting $600 a week for her Club Versailles engagement when La Peggy says she's getting a thousand . . . The hottest discovery in town (with the possible exception of Geraldine Fitzgerald) is Lorraine Day, whom Joe Von Sternberg columbused for "Sergeant Madden." She was on the Twentieth Century-Fox lot to test for "Fern" in "The Rains Came" and she's young and pretty enough to be perfect in the part . . . come Sunday and all the tennis addicts, Chaplin, Kay Francis, the Ronald Colmans, Herbert Marshall and Lee Russell will be on hand at the Los Angeles Tennis Club for the whooper-dooper "doubles" between Don Budge, Fred Perry, Ellsworth Vines and Keith Gledhill . . . Elizabeth Bergner's new picture, "Stolen Life,' was shipped over here for Paramount release, but it is so long they had to send it home for cutting. Also I hear they gave it a big build-up for the opening in Prague but had to withdraw the picture. Bergner was one of the first stars blacklisted by the Nazis.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Judith Allen, former bride of Jack Doyle, and Billy Gordon are an item; Randy Scott sipping broth at the Derby after parting with his favorite wisdom tooth; Fred Astaire was his luncheon companion; Errol Flynn arrived intact at 11 o'clock per schedule this morning and now the studio has a bodyguard to see that he stays here until Thursday; Jack Pepper (Ginger Roger's first husband) dining out with an unknown brunette beauty; Countess di Frasso and the Princess Kapurthala chatting with Virginia Cherrill—oh pardon me—the Countess of Jersey; Bobby Breen helped sister Sallie and her husband welcome a 7-pound boy today; Dr. Lawrence Spangold is remodeling his house near the Riviera Country Club for Sigrid Gurie, who weds him the day he is free; Warner Baxter is asking for eight months' leave of absence so he can go on a long holiday and forget the movies, horse races, etc.; we're looking for renewed rumors of a romance between Sonja Henie and her skating partner (on tour), Stewart Rayburn, when he reaches here to go into her picture; Clark Gable's first picture in the new house is an etching which Lionel Barrymore made and presented to him; Barbara Read and Virginia Bruce's brother, Donald Briggs, a-night clubbing.

That's all for today, see you tomorrow!

Hollywood Is Wherever Its People Choose to Roam

Spreading across half the face of the globe, Hollywood this week has more film companies working outside the movie capital than it has in the sound stages.

From the High Sierras to the Alps, picture troupes are at work on the films that are scheduled to reach the screens of the world during the early months of 1939.

One of the farthest distant from Hollywood is a camera crew now waiting for rain in Paris to film scenes for Claudette Colbert's newest comedy, "Midnight." For the first time in years there has been no rain in Paris this November—and the crew is still waiting.

Another strange assignment has gone to a Paramount crew in New York, where scenes are being filmed in the famous El Morroco night club for the Madeleine Carroll-Fred MacMurray picture, "Cafe Society." The crew has to wait until 4 a. m. to work, because the regular patrons usually linger until then.

At Kansas City, a crew photographed many scenes for Bob Burns' new picture, "I'm From Missouri," which has the American Royal Livestock Show in Kansas City for one of its principal backgrounds.

The Alps have been bodily "transported" to a spot within 50 miles of Hollywood, where Bob Hope, Martha Raye, Andy Devine and Alan Mowbray are working in exterior scenes for "Never Say Die," which has an Alpine background. Mountainous crags in the Chatsworth section near Hollywood are an exact counterpart of the Alps—although, strangely enough, another spot a few miles distant is exactly like northern India. It is this area that is being used now to film "Gunga Din."

Six hundred miles to the north, Cecil B. De Mille is filming his railroad epic, "Union Pacific," with Joel McCrea and Barbara Stanwyck, near Cedar City, Utah. There one of the biggest collections of old-time railroad equipment on record is being used for exciting scenes recalling the days when the first transcontinental railroad was built.

And still farther north, up in the snow-covered mountains of Idaho, "Northwest Passage" is before the cameras. Back in Missouri, the "Jesse James" company has just completed a long location assignment. And in New York, beside the "Cafe Society" crew, there is a camera unit filming scenes around the docks for the new Olympe Bradna-Ray Milland comedy, "Say It in French."

Taylor Stand-In Pays College Debt

Robert Taylor's success as a motion picture star has made it possible for a former classmate to complete a college education which, otherwise, would have been denied to him.

The former classmate is Redmond Doms, who, because of lack of finances, was unable to continue his studies while attending Pomona College with Taylor.

When Taylor became a star, and because of his friendship for Doms, the college invited Doms back to school to resume his studies "on credit," payable when he would be financially able.

Doms became Taylor's stand-in—and still is, in "Lucky Night." With the salary he has been receiving he has been paying the sums due on his education.

The final payment was made only a few days ago, and Taylor now is encouraging Doms to become a screen writer, which is Doms' ambition.

Trick Photography Aids Makers of Budget Films; Saves Huge Sums

By Frederick C. Othman,
United Press Hollywood Correspondent.

Hollywood, March 23.—One of the funniest sights we've yet seen in Hollywood consisted of nine sober-faced men carefully winding two dozen mechanical ducks, placing them on a table and making motion pictures of them as if they were so many Garbos.

The head duck winder turned out to be Douglas Travers, the trick photography expert at RKO. He had at hand the manufacture of montage for Ginger Roger's new picture, "Little Mother."

Montage forms a part of almost every movie made these days, but few people know much about it. When a series of locomotive wheels and driving rods flash across the screen in perhaps six seconds to indicate a transcontinental train ride—that's montage. So is the scene wherein the man who has eaten a lobster dinner has a nightmare and sees hundreds of lobsters whirling around his head.

Is Photographic Trickery

A montage thus is photographic trickery whereby a movie can tell a story which might cost several hundred thousand dollars by ordinary methods—or which other wise couldn't be told at all.

Travers' problem with Miss Rogers was run-of-the-mine. She was playing the part of a department store salesgirl in the toy department during the Christmas rush. Her job was to sell mechanical ducks and they were driving her crazy. It was Travers' job to tell how crazy.

"So what we'll do," he said, "is show her hands writing sales slips and then we'll go to her face, which will be drawn and wan and superimposed by marching phalanxes of mechanical ducks.

"First we photographed her face against a background of black velvet. Now we're photographing the ducks—I mean we're trying to—and when we get both films, we'll print them together, with a double exposure effect."

Problems of Locomotion

Travers and the other duck winders were having their troubles getting the ducks to walk properly. They kept falling over, or waddling off the table. Each time one of these accidents occurred, the duck photographers solemnly stopped the camera, rewound all their ducks and started over again. We even helped them do some of the winding—and managed to feel pretty silly when a group of wide-eyed tourists walked in to see motion pictures in the making.

"I figure that it will take us four days to shoot our scenes," Travers said. "Then I'll be in the laboratory and the projection room six days more fitting the shots together and adding music."

When he finishes his work, the scene will last a scant 18 seconds on the screen. That means that for each day's hard work with ducks, Travers will get 18-10 seconds of motion picture.

He and his helpers could handle only two dozen ducks, but there will be hundreds of them, whirling on the screen.

This multiplication of ducks is accomplished with a prism lens, which is ground like a diamond, some 4 inches in diameter. When this lens is fitted on the camera, it makes each duck look like six ducks. To make them whirl around, Miss Rogers' face Travers merely turns a crank, which causes the lens to revolve.

Montage Pays Its Way

"Montage is used now in nearly every picture Hollywood makes," Travers said. "It is particularly good in low budget films. We can use our trickery to take the place of scenes which might easily cost half a million dollars to photograph under ordinary circumstances. Montage also is useful because of the way it speeds up a picture. Five minutes of good montage can tell as much as six reels of ordinary film, and if it's handled properly, it has the effect of leaving the audience breathless."

Travers credited Slavko Vorkapich, the jugoslavian director, with introducing montage work to Hollywood only seven years ago.

"And now we use it constantly," Travers said, "and we wonder how we ever made movies without it."

He returned to his ducks. We took another squint through his trick lens, and saw six of everything, including Travers. Then we got out of there—mumbling.

English Star Finds Boner in Own Film

The picture was "Dodge City," Flynn's latest starring vehicle, which was being filmed on location near Modesto, Calif.

Out near the tiny hamlet of Warnerville a set was constructed to represent the Dodge City of 1872. The railway water tank in the background and many foreground objects were decorated with bunting and American flags.

Flynn turned to Director Michael Curtiz as filming was scheduled to start.

"If I know my American history," he commented, "those flags are all wrong. I don't think there were 48 States in the United States in 1872. And those flags all have 48 stars."

A hurried call to the Modesto public library brought the information that there were only 37 States in the Union in 1872. Having no substitutes, the prop man arranged his flags so the number of stars couldn't be counted.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Martinsburg, W. Va., March 23.—Harry Masters, 50, of this county, was in a serious condition in a local hospital today from gunshot wounds, self-inflicted, officials said, as he was preparing to attend the funeral of his brother, John T. Masters, earlier this week.

He shot himself in the right temple in the yard outside his home.

Postlude

Felian Garzia gives a piano recital Wednesday night in the Arts Club of Washington. Program of compositions by Claude Achille Debussy.

Obliged to cultivate a varied repertoire, each pianist usually has a favorite composer. Felian Garzia has never made a secret of his predilection for Debussy, and last evening he devoted an entire recital in the Arts Club to that impressionistic tone painter. He has a flair for the nuances and harmonic subtleties of the Debussyan technique, and his readings show a real affection for the poet of the piano, who delighted in glimmering half-lights and shadowy tints.

His first group dealt with early pieces; the two Arabesques, the Reverie and the Danse, all of which were written before fame had focused its beam on Debussy. The Arabesques, dated 1888, are patently student works; neatly contrived, clear and concise, they have no striking characteristics apart from their intuitive groping toward the style which was to become his mannerism. The one in G major is quite Schumannesque in its romanticism, and the other in E major slightly foreshadows the impressionistic method.

The Reverie was sold by Debussy in 1890 to a publisher who withheld it for 15 years, thereby incurring the composer's displeasure. When it was finally published, Debussy protested, declaring that the piece had been written hastily and that it was not only unimportant, but also downright bad. As a matter of fact, it is almost complacently orthodox, save for a few unusual harmonies.

The Danse, also sold in 1890, was originally titled "Tarantelle Styrienne," and has a pronounced Russian flavor in the themes. Its modulations were daring at that time, as were the chords of the seventh and ninth with which it is sprinkled.

For the remainder of his program Mr. Garzia presented five of the Preludes, two Images, two excerpts from "Children's Corner," one of the Estampes, and "L'Isle Joyeuse."

The art of Young America presents Berenice Alarie (Oscar Heintze, accompanist) in a song recital Wednesday night in Phillips Memorial Gallery. Program of songs by Delibes, Paisiello, Scarlatti, Handel, Jomelli, Cornelius, Franz Schumann, Wackerlin, Faure, Duparc, Rakhmaninoo, La Forge, Carpenter, Butterfield and Prindle Scott.

Bernice Alarie, the young American soprano, who was recently heard here as Esmeralda in "The Bartered Bride" and Musetta in "La Boheme," made a pleasing impression last evening in a song recital before an audience that comfortably filled the Phillips Memorial Gallery. She has a piquant personality, an engaging vivacity in her interpretations, and a lyric voice of fresh and clear quality.

There is in the voice a dramatic strength which she has been cultivating too assiduously to the detriment of delicacy. In mezzo-voce and pianissimo passages the tones often lack breath support which is concentrated upon the full and open tones. Once this uneveness is remedied, she should be an admirable exponent of lyricism, for her sense of phrasing is good and her voice has flexible grace.

Inasmuch as I did not hear the first part of the program, no judgment can be passed on her skill in fioritura. Yet one surmises from the agility displayed in later songs that she has considerable command of roulades, trills and other vocal ornaments. But she should not call herself a coloratura soprano, for there is no such a thing. Coloratura, as an adjective, applies solely to the quality of tone in shading—to the changes in timbre which are called "colors" for want of a better descriptive term.

Fruit Outlook Favorable In Franklin Orchards

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Waynesboro, Pa., March 23.—The general outlook in Franklin County orchards at the present time is encouraging. The continued cool weather has been a boon to the fruit crop, keeping buds dormant, staving off rapid development and eliminating the danger of destruction by a sudden freeze.

Orchardists estimate that it will be a month before the county will find its apple and peach orchards in bloom.

Furniture Gift

Cecilia Parker's new dressing room on the stage of "The Hardys Ride High," is filled with furniture supplied by husband Dick Baldwin, on their thirty-third weekly wedding anniversary.

Actor's Activities Bewilder Hosts

Brian Aherne's strange actions as a guest in the homes of some of Hollywood's most gracious hosts and hostesses have been explained.

The tall British actor, currently featured with Bette Davis and Paul Muni in "Juarez," bought a home, the first house he ever owned in his life.

For three weeks, while the deal was pending, Aherne had his Hollywood hostesses bewildered and not a little bit alarmed. One night, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Basil Rathbone, Mrs. Rathbone was startled into remarking, "Brian, what in the world are you doing?" by his queer conduct at the dinner table.

"I did seem a bit odd," Aherne recalls. "I was picking up my plate to see what sort it was, what name was stamped on the bottom. I'm furnishing my own place, and I'm having a devil of a time learning the facts of keeping house."

Tarzan Forsakes Jungle to Rhumba

Stars Reveal Parts They Want in Films

Every mummer of consequence has a "dream role"—some part he or she would rather play than anything. And some of the characterizations of which your Hollywood favorites dream are as curious, a survey deveals, as the traditional instance of the low comedian wanting to play "Hamlet."

Blubbery Charles Laughton, currently enacting the title role in "The Beachcomber," wishes he could play Cap'n Ahab, the lead Yankee skipper of Herman Melville's "Moby Dick." He is also intrigued, and more logically, perhaps, by Falstaff and Dr. Samuel Johnson.

Both Gary Cooper, now in "Beau Geste," and Bob Burns would like to portray Abraham Lincoln.

Madeleine Carroll would give anything to play Florence Nightingale, and Dorothy Lamour feels the same way about Jenny Lind.

Olympe Bradna, piquant 18-year-old starlet, dreams of herself as both "Joan of Arc" and "Camille." Glamorous Isa Miranda, who will make her bow to the American public in "Hotel Imperial," would like to do the Maid of Orleans herself. And Claudette Colbert, whose current "Midnight" fulfills one long-felt desire, now wants to play Lady Hamilton, enamorata of Admiral Nelson.

Akim Tamiroff has always wanted to play the title role of "Taras Boulba," by his compatriot, Gogol. Boulba was a Cossack fighter.

Sports Writers' Gals in Pictures

Injured Man Fell Off Train, Is Police Belief

Charlottesville, Va., March 23 (AP).—A man about 35 years old was found lying unconscious beside the Southern Railroad tracks near Gilbert Station, about five miles north of here earl ythis morning. He was brought by ambulance to a local hospital where he is said to be in a serious condition.

A card bearing the name "James A. Gilliam, Lynchburg," was found in his pocket. Police believe that he fell from a train.

Ducky for Dickie

The services of 11-year-old Dickie Jones are being claimed by two studios. Warner Bros. studio is using him for a feature role in "Hero for a Day" while Walt Disney uses him as the voice of one of Donald Duck's nephews.

Quiet, Please!

The Dead End kids have made Huntz Hall their "public relations chairman." One of his jobs is to find out from the public what kind of conduct they would like to have from the gang—naughty or nice.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., March 23.—We should all thank the Lord for Deanna Durbin, Henry Koster, Joe Pasternak and Bruce Manning. "Three Smart Girls Grown Up" is their best. It was also their most difficult, being a follow-up on their first picture. No one on the screen is growing up so beautifully as Deanna Durbin, with her pictures keeping pace, physically, mentally and spiritually.

HOPPER

If they can do it, why can't other studios? Why? Because nine times out of ten when they find a perfect working combination like this and turn out a success, they scatter those forces among a whole studio. Universal hasn't done this.

These three people understand and love Deanna. No mother ever gave her child more tender care than they gave to Deanna's pictures. They have also developed a charming young actor who was buried under contract for five years at Paramount—Robert Cummings. The morning following the preview, he had an offer from every studio in town.

Again we find Charlie Winninger one of our best actors. And the recording of the Durbin voice is the envy of all.

A meeting was called at one of the biggest studios for the purpose of finding out why they couldn't record their voices as well as Universal does Deanna's. It's interesting to note in passing, that last year Deanna was paid $129,675, and Director John M. Stahl got $208,000. Yet Deanna's pictures have supported the entire studio.

Don't be surprised if the Nazi spy picture opens at Madison Square Garden with former President Eduard Benes of Czecho-Slovakia making an address. They're using only the title without names of the cast. Talk about the "Bund" meeting a few weeks back, this should really be their answer.

When Bob Hope was made an honorary mascot of the American Legion, he cracked, "Well, the Army has a mule, the Navy a goat, why can't the Legion have Hope?" You'll have to do better than that for the Legion, Bob! They deserve more than hope!

Johnny "Scat" Davis, given the comedy lead for "Give Me a Child," is living up to the title but was told to grow a three days' beard. Johnny, who shaves only every third week, said, "Gee, I'll have to have a two months' vacation for that."

Chatted with Bette Davis on "The Old Maid" set while she sipped orange juice through a straw. Her scotty, Skippy, sat in his own chair with his name printed on the back. Bette, pink-shirt-waisted and gray-skirted, in a poke bonnet with pink birds, looked more like 1939 than 1841. She was chuckling over a question an out-of-town newspaper woman put to her about how to develop your personality, "By reading," said Bette. "But you'd better not quote me on that." As you know, that was part of Ham Nelson's divorce claim.

George Raft is reading script on "Dance With the Devil" in which Don Ameche plays a missionary and George a prize fighter. Watch George's dust this year.

Speaking of dust reminds me of that brilliant line Jim Tully wrote after Paul Bern's death: "May his dust choke the eagles."

Marjorie Weaver is the latest victim. She just got reduced when she was assigned Mary Todd in "Young Mr. Lincoln" and ordered to put on 15 pounds. The minute it's finished she'll have to rip them right off again.

Alice Brady, one of our greatest actresses, gets the role of Abigail, in the same picture. Twentieth Century seems to be the only studio which realizes that she's a great dramatic actress, not a screwball comedienne.

I was amused at one of our young players, who did a radio skit with Spring Byington in which Spring played a light, frothy widow. The young actress said, "She was great—so much better than Billie Burke. I had no idea she could play comedy." Then I gave her Spring's New York background in those parts which made her famous.

When Rudy Vallee presented Ann Sheridan with the gold bracelet for having the most "umph," Dudley Field Malone's scathing remarks almost spoiled the party. Otto Kruger, David Niven and Rudy were livid.

Everyone was dressed to the teeth except Bernie Newman, who went sack-suited. Designer Orry Kelly, who's grown 5 inches around the middle, had to borrow tails from Warner's Studio. Seeing Bernie, he said, "What are you trying to do—pull a Norma Shearer?" She got away with it when she wore a scarlet dress to a white ball. Or did she?

In A Great Tradition

Few people interested in printing are unacquainted with the name of Frederic William Goudy, dean of American type designers. But a much smaller number have any detailed knowledge of his life story. The news that the venerable artist is now engaged upon his autobiography is therefore the more welcome.

Born in Bloomington, Ill., on March 8, 1865, Mr. Goudy early exhibited a leaning toward drawing and mechanics. This ability took a form of great significance to the reading public when, about 1896, he drew his first type face, called Camelot. Since then Mr. Goudy has drawn something over 100 different type designs, most of which are internationally recognized and used.

At the age of 60, Mr. Goudy began to engrave the matrices of the type faces which had already made his name so famous in the printing craft. Most of this work was accomplished at his home and workshop at Marlborough-on-Hudson, where he carried on the great tradition of the artist-artisan. It was a major tragedy when, on the morning of January 26, his shop, along with most of its invaluable equipment, was destroyed by fire.

As a mark of appreciation a testimonial fund has been raised by friends in an endeavor to restore as much of the loss as is replaceable. The fund will be presented in New York tonight at a dinner in Mr. Goudy's honor. For what it symbolizes, the occasion is one to be remembered in the long annals of the art of printing.

Throughout the years, Mr. Goudy has never deviated from his ambition to create letter forms which are both beautiful and readable. It is in no small measure due to his imaginative genius, to his mechanical skill, that this ambition has contributed so largely to the readability of the printed page. Neither fire nor any other calamity can ever wholly destroy the influence he has exerted.

Tonight Mr. Goudy, still young at 74, must in spite of personal modesty admit something of the measure of his achievements. That he will use his new workshop to press on with his autobiography is the hope of all who have, through his work, caught glimpses of the stature of the man behind it.

Over Forty

The committee appointed by Secretary Perkins to investigate the employment problems of workers over 40 has been prevented by lack of funds from making original surveys. However, it has analyzed available data to good effect. And its members are executive heads of large corporations, labor leaders and social workers who have an extensive first-hand acquaintance with labor problems.

Recently there has been a disposition to minimize the difficulty of finding employment for workers in the upper age groups. It is pointed out, for instance, that the unemployment census taken in 1937 revealed a larger percentage of unemployed in the group from 20 to 24 years of age than any other. Of course, these young people are the ones who are trying to enter an overcrowded labor market. After 25, there is a marked drop in the percentage of unemployed, followed by a significant and uninterrupted rise in the percentage of unemployed men after the age of 40. For women the upward trend is resumed after 35.

Since older workers are favored by seniority rules and personnel policy, the statistics do not reveal the full extent of the handicap confronting older men and women who have been detached from their jobs. One special community study indicated that workers in the early forties were unemployed for a period four times as long as those in the twenties.

Whatever the causes of discrimination, whatever the justification for it from the employer's viewpoint, we cannot contemplate with equanimity an organization of industrial society which would reject as unfit average men and women at an age when most of their adult life is still before them. Industry must either find a place for such individuals or industrial processes and employment policies must be changed to make a place for them.

The committee, convinced that prejudice based on erroneous information accounts for much of the feeling that those over 40 are "through," urges employers, governmental as well as private, to change their personnel policies, abandon rigid age limits and try to find out what occupations are particularly suited to the older groups.

The suggestion that the United States Employment Service study the opportunities open to older workers in particular communities, and also address itself to training these older workers in new techniques, has much to commend it. For the pace of modern industry is swift, and the competent middle-aged man or woman often finds it necessary to acquire new skills in order to keep moving with the rapidly changing times.

Selling WPA Jobs

A Federal grand jury sitting in New York City last January urged the appointment of a special prosecutor to determine the extent of graft in the local WPA organization. The evidence, it stated, indicated a "general laxity in the administration of public works" and "shocking official ignorance" of what was going on. As if to corroborate this charge of official ignorance, Col. Somervell, head of the WPA in New York, now confesses that it is a "severe shock" to him to discover instances of job selling by his subordinates.

Credit is due Col. Somervell for his vigorous denunciation of the practice and his eagerness to aid the authorities who are engaged in the work of prosecuting offenders. The fact remains, however, that one well-paid employe with a criminal record is now being sought as a fugitive from justice, charged with selling jobs on women's and professional projects. Two others are under arrest and Col. Somervell intimates that more arrests may follow.

If WPA jobs are valuable enough to provide a rake-off for venal officials there is surely room for economy in relief outlays, provided of course that the parasites who prey upon the helpless workers can be extirpated. At any rate, situations such as that uncovered in New York emphasize the need for a Congressional probe of the WPA, not merely with a view to eliminating waste but as a preliminary to a complete reformation or rather transformation of the present setup.

A resolution calling for such a probe has just been approved by the House Rules Committee and will probably be voted upon shortly. The Committee on Appropriations, which would be entrusted with the inquiry, could readily draw upon evidence already accumulated by Congressional committees as well as upon direct testimony. Startling revelations of the political exploitation of WPA workers have already been published by the Sheppard Committee on Campaign Expenditures. The Byrnes Committee on Unemployment and Relief has also accumulated a great deal of useful information.

Congress, however, does not need to acquire much more data concerning the abuses of the present system. The question that calls for answer is what ought to be done about the underlying causes. It should be plain by this time that a system of work relief sufficiently attractive to make the business of selling jobs to the needy possible is inherently defective.

Moreover, if relief funds are to be conserved, local communities must be given some incentive to see that they are used to best advantage. So long as the unemployed are taken care of by a Federally administered and Federally financed organization, the desire to economize will be subordinate to a determination on the part of the localities to get as much as possible from the common relief pool.

Hence, if Congress is really anxious to cut relief appropriations, it must not be content with merely slashing appropriations. It must make sure that the reduced appropriations will suffice by closing the loopholes through which large sums intended for the needy are at present diverted into other hands.

Stripped To The Bone

Federal tax experts state that under the Bone bill, designed to take the profits out of war, a resident of New York State would pay to the State and Federal tax collectors $26,000 more than he would receive on an income of $500,000.

It requires little imagination to realize how speedily persons with large incomes would cease working as an obvious alternative to the doubtful privilege of paying such penalty levies. A more effective method of discouraging production, and thereby helping to insure the loss of any war that we might wage, could hardly be devised.

Of course the Bone proposal cannot be taken very seriously; for if we were to be drawn into a war, our energies would be directed toward stimulating production. Confiscatory taxation, taking $97,970 out of a New York income of $100,000, obviously would defeat that aim. It is indeed amazing that the Bone bill should have received the indorsement of 50 Senators in view of its patent impracticability. One is forced to conclude that the sponsors either did not read the bill or else forgot that the States as well as the Federal Government levy taxes on income.

The bill may prove to be more than a futile gesture, however, if it calls attention to the problem created by duplicate State and Federal levies. The subject has been discussed at great length, but so far very little has been accomplished toward better co-ordination of Federal and State tax systems. With expenditures mounting, the evils of multiple taxation increase. And the need for some plan of action designed to minimize conflicts becomes more imperative.

Isolating The Issue

The House sub-committee conducting hearings on the Griffenhagen report is well advised to separate the issues of modernizing the District's governmental structure from that of granting local suffrage. That action should not retard the cause of suffrage and it should substantially aid reorganization, which is desirable whether or not voting rights are granted.

If Representative Kennedy and his colleagues had decided to write a suffrage provision into the prospective charter for the District, there is a strong probability that the measure would have advanced no farther than the House District Committee. In that event all of the energy that has gone into the present reorganization movement would have been a total loss. Unquestionably the wiser tactics are to center the issue on reorganization—to establish a local government worthy of the name before turning over control of that government to an elected council.

Mr. Kennedy was in a strong position to draw the line between reorganization and suffrage because he personally favors both. Fortunately, the same is true of most citizen groups which went before the committee to plead for the voting franchise. Separation of these issues should not, therefore, chill the enthusiasm of any civic organization for the basic principles underlying the Griffenhagen plan. It simply means that the advocates of suffrage must seek reform by two steps instead of one.

No doubt the suffrage issue will again be raised when the bill reaches the floor of the House. It is entirely reasonable that an amendment providing for an elected council should be offered. In this form it would not be so likely to jeopardize enactment of the reorganization bill, yet the outcome would provide the local community with some idea of where Congress stands on the suffrage issue. Such a vote would be especially useful as a guide to future action within the suffrage movement.

With this controversial issue at least temporarily laid aside, and with a compromise on the future of the Board of Education gradually emerging, the prospect for enactment of a District reorganization bill seems to be considerably improved. Moreover, the necessity of shifting responsibility for local affairs from Capitol Hill to the District Building is being graphically illustrated by Congress itself. Yesterday, a scheduled hearing on the new tax program collapsed when not a single member of the sub-committee appeared to conduct it. Previously this week testimony on the taxicab limitation bill was abruptly cut off because Congressmen in charge had to rush to the floor to look after the affairs of their own constituents.

This unsatisfactory situation arises largely from the fact that there are five vacancies on the House District Committee which can not be filled. Most members of Congress simply refuse to give their time to Washington's municipal problems. That attitude, from their viewpoint, is entirely reasonable. But it also makes imperative the creation of a genuine local government which can take the burden of Washington's municipal affairs off the hands of Congress.

Persuasive Examples

Justice was tempered with mercy by the New York judge who sentenced James J. Hines to from four to eight years' imprisonment, following the latter's conviction on lottery conspiracy charges. It was, the judge stated, the age of the prisoner—Hines is 62—that saved the Tammany leader from more drastic punishment.

However, the length of the sentence which Hines will have to serve, provided his conviction is not set aside by the higher courts, is much less important than the fact that so powerful a politician was indicted, tried, convicted and now faces a prison term. Other communities, plagued by rackets which have the protection of crooked politicians and venal officers of the law, can well be envious of New York's record in this regard.

What New York and Washington have done as a result of an aroused citizenry, an alert and able district attorney and an efficient machinery of justice can be done elsewhere. No doubt Hines believed himself too secure, well-connected and powerful to be brought to book. Many others probably feel the same. But where there is a will to destroy organized and protected crime there is always a way to smash it effectively. In this particular both the Capital and the chief metropolis of the United States have set persuasive examples.

Even sin's best friends sometimes wonder if it is worth what it costs.

Time For Clear Thinking

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: When a little over six months ago, the settlement of Munich was arrived at, that settlement was denounced in the most unmeasured terms by large sections of the American public. And when, only last week, the final chapter in the tragic history of the little Czech republic was written, public indignation knew no bounds. The whole consensus of national opinion could have been epitomized in that pungent phrase of the eminent isolationist Senator from California, Hiram Johnson, when he said: "It's a damned outrage."

Feeling as strongly as they do upon these predatory actions of Adolf Hitler, it is therefore difficult to understand why our people allow to remain on the statute books the present neutrality law, which not only cynically disclaims to draw any difference between the aggressor and the attacked, but in actual operation puts disturbers of peace and international law in a favored position.

We Americans like to think of ourselves as a Nation of honest, forthright folk who speak their own minds and mean exactly what they say. But to denounce dictators, and at the same time preserve legislation which encourages them in committing further acts of pillage and rapine appears to me to be the very essence of hypocrisy. It is time we in this country did a little clear thinking.

Gen. Franco And Latin America

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Franco apologists like Father Joseph F. Thorning, who in The Washington Post of March 15 advocated the recognition of Franco by the United States Government as a gesture toward winning the friendship of the people of Latin America, have based their espousal of the rebel cause on the attitude of the Spanish hierarchy as expressed in the now famous letter to the bishops. Does this precedent also mean that American Catholics give their approval to the doctrines of "Hispanidad" as expressed by Ramiro de Maeztu, which were warmly approved by the Primate of Spain, Archbishop (now Cardinal) Goma y Tomas in an address at Buenos Aires on October 12, 1934?

The Archbishop in his speech praised Maeztu's book, "Defensa de la Hispanidad," and called to the South American countries to turn toward Spain against the threats of "Monroeism, statism, Protestantism, Socialism or simple mercantilism." He deplored the separation of the colonies from Spain, which he attributed to "the itching to try new democratic forms of government," and declared that democracy was dying and was unable to "serve as a basis for 'Hispanidad' and mold the people of the race into a great unity for defense and conquest."

Maeztu's book which won the approval of the Spanish Church is a passionate plea for the union of "Hispanidad" against all foreignizing influences such as democracy. Maeztu frankly scorned the processes of democratic government and wrote: ". . . that state of the democracies, buyer of electors and provider of jobs, is no more than barbarism, and its successor must be sought at once . . . The worst is not that we are sick ourselves, but that, save for the possibility that the new regimes of Italy and Germany may point out a path of progress, there is nothing in the world to envy . . ."

This book, as reissued under rebel auspices, contains a map of "the lands and peoples of 'Hispanidad' under Philip II," which reveals that the Spanish rebels have borrowed from both Fascist Italy and Nazi Germany in their imperialistic propaganda. Most of the United States is included in this map, obviously designed to stir the Spanish people to dreams of reconquest of their empire in accordance with one of the basic tenets of the rebel program.

The eagerness of certain Catholic leaders to battle so furiously to aid Franco to set up a regime hostile to everything the United States stands for cannot but raise the question of whether or not they are more intrigued by the prospect of a re-creation of a Spanish Catholic empire than by any considerations of America's interests in South America.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Franco's "Blunder," as worded in the editorial of March 22, may be considered no blunder. That the dictator of the nationalist rebels against the duly constituted republican government should extend his hand in congratulation upon the subjugation of Czecho-Slovakia is merely the manipulation of the puppet strings.

But for the grace of God, there goes this Nation. We are the fortunate possessors of a wealthy land, and of a liberty which guarantees a fair deal through the elected Congress to the point that humanity fares tolerably well as a whole, and private enterprise is encouraged to reap its own just rewards. But the motif that might is right and humanity the slave of the state, is not as distant from America as might appear.

This juggernaut will not long be satisfied with conquering bankrupt countries. At this moment foreign agents are insidiously fomenting trouble through international religious ties, bigotry, racial enmity, color intolerance and economic and political associations. And all of these phases are prominent in Franco's Spain.

There is little doubt the plans of Hitler as revealed in "Mein Kampf" will be fulfilled. Also the prophesy of Floyd Gibbons' "The Red Emperor" may be borne out, although Nazi-Fascism rather than its sister communism is the ideology most to be forearmed against at this time. Franco's Spain is a pair of seven league boots by which the unholy alliance of Germany, Italy and Japan plans to cross the sea culturally with evil designs upon our good Latin-American neighbors.

Unless the people of these United States take further action than the trade agreements and the cultural activities of the Pan American Union, and the division of cultural relations of the Department of State, the Atlantic and Pacific water barriers will be erased, and the Monroe Doctrine will automatically become a declaration of war against heavy odds.

It is not far-fetched that Franco may one day congratulate Hitler upon the incorporation of old Reich districts in the Western Hemisphere. Better an ounce of prevention now to make our assets secure than lives lost later attempting to liberate the Americas from the yoke of oppression.

The mother tongue and the church in common are influential weapons for a bloodless battle by Franco's gang. A subsidized press, radio, and instructor, to Latin America would insure this hemisphere against modern conquistadors. A good offensive is the best defensive measure and the safest investment against the repetition of Franco's "Blunder."

"Entangling Alliances"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: There is a movement in the world to replace the present chaotic law of the jungle with decent law and order among the nations of the world, patterned on the federated system found practical for maintaining liberty under law by the experience of the United States. The only alternative to this is the continuation of the age-old struggle between races which can only lead to universal bankruptcy and ruin.

In this connection, particularly unfortunate, it seems to me, is the misuse of Washington's words about entangling alliances. A close study of his writings as a whole convinces me that Washington would turn over in his grave at the use of his words to thwart federation of the world.

He makes clear that the extreme aloofness he mentioned was to be temporary only. In a summary paragraph of his farewell address he says: "With me, a predominant motive has been to endeavor to gain time to our country to settle and mature its yet recent institutions, and to progress, without interruption to that degree of strength and consistency which is necessary to give it . . . command of its own fortunes."

Certainly we now have command of our own fortunes. It is high time we threw off the swaddling clothes of infancy, to mingle like men, in a world of men. Washington obviously never meant to condemn us to perpetual infantilism.

Also in his reference to alliances, I notice certain details universally overlooked. In his evidently very carefully chosen language, the alliances referred to are with any portion of the world. Although at that time a world federation must have been beyond conception, yet his intuition led him to avoid shutting out the United States from the possibility of a world federation.

But the most light to be gained from him in regard to the present comes from considering his works and his life in their entirety. These show that Washington was by no means an isolationist in the modern sense. On the contrary the great motif of both is union by federation. I find that page after page of Washington's writings present, if one simply inserts the word "world" before union, the most cogent and closely reasoned case for world federation to be found.

"Only 18 Cherry Trees?"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A letter in The Post of March 21 asks, "why all this argument and talk" about the destruction of "only 18 cherry trees," to make way for the controversial Jefferson Memorial on the Tidal Basin site.

In reply please let me state that in addition to the cherry trees nearly 100 magnificent 50-year-old elm trees have been hacked down, which never can be replaced, and that acres of park area that were formerly a very arboretum of beautiful trees and shrubbery of rare and lovely varieties are now a barren waste of yellow clay. (I trust that elms are sufficiently "American" to satisfy the writer of this letter to The Post.)

But the quoted misleading official statement anent the "only 18 cherry trees" is just one more example of the flagrant misrepresentation and of the "promotional activities" by means of which this misplaced and misguided enterprise has been perpetrated upon the residents of the voteless District.

The Post Impressionist

An Inch To The Right?

THE TROUBLE with American newspapers is that they are forever starting something that they don't finish. They arouse your interest in fever pitch over the plight of the unfortunate shell-game operator who faces possible amputation of his right arm because of infection and, consequently, loss of his means of livelihood. The newspapers tell of the six eminent physicians called into consultation to decide whether the shell-game operator's arm must come off. Then the curtain is rung down. No further scrap of information is printed. Whether the shell-game man's right arm is proof against the onslaught of the medical profession remains forever, so far as readers of the newspapers are concerned, a profound mystery.

Why this should be I have never been able to determine. Nor is any measure of relief in sight. You would think, with all the space at its command, ready and waiting to pounce upon and gobble up all the news that's fit to print, the bespectacled and white-tressed New York Times would be a shining exception to this rule of American journalism. I can only regretfully report that it isn't. Though on occasion the Times bow-wows gently one way or another about alleged peccadillos of the home-grown press, its editors, after all, are only newspapermen, subject to the frailties which are their brothers'.

The present quarrel which I have with the Times concerns the fate or, let us say, the legal status of Miss Phyliss Hirsh's hips. Some time ago Miss Hirsh, a coat model for a Fifth avenue firm, according to the Times, was discharged because, it was alleged, her hip measurements had increased from 35½ to 36½ inches, thus taking her out of the "perfect 14" class.

Miss Hirsh's attorneys, however, told the State Labor Relations Board that the alleged increment of their client's hips was a matter which the board ought officially to "pooh-pooh" as a trumped-up excuse to fire Miss Hirsh, who had become a model non grata on account of her union activities. Miss Hirsh is the treasurer of the newly organized Professional Models Union of America.

If this contention is true it, of course, completely alters the character of Miss Hirsh's martyrdom. If it were true that Miss Hirsh were fired because her hip spread had increased by 1 inch, then she would be a martyr to the simple law of feminine growth and, as such, a heroine to be wept for by a large section of womanhood which, guiltless of union activity, has experienced the tragedy of spreading seams.

If, however, the alleged inch were merely a figment of the imagination of an enemy to the American worker, then Miss Hirsh is a martyr in the crusade of labor, fit to be exalted on far-flung soap boxes and in the indignant columns of the Daily Worker.

This is a neat point, and upon its determination rest issues of no little magnitude. If a graph of Miss Hirsh's hips actually and truly showed a tendency toward growing amplitude, their trend might be said, with some fairness, in this day of confused definitions, to be Fascist. Certainly, in the more abundant hip we may descry a note of conservatism.

Hips worn thin, however, in the business of plodding here and there with an owner bent upon union activities, while they may not, upon such evidence alone, be classed as Marxist, nevertheless disclose a definitely leftist tendency.

The Times reported that tape measurements of Miss Hirsh's hips made by photographers (a proceeding roughly classifiable under the heading of "freedom of the press") showed the hips were only 35 inches, a loss of one-half inch from measurement at the time of Miss Hirsh's hiring. Photographers, however, may have been prejudiced measurers and their measurements cannot be accepted for purposes of adjudication as definitive. It is only fair, also, I feel, to say that the Times photographer took no part in this proceeding, or, if he did, the results of his photographic research were not made available to Times readers.

Doubtless the State Labor Relation Board made its own official measurements and based its decision upon them. If the official measurements verified those of the photographers, the enemies of the American workingman will have a lot of explaining to do. And rightly so. Some weapons are not fair even in love or any sort of war. Outstanding among these is the caddishness and poltroonery of telling the world that a girl's hips are an inch bigger than they are. That's hitting below the belt and in a zone which, having been so constantly on the receiving end during the years of childhood, should be inviolable in our years of maturity.

The Times indicated that the outcome of all this would be known the following day. After a troubled night's sleep, broken by fitful dreams of hips being attacked by Secretary Ickes as a subversive influence in the American Newspaper Guild, I pounced on the next day's Times. News of Spain, Chamberlain, the Hines trial, Secretary Hopkins, a milk pact and countless other things, but not one word about Miss Hirsh's hips. Through column after column I waded, but never a hip. The whole matter of hips had been dropped like the proverbial hot cake, at least in the edition I got.

It wasn't done maliciously, I'm sure. It's just one of the annoying little habits of the American press. A hairbrush, I think, is indicated for the Times' hips, if it has any.

The Senate Discusses Gilroy Moving Mountain

Senator Whobbs—Mr. Chairman, I have received information that the mountain in Gilroy, Calif., which started moving the other day, is still on the move. I think it is time something was done about it.

Senator Poultice—I think this body has more important matters to take up at this time.

Senator Whobbs—I insist that when the mountains of this country begin slipping their anchors it is pretty important.

Senator Perkie—Aftet all, only one mountain has started moving. It is time to get alarmed when the movement becomes general.

Senator Whobbs—How does the gentlemen know only one mountain is moving? The mere fact that but one mountain has been reported as stealing second does not mean other mountains are not engaged in such a course, or contemplating it.

Senator Toople—I move the matter be referred to the Dies committee.

Senator Whobbs—Does the Senator mean to imply that subversive influences are moving this mountain?

Senator Toople—I wouldn't put it past 'em!

Senator Poultice—The Dies committee would get to the bottom of it, anyhow. It has a list of people who would be apt to stoop to a thing like moving mountains when our backs are turned.

Senator Whobbs—I am not prepared to admit the matter is one for the Dies committee, which is crippled in the matter of funds. It may have enough money to investigate a few hills, yes, but mountains, no!

Senator Toople—How does the Administration stand on the matter?

Senator Whobbs—I do not know. I understand there is some conflict of minds. The President is said to think it might be a good idea if a few mountains were moved. Mr. Hopkins is for having them stay where they are, at least for the present.

Senator Poultice—Is there any truth in the rumor that Mr. Roosevelt is responsible for this mountain moving, in fact, that he gave his word for it?

Senator Whobbs—I have heard, as my honorable colleague has heard, the stories that the moving of Gilroy Mountain is but the start of a movement to shift all our mountains on the plea that the country would be better off if some of our Western mountains were transferred East, and vice versa, but I consider them inspired by irresponsible sources.

Senator Squeeper—I do not like the way some of our rivers have been acting lately. While not prepared to make any direct charges, I believe they are being shifted around in the general philosophy that nothing should be left as it was before.

Senator Whobbs—Let us return to the mountain . . .

Voice (through a yawn)—Nothing doing. If the mountains want to take anything up with the Senate, let 'em come to us.

Hitler Sets A Trap

And The Magyars Walk Into It

By Charles T. Crane

FIGHTING across Ruthenia toward the realization of a dream cherished these past 20 years—to regain those two-thirds of their territory lost in the World War—Hungarian troops have walked into the cleverest trap yet set by Adolf Hitler. If sprung—and only a reversal of Munich can prevent it—the trap may or may not restore lost territory to the Magyars; but it certainly will cost Hungary her independence.

It was no change of heart that last week impelled Hitler to permit Hungarians to occupy that easternmost wedge of Czecho-Slovakia from which he had excluded them six months earlier despite the willingness of the other rulers congregated at Munich. The realization that without possession of the Hungarian plain Ruthenia is untenable has caused him to resort to the strategy, concocted last spring, for invasion of Slovakia and Ruthenia by German troops passing through Hungary; and en route these were to install a Nazi government at Budapest.

ORIGINALLY the plan was designed to thwart possible armed resistance by Czecho-Slovakia. Fearing a German attack, the Prague government a year ago determined on a fighting retreat from the German border near Nuernberg until driven back 500 miles to Ruthenia. Czech army officials believed the campaign could thus be prolonged at least a month, possibly two. By then, they hoped, all Europe would be embroiled. The assurance that he must fight caused Hitler to stay his hand until he had undermined the Czechs' means of defense; but for the eventuality of war he prepared a plan to thwart the Czech strategy.

An understanding of the year-old plan explains the otherwise confusing events now unfolding southeast of Germany. It called for a sweeping and unopposed drive of German troops, from Vienna, across the Hungarian plain to the Slovakian and Ruthenian borders, where an advance of but a few miles would deliver the only thread of communication east and west—the narrow flatlands adjacent to Hungary—immediately into German hands. Any troops attempting resistance could then be driven into the isolated valleys of the high Carpathian mountain range climbing northward to the Polish border. With resistance shattered in the eastern half of Czecho-Slovakia the hill-to-hill retreat planned by Prague's high command would thus be cut off.

Best Route To Ruthenia Runs Through Hungary

SINCE the first partition of Czecho-Slovakia last October, it has been obvious that only by crossing Hungary could a large German force quickly reach Ruthenia. For all railroads and important highways traverse the low-lying country then annexed by Hungary, and the mountainous terrain to the north is well nigh impassable. In approving Hungarian occupation of Ruthenia, Hitler has done so with the express stipulation that the Magyars must demonstrate ability to control it. As after a week fighting continues, suspicion points to Nazi fostering of the resistance through agents provocateurs who have poured into the Carpatho-Ukraine in recent weeks. But in this continued strife lies Hitler's excuse for intervention. . . . And his troops are reported marching east.

Today intervention by the Little Entente to prevent passage of German troops through Hungary can be stymied through the same agreement between Berlin and Budapest, that was an open secret there last spring. The plan provided that Hungary was to refuse an ultimatum by Hitler demanding passage of his troops to eastern Czecho-Slovakia; and when the German army marched despite the refusal of permission, Hungary was to plead that she was overpowered and therefore not subject to attack by Rumania and Yugoslavia, bound by treaty to thus assist Czecho-Slovakia.

WHEN THE ability of the Czechs to resist Hitler was broken by subversion, permitting abandonment of the above plan, Hungarians generally sighing with relief, remarked, "Now at least we know Czecho-Slovakia will go down before our country is attacked." Among those in Budapest aware of the plan, few believed that German troops, once on the Hungarian plain, could be induced to leave. It was expected that their presence would be used to force a Nazification of the Hungarian government, probably would lead to "protective" occupation of the entire kingdom, to be followed by outright annexation. But then, as today, few cared; for they could foresee little hope of long resisting German aggression.

There has long existed in Hungary a popular will to co-operate in military matters with Germany. Following the annexation of Austria this became feasible, and after 20 fruitless years of labor to attain peaceful revision of their boundaries many a Magyar was converted by the dramatic episode of the anschluss to the theory that might is right. Only the fear of permanent subjugation has prevented military co-operation to date, and the objection weakens as the futility of resistance becomes more apparent. Hungary, split internally, is now riper for German aggression than ever was Austria or Czecho-Slovakia.

THREE NAZI movements have made tremendous progress in Hungary, gaining the adherence of a million landless peasants facing starvation, propagandizing the army (soldiers are openly using the Hitler salute) and even making heavy inroads into the government itself.

Two of the three Nazi fuehrers are in prison, the pre-requisite to becoming "Little Hitlers." The bulwark against Magyar Nazism, the land-owning nobility that rules Hungary despite parliamentarianism, is expected by observers to yield to Hitler before surrendering its fabulous holdings to constitutents desperate with hunger.

In regard to anti-Semitism the Magyars see eye-to-eye with Nazi Germans; for they introduced it to post-war Europe. Naziism is further bolstered by a large German minority centered west of Budapest. And Count Paul Teleki, Premier of Hungary, defines democracy as a "violent reaction against Bolshevism."

Possession of Ruthenia is strongly desired by Hitler as a base of agitation for an independent Ukraine, for a revolutionary program designed to weaken Poland and Russia and perhaps eventually open their richest lands to German exploitation. But sway over Hungary takes precedence in importance; for Germany's primary requisite today is food, and post-war Hungary is the floor of the Danubian basin, the "granary of Europe." Furthermore, an assured supply of Rumanian oil is beyond Hitler's reach until his mechanized army stands on the flat Transylvanian border far south of mountainous Ruthenia.

Magyars At Mercy Of Greater Germany

THE PRESSURE successfully applied to Rumania in the last few days to force economic cooperation with the Reich reveals nothing so clearly as the conviction of eastern Europeans that Hitler could take up such a position if necessary. With his armies already moving eastward through Ruthenia one can but wonder if this next move is even now under way; and abundant evidence indicates that it is.

When Hitler six months ago refused to allow Hungary to annex Ruthenia he did so, according to competent observers, in order to deny her the time necessary to consolidate her position and establish the effective military cooperation with Poland that would encourage resistance to his aggression. That time, it now is evident, he calculated to be six months of harassing fall and winter.

His approval of the very action he formerly resisted logically would seem to imply but one thing—that he does not now intend to grant Hungary six months of unimpeding spring and summer to accomplish these same objectives. Is Hitler, after revealing to the world his "schedule" of aggression, now moving off-schedule to take his next victim by surprise?

Energizing Recovery

By Ernest K. Lindley

President Stands Pat

A WEEK or two ago the Washington dispatches were hailing business "appeasement." Now you read that the President has "thrown appeasement out the window."

The basic fact, as I see it, is that the status of "appeasement" in the Administration has undergone no important change in more than three months. The Administration's policy was set forth clearly in the President's annual message to Congress, and has been adhered to.

The President said on January 4 that with the exception of legislation dealing with transportation and Government reorganization, "the past three Congresses have met in part or in whole the pressing needs of the new order of things."

He proclaimed the end of the "period of internal conflict in the launching of our program of social reform." He declared that accordingly "our full energies may now be released to invigorate the process of recovery."

"The first duty of our statesmanship today," he said, "is to bring capital and manpower together."

At the same time he committed himself flatly to maintaining Federal spending and investment.

President Indicated Digestion Period

WHAT THE PRESIDENT announced, in substance, was a period of digestion and consolidation. Although he did not say so specifically, this implied that some of the administrative kinks in the New Deal, such as those in WPA and the National Labor Relations Board, would be ironed out.

What he sought was a united national effort to promote recovery. In the entire speech there was not a word that was critical of business or its leadership—a fact which was noted and praised by newspapers all over the country.

The policy set forth by the President in January commanded support all the way across the front of the Administration. To the best of my knowledge the so-called "left wingers" were, and still are, just as eager as the "right wingers" to stimulate economic recovery.

But some of the Republicans, old-line Democrats, and business leaders apparently decided that the New Deal was on the retreat and could be routed. The one important test so far has been on the WPA appropriation for the rest of this fiscal year. The President has held his ground firmly, and will soon see how much Congress will yield.

Other Conciliatory Measures Recalled

MORE THAN a month ago the President gave business another pat on the back by announcing that he would not ask Congress to levy additional taxes. (In his budget message he had suggested moderate increases to cover the special national defense program and farm parity payments—and it appears that he still wants taxes for the latter, which he says were promised by Congress last year.)

Harry Hopkins delivered a conciliatory speech, which went a step further (undoubtedly with the President's approval) in proposing the amendment of "any Federal taxes which tend to freeze the necessary flow of capital." A day previously Henry Morgenthau, jr., had said the same thing without the President's authorization. John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury, had painstakingly worked out definite plans for modifying the corporate tax structure to encourage capital to take greater risks.

Everything was going reasonably well until it was mistakenly advertised that the Administration had confessed sin and was about to renounce some of its most treasured achievements.

The President never liked the word "appeasement." As he said, it reminded him of the Munich agreement. He did not feel flattered by an implied comparison of himself to Chamberlain, and certainly he did not intend to be another Czecho-Slovakia. It was surprising that the word "appeasement" was popular in business circles. For, by the analogy to Munich, business was clearly cast in the role of Hitler.

Yielded Inch; Yard Was Demanded

WHAT HAPPENED last week and this was that the comparison with Munich came to seem extremely accurate in the President's mind. When he yielded an inch, a yard was promptly demanded. A committee from Wall Street seriously proposed to cut the insides out of the securities legislation. The Securities and Exchange Commission flatly rejected the committee report. And the SEC chairman, William O. Douglas, with the warm approval (and perhaps the prompting) of the White House, labeled it "a phoney."

The President likewise got the impression, I think, that some businessmen and some Democrats on the hill were becoming too ambitious in their plans for tax revision.

At his press conference Tuesday he generally pooh-poohed the importance of tax revision, but he said he was in a receptive state of mind. The next day an important visitor who talked to him about taxation found the President cordial and apparently receptive.

The only "appeasement" that has gone out the window was a creation of the imagination. The best guide to the Administration's policy has been, and still is, the President's annual message.

On The Record

By Dorothy Thompson

Remarkable Cerebration Of Sen. Bone

STRANGE and wonderful things have happened in the last few days, but among them nothing is stranger or more wonderful than the war-profits tax introduced into the Senate on Tuesday by Senator Bone, with the backing of no less than 50 Senators (so it is claimed) of such diverse political views as Messrs. Holt, Wheeler, Van Nuys, Wagner, Lundeen, La Follette, Vandenberg, Reed and Barbour.

The result of this bill would be to bring about a social revolution in the United States in case we should be so unfortunate as to become engaged in war. It is too bad Huey Long is not alive. He would have loved it. It is much better than any share-the-wealth program he ever invented.

Its ostensible purpose is to take the profits out of war, but, of course, Senators La Follette, Vandenberg, Wheeler and Bone are backing it for various and quite conflicting purposes.

If it is passed, the moment that this country becomes involved in a war, whatever sort of war, declared or undeclared, every taxable income in the country will be slashed to bits, whether that income is derived in any way from war profits or not.

Startling Income Cuts Illustrated

TO GIVE SOME illustrations, and leaving out of account, of course, all State, municipal and county taxes, including State income taxes where they exist, a family with an income of $8,000 a year will have it reduced to $5,680. A family with $20,000 will have it reduced to $9,680. A $50,000 income will bring in $10,281; $100,000 will retain $10,790; $500,000 will be reduced to $14,790; $1,000,000 to $19,790. If your income is $5,000,000 you will be allowed to keep $59,790; an income of $10,000,000 will retain $109,790.

That is what would be left without State taxes. But figuring them, a New York income of $100,000 would be cut to $2,030; and any one with $1,000,000 would be MINUS $61,000.

Let's get it clear: If the United States becomes involved in war the United States Government will undertake a wholesale confiscation of income. The result will be universal defaults on mortgages, with the bankruptcy of savings banks and insurance companies; tremendous falls in the standards of living, with grand crashes for innumerable factories and stores, wholesale dumping of securities, and general panic, which would necessitate the Government taking over everything just at the moment when it is involved in fighting an enemy.

If this bill had been designed by the Trotskyist Communists, in collaboration with the German-American Bund, it could not have been better done for their purposes. It is a bill to make it impossible for us to win any war we may enter. It is a bill to make any war the outbreak of a revolution.

Just think a minute. A man in New York City is the head of a family of four and has a gross income of $20,000 a year.

His present taxes leave him a net income of around $17,445. He lives in an apartment on which he has a three years' lease, and he pays for it $3,000 a year—just about what a man with a $20,000 income would pay. He keeps two servants, and they cost him, in wages and food, $2,200 a year. He spends at least $1,000 a year on schools for his two children, for the New York public schools are notoriously overcrowded. If his wife is a first class housekeeper the family's food (I am talking about New York City) will cost $1,500 a year, without any extras or any guests. His family's light, heat and washing will run—in New York City—to $600. Actually, his wife will spend a great deal more than this—for dry cleaning, outside valeting, hand laundry, etc. He carries an endowment insurance policy on which he pays $2,000 a year.

Social Panic Would Accompany Any War

THESE ARE his fixed charges, without clothes, amusements, the maintenance of a car, home entertainment, doctor's bills, or anything else. They add up to $9,300 a year, and give him plenty of leeway for luxuries and savings, inside a $17,000-a-year income.

Comes the war, and immediately his income is cut in half—with the proposed Federal and the existing State tax he will have $8,774. So he must do several things—move into a cheaper flat, dismiss one of his servants, send his children to public school, and let his insurance policy lapse.

All right. His family won't starve. Correct. But the same thing is going to happen all at once, automatically and immediately, to everybody with an income of more than $5,000 a year. (The only people who will sit pretty will be those with incomes in the millions; they will already have invested everything in Government bonds, will have stopped trying to earn anything, and will live in clover. But they are a handful of people.)

And the result will be, of course, the most awful panic imaginable. And just when we are trying to lick somebody! We shall have a war, a social revolution and a panic on our hands all at the same time.

Why did anybody think up such a bill? The answer is obvious. To punish us for our wickedness, if we ever go to war. It is perfectly true, as we can see today, that it doesn't always take two to make a war.

Wants To Tie Hands In Advance Of Crisis

BUT A CERTAIN set of Senators wants to fix it so that we will never go to war, no matter what happens to us, and they figure that if everybody is going to be even more miserable than usual in wartime we won't fight, no matter how mad we get or how desperately we are driven.

But it might, you know, work out quite the other way. The people with incomes below $3,000 a year are the majority in this country, and they would not suffer very much immediately—if you have $3,000 you pay $120. That might wipe out the doctor's bill or prevent your saving anything, but it would not greatly change your standard of living—until the crash came. And it might happen that the people with incomes under $3,000 would become highly enthusiastic for war because it would bring socialism with it! I commend this thought to Senator Vandenberg.

This bill, like the neutrality act, is only another expression of the United States Congress's supreme lack of confidence in itself.

With its own lack of confidence it undermines the confidence of the country.

While it resents every encroachment of the Executive upon its powers—and, in my opinion, rightly so—it so gravely doubts its own capacity for judgment that it wants to tie its own hands in advance of a crisis.

It wants to appoint a mandatory law as a guardian over itself to protect it (and us) against its possible mistakes. That is the reason for this law. Congress, which has the power to declare war, wants to make it impossible for itself to declare it because of the disaster that the declaration would bring in its wake! And if somebody else declares it on us we shall at least have the disaster.

It's Crucial Period; Cool Courage Needed

MEANWHILE, if there ever was a time in history when we needed to keep our hands free, our eyes open, our hearts confident, our courage cool, that time is right now, right this minute. If there was ever a time when we should give no aid and comfort to aggressors, that time is right now, this minute.

No honest human being in the world can guarantee today that any nation may not become involved in war, with or without its consent.

Nobody can foresee even next week. If we become involved in war our first business will be to win it. Our first business will be to lick our foreign enemies. Afterward, if we so desire, we can lick our own capitalists and economic royalists. If we so desire. But not at the same time. In a war we shall—unless we are to turn ourselves into a totalitarian state—need to use every resource and every incentive.

But this remarkable bill is such as to discourage all initiative even now. For who knows now whether or not we may be drawn into war and who, if this bill is a law, wants to move a finger to increase his income—or the national income—even now?

Just Like Promise To Commit Suicide

THERE ARE LOTS of ways to take the profits out of war. One might, for instance, tax surplus incomes over and above the average of the three preceding years on the assumption that increases are due to war profits and rising prices—because in war the sellers have the market.

Or one might let everybody make as much money as he can and then make a levy on capital when the war is over—and won. Or we may keep out of war by keeping our heads. Or we may decide that an illimitable reign of terror is worse than a war.

But to give notice to the world and ourselves that we shall accompany war with revolution is to make an international promise to commit suicide.

What is the matter with us anyway?

Child Refugees

By Bertram Benedict

GERMANY'S conquest of Bohemia, Moravia, Slovakia, and now Memel may hasten hearing on the Wagner-Rogers bill. This measure would allow 20,000 German refugee children to enter the United States in the next two years. The proposal is now before the Immigration committees of each branch of Congress.

THE REFUGEE children bill sponsored by Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), New York, and Representative Edith N. Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts, would apply only to German children of 14 years of age and under. Since this Government refused to recognize the German conquest of Czecho-Slovakia, there might be some question of whether refugee children from that area would be considered German. When Germany took over Austria, the Austrian immigration quota (1,413) was officially added to the German (25,957), but so far the combined quota (27,370) has not been augmented by the Czecho-Slovak quota (2,874). The annual quota for Lithuania, including Memel, is 386.

In the fiscal year 1937-38, only 17,868 (65 per cent) of the 27,370 immigrants allowed under the present German quota were admitted but the Czecho-Slovak quota of 2,874 was almost completely filled. Under the present immigration laws, children of American citizens are given preference for entry, also children under 21 of aliens who have been admitted to the United States for permanent residence. Of the 42,494 total immigrants admitted last year (out of a total quota allowance of 153,744), approximately 20,000 were under 21 years of age.

THE WAGNER-ROGERS bill would admit, above the quota, 10,000 German children a year for two years. The bill specifies that satisfactory assurance must be given in each case that the entrant will not become a public charge. The intent is that the children will be chosen by the Friends and by groups cooperating with the Friends, and will go into foster homes selected for them. Catholic and Protestant children would be admitted as well as Jewish, and all would go into homes of their respective religions. Presumably, the homes selected would be in all parts of the country, so as to avoid undue congestion in certain cities or in certain geographical areas.

The children to be admitted would be required to get visas from American consuls abroad, who now in practice select and restrict immigration under the quotas; and each consul would be expected to assure himself that the intent of the act had been complied with before issuing a visa. However, before actually coming out of committee the Wagner-Rogers bill will probably be made more specific on these points, and might be amended so as to include additional safeguards.

THE CHILDREN who would be admitted under the Wagner-Rogers bill would be sent in groups, and brothers and sisters would be kept together wherever possible. Feeling that under the provisions of the proposal the children would not compete in the labor market, both the American Federation of Labor and the Congress of Industrial Organizations have indorsed the bill.

Following the intensification of the anti-Jewish measures in Germany last fall, Great Britain admitted 2,800 German refugee children, irrespective of immigration and visa requirements, within six weeks and since then has taken more. Several thousand more are being taken care of in the Netherlands. The parents of most of these children can hardly hope ever to see them again.

Lullaby for Great Grandchild Is Latest Work of Tunesmith, 84

SAMUEL A. THOMPSON

Music Composer for 72 Years, Mr. Thompson Still Has 'Bug' and Finds Radio Often Helps Him to Woo the Mood

(This series is about men and women 70 or older who are finding so-called "old-age" is really a lot of fun. They still are producing and getting a big thrill out of their work or hobbies. You know some qualifiers. Tell us who they are.—Editor's note.)

By Gerald G. Gross.

"Melodies just come to me," says Samuel A. Thompson, nonprofessional tunesmith for the last 72 years and still going strong.

Radio, however, has spoiled him somewhat, the 84-year-old melody maker admits. Before a receiving set was added to his household at 3236 Illinois avenue northwest, he toiled daily at the piano, without waiting for "inspiration." Now he is tempted to tune in on the music of others, awaiting the "urge" before yielding himself to the labors of original composition. Nevertheless, the mood comes upon him often.

Just the other day he wrote a lullaby for his new baby great-grandchild in South Dakota. Shortly before that, he put on paper for the first time a piano solo which had been "lingering in my head" since he was 16 years old.

"I had played the number many times for my family, but always by ear," says Mr. Thompson. "Recently my son-in-law insisted that I write it out and have it printed. So finally, nearly 68 years after the theme came to me, 'Memories' is on paper in its completed form."

Never a Professional Musician

He has composed, and is still writing marches, waltzes, lyrical songs, ballads, etc. Though never a professional musician, he has had the bug ever since, as a 9-year-old in his home town of Richmond, Ind., he went to a piano teacher whom he knew and had her coax his folks into allowing him to take lessons.

He wrote his first tune at the age of 12. It was a waltz, he recalls, but he lost the score many years ago. Since that initial effort he has composed so many things he cannot even begin to estimate the size of the output.

"Once I got an idea for a song while I was riding in a street car, holding to a strap," he says.

The words don't come as easily as the tune. Not long ago he and his two daughters collaborated on a sacred vocal solo, Miss Katheryne L. Thompson and Mrs. Margaret Thompson Hart fitting the words to their father's music. "Come Unto Me," the finished product, has been sung in several Washington churches.

Mr. Thompson was with the Rivers and Harbors Congress for 25 years, all but the first three of which were spent in the post of secretary-treasurer. He retired in 1933. His joining the staff of the Rivers and Harbors Congress came about through his water conservation activities while he was secretary of the Duluth Chamber of Commerce.

"Washington correspondents used to call me 'Deep Water Thompson of Duluth,'" he recalls with a smile.

Illness Plagued Him in Youth

As a child, he was so sickly that doctors told his parents they need not expect to have him with them long. As a young man he had to leave the University of Cincinnati after one year because of illness. Yet by 1898 he was fit enough to join a private expedition into the interior of Venezuela to survey that country's natural resources.

The party discovered mountains and waterfalls never seen before, and few times since, by white men. But one of the most memorable events of the expedition, at least to Mr. Thompson, with his ear for music, was a weird serenade that penetrated the still tropical air one night as he lay in a hammock.

"What is that?" he asked a guide.

"What you hear," came the reply, "is the trilling of the morocoy tortoise."

Mr. Thompson muttered, "impossible!" but he subsequently learned that the guide was telling the truth, that Venezuela really has such a reptile, whose call sounds like the trill of a flute.

Drastic 'Gag' Rule Invoked By Assembly

O'Conor Forces Seek To Halt Filibusters; Saturday Sessions Set for Final Drive

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, March 23.—Administration forces attached a gag-rule accelerator to their steamroller today, announced extra Saturday sessions and "got set" for the final 10-day stretch drive that will end the 1939 Legislature.

Both Houses imposed gag rules. The House slapped on a drastic "choke off" measure limiting debate to 5 minutes by any one member, and limited explanation of votes to 1 minute.

The Senate was more lenient, limiting vote explanation to 5 minutes and imposing no stricture on floor debate.

The gag-rule measures were an obvious aftermath of the 9-hour filibuster last night which failed to halt the steamroller, driven by Administration leaders, which jammed the bill ousting Employment Commissioner Harry C. Jones through second reading by a 16-13 vote.

Stalling Barrier Raised

Floor bosses evidently envisioned a series of filibusters in the next 10 days, and hurriedly moved to slap on the cloture to prevent stalling of the Administration's vital budget and revenue bills in a flow of opposition verbiage.

The limitation on the explanation of votes grew out of the filibuster fight on the Jones' ouster, as Senators used their traditional right to explain their votes as a potent weapon to delay proceedings.

Administration leaders forehandedly delayed reports of the ways and means committee on the budget and revenue measures until after the House was safely gagged. Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor said he expected the budget to emerge from committee tomorrow.

The budget bill is ready for submission to the House, according to John S. White (Democratic-Prince Georges) committee chairman. O'Conor said "minor adjustments" made it necessary to hold up the budget. He also said his supplemental budget would be sent to the House floor at the same time.

$2 Fee Again Sought

O'Conor reiterated his support of the $2 re-registration of automobile drivers as a basic part of his revenue program. This plan was excised from the revenue measure passed by the Senate, but is expected to be put back in by the House committee.

O'Conor also denied that the administration was backing the ouster of Jones. Senator Dudley G. Roe, administration floor leader, said he had not talked with O'Conor about the Jones ouster, but that "men high in party councils had urged its passage."

The Governor declared himself "satisfied" with the progress of the administration's revenue and reorganization programs, and predicted enactment of all his pet legislation.

Little of moment occurred during the short House session, adjourned early to make way for the final legislative dance.

The House approved some 63 bills favorably on second reading, most of them minor local matters. The measure sumbitted by Delegate William Heinekamp (Democrat, Fifth Baltimore) calling for reorganization of the State roads commission, was blocked when the House adopted an unfavorable report.

25-Year High Set As Md. Assembly Gets 1,227 Bills

Annapolis, March 23 (AP).—Legislative records of 25 years' standing toppled today when members were told they had introduced 1,227 bills.

Dr. Horace Flack, of the department of legislative reference, said it was the first time since 1914 that the number of bills introduced had topped 1,200.

The House outstripped the Senate in total introductions, 788 measures carrying the H. B. stamp, while 439 bills were Senate babies.

The record which fell today may be even further eclipsed tomorrow, last day for regular introduction of bills this session. It was expected that at least 75 measures would be introduced before deadline at the close of the sessions tomorrow to push the record over 1,300.

Hagerstown, March 23.—A joint resolution of the board of county commissioners and board of education favoring a 2 per cent general sales tax as a means of raising revenue, was sent to the Washington County delegation to Annapolis today. The two boards state that they feel that the resolution expresses the sentiment of the people here.

Mrs. Cary Overrides House Unit, Revives Child Marriage Curb

Annapolis, Md., March 23 (AP).—Session precedent was set in the Legislature today when Mrs. Vesta M. Cary took the floor and succeeded in overriding an unfavorable judiciary committee report on her bill to prevent child marriage in Maryland.

Mrs. Cary became the first legislator this session to overthrow a committee which had returned an unfavorable report.

The judiciary committee termed the bill "dangerous legislation." It would raise the minimum age for Maryland brides to 16 and grooms to 18. The present law allows 14-year-old boys and 12-year-old girls to obtain marriage licenses with parents' consent.

Mrs. Cary, supported by Mrs. Lulu Boucher, Miss Ruth E. Shoemaker and Fred H. Houck, declared the bill would "take Maryland out of the dark ages and out of the class of Tennessee and India."

Mrs. Cary offered an amendment which would permit marriages of girls under 16 if a physician certified as to pregnancy, to legitimize the child. The amendment was adopted and the House passed the bill to third reading.

Quality Reader Value Stressed By Publisher

Eugene Meyer Talks At Philadelphia On Press Freedom

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Philadelphia, March 23.—Quality of newspaper circulation, rather than mere bulk, and a newspaper's value to its community and its aims and methods determine its usefulness to advertisers, Eugene Meyer, publisher of The Washington Post, told a joint meeting of the Poor Richard Club and the Philadelphia Club of Advertising Women tonight. He spoke on "Freedom of the Press."

"Let space buyers and their principles, the advertising firms, he urged. ". . . find some method of appraising the values of a newspaper to its community" and "appraise a publication's aims and its methods in achieving them."

No Pressure Exerted

"Let me dismiss at once," he said, "the thought that business people who advertise, or their agencies, are sitting around exercising pressure to influence news presentation or editorial policy in any important way."

When he came to Washington six years ago as a newspaper publisher, Meyer said, he was told the Washington field "was a hard nut to crack." "But," he added, "I had a feeling that if we could make out of our paper the fine product I hoped to be able to make it that we would get desirable circulation and that good circulation would justify the use of the paper as an advertising medium in proper proportion in due time. I hoped to perform a really valuable public service by methods that would be sound and constructive."

In this, he said, he had not been disappointed. He recalled his own conception of newspaper value as a reader: "A comprehensiv and honest presentation of the news and the editorial comment on the news." This conception, he said, he has endeavored to build into The Post, together with entertainment features whose value he came later to realize.

Staff Value Stressed

"In rebuilding the paper," Myer said, "obviously the important thing to do was to assemble a staff that shared high ideals of journalism that could fit into the program. To bring such a group together and to make of the agregation of units a harmonious, smooth-working, hard-hitting organization was a task of some considerable magnitude, also requiring time in the accomplishment of the purpose."

From the advertiser's standpoint, the publisher said, two items stand out in consideration of a newspaper in addition to the quantity of its circulration. These were "some appraisal of the quality of that circulation" and "the basis on which they were appealing to their communities."

No Pressure Exerted

"I believe there is no better way," he said, "to appraise the policies of a newspaper publication than through the methods by which circulation is obtained and the ideals that may be seen, I thing, through the circulation promotion."

4-State, D.C. Pact Drafted On Pollution

Va. Assembly Likely To Act on Potomac Control Plan in 1940, Commission Is Told

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., March 23.—The Virginia commission on interstate co-operation was informed today a preliminary plan for the abatement of pollution in the Potomac and its tributaries had been drafted and probably would come before the next General Assembly for consideration.

The plan is embodied in an interstate compact, drafted by a special committee on the Potomac River basin, which was organized under auspices of the council of State governments. The proposed agreement would pave the way to pollution-control through the enactment of uniform legislation in the States affected and the appropriation of a fund not to exceed $30,000 a year by Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia.

Dr. I. C. Riggin, State health commissioner; Maj. Richard Messer, director of the division of sanitary engineering, William R. Shands, chairman of the Virginia commission of interstate co-operation, and Morton L. Wallerstein, of the Virginia planning board, were members of the special committee.

Conversation Centers on Europe At Rumanian Legation Luncheon

Some Guests Among 20 Entertained Assure Mme. Irimescu the Situation 'Couldn't Be As Bad as It Seems in the Papers'

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

HEADLINES FROM EUROPE were topics of luncheon-table talk yesterday when Mme. Irimescu, American-born wife of the Rumanian Minister, entertained a company of 20 at the Rumanian Legation. Not that there was a round-table discussion. Oh no! That's not the procedure when you're lunching with a diplomatic hostess.

HOPE R. MILLER

Talk always turns first to innocuous subjects—the weather, current fashions, forthcoming flower shows and garden tours—but eventually rolls around to something more important, and before you know it, you're discussing what has happened, and may happen, in Europe.

That, at least, was the case yesterday when the company was a cross-section of Capital society and the party was one of the most interesting of the Lenten season. There were a few optimistic guests who, touching lightly on current threats to Rumania, assured Mme. Irimescu that the situation "couldn't possibly be as bad as it seems in the papers." She seemed to think however, that published reports were not exaggerated.

Last spring, during a Lenten season when the outlook was brighter, Mme. Irimescu and her husband came to Washington to make their home. Since then, the Legation at 1607 Twenty-third street has been redecorated under Mme. Irimescu's direction until it now is one of the most attractive diplomatic homes here. Especially lovely is the upstairs drawing room with its soft green carpet and blending draperies; its small, gay rugs from Bucharest and its landscapes portraying beauties of Rumania.

Mme. Irimescu, wearing a trim frock with a white embroidered jabot, yesterday received in the library, which was decorated with roses and tulips. Cocktails were served there as guests assembled, greeted the hostess and each other, and gathered into small groups for a bit of talk before going into the dining room.

On Display
Snappy Spring Hats

Luncheon was served at an oval table, which was centered with a silver urn, flanked by silver pleasants and low bowls of white and pink tulips with their "faces" turned out. Conversation, as I have said, had an international accent, but the trout, ham, and other features of the menu were strictly American; definitely concocted to please the palate and ruin the figure.

Flossy spring hats were very much on display, with red and navy blue leading the field. Senora de Espil's tailored black frock with a blouse of draped silk jersey and a wool skirt was set off with a tiny petal turban perched over one eye. Mrs. Arthur H. Vandenberg's hat had a wide red brim to match her gloves and purse, while Mrs. Stanley Reed's bright red dress was worn with a black hat.

Mme. Ertegun sat at the right of the hostess, while across the table on Senora de Espil's right was Mrs. Owen J. Roberts, who wore a snappy print frock, its black background matching her hat. Mme. Pelenyi, who has been ill recently, was out yesterday for the first time in several days.

Mrs. John R. Williams
Among Guests

Very much a center of attention at the luncheon, and also at the coffee and liquor session that followed in the upstairs drawing room, was Mrs. John R. Williams, who sat next to Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt. Mme. Jean van Kaathoven, who lingered in the dining room until the ranking luncheon guests walked out, said she never had the least trouble with protocol. "I just always manage to leave last," she averred.

Mme. Mircea Victor Babes, who with her husband, the retiring Counselor of the Rumanian Legation, will be off early next week en route to Bucharest, bemoaned the fact that she is leaving Washington. She was a pretty picture in a black frock worn with a black hat, set back on her very blond hair.

Mrs. William D. Leahy, who is being feted widely these days, was also in the company; as were Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck, whose smart blue frock was worn with a smart raspberry straw hat; Miss Bell Gurnee, who—if anybody happens to ask you—is one of the best-informed women around these parts; Mrs. Woodson Houghton, wearing one of the snappiest hats I've seen this season, a black and pink number that was most becoming; Mrs. Frances Parkinson Keyes, Mrs. Marvin McNeil, Mrs. H. Charles Spruks and Miss Ruth B. Shipley.

Cornelia Skinner Honored at Tea

Cornelia Otis Skinner, who is starring in "Candida" here this week, was guest of honor at a tea given yesterday by Mrs. J. L. Houghteling at her residence on Wyoming avenue.

Both Mrs. Houghteling and Miss Skinner are former Bryn Mawr students. The former is a graduate, but Miss Skinner spent only two years there, as she was more interested in stage work.

John Cromwell, who plays the part of the poet in "Candida," also was present yesterday. Presiding at the tea table, which was centered with spring flowers, were Mrs. Theodore Wilkinson, Mrs. W. R. Munroe and Mrs. Henry Abbott. The latter was chairman of the Bryn Mawr scholarship benefit which took over the opening night of "Candida."

Mrs. James Rowe, president of the Washington Bryn Mawr Club, was another guest, accompanied by Mr. Rowe. Others present included Mr. and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll Miller, Mr. and Mrs. John Tate, George Abell, rs. Howell Moorhead and Mrs. Edward Sturdevant.

Minister of Siam And Wife Give Legation Dinner

Others present were the Minister of Portugal and Mme. Bianchi, Col. and Mrs. D. B. Crafton, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Charles Spruks, Mrs. Thomas Cowell, and Luang Dithakar Bhakdi, second secretary of the Siamese Legation.

Miss Agnes Richardy will serve as maid of honor for her sister and James F. Reilly will be best man.

Miss Richardy and her fiance were guests of honor at a cocktail party Tuesday at the Raleigh.

Ing, wife of the former embassy counselor; Dr. James T. C. Yu, Chinese consul general in New York, and Miss Elizabeth Wang.

Tonight Mme. Koo will share honors with Miss Hilda Yen at a dinner to be given by Bishop Yu-pin. Miss Yen, young aviatrix, is making a tour of the United States to obtain help for war-torn China, and will arrive at the Washington Airport today. She will be accompanied by Miss Y. C. Lee, daughter of a Hongkong manufacturer, who also will attend the dinner.

At the tea given for Mme. Koo yesterday by Lady Bradford Leslie, the guest of honor set a new style note, wearing a Chinese silk gown with a background of cyclamen and large painted flowers. Her shoes were of cyclamen with gold platform soles, her hat was of matching shade, and her wrap a three-quarter length cape of silver fox.

Lady Leslie, who has been receiving each Thursday, will discontinue her "at-homes" during April, but will resume them in May in her new apartment at 2101 Connecticut avenue.

Baron Schell To Sail April 19 For Budapest

Baron Paul Schell, who has been secretary of the Hungarian Legation here for so long that he almost might be considered a cave dweller, has set a date for departure. He will sail from New York April 19 for Budapest, where he will be on duty at the Foreign Office. He has known since early winter that he would be transferred, but his departure has been postponed several times.

Most diplomats are assigned to the Capital for only three or four years, but Baron "Kepi" Schell has been here for 13. He has been in wide demand as an "extra man" at parties and is known as one of the outstanding bridge players in the Capital.

Washington and the legation staff will lose another popular bachelor when Anthony de Balasy, the Counselor, departs for his homeland. He has been ordered back for duty, but the date of his return is indefinite, and he may be there until next autumn. He returned earlier in the winter from a vacation in Hungary, where he had expected to remain at the Foreign Office.

About The Town

With Dudley Harmon

Mme. Koo, Wife of the Chinese Ambassador To Paris, Prefers Oriental Dress to Western

CONCERNING Mme. Wellington Koo:

Before the war with Japan caused Chinese women to think of other things besides fashions, Mme. Koo was regarded as the style setter for China. Her collection of Oriental gowns is fabulous, and she prefers them to Western dress.

Her chief hobby was dogs until her husband, Chinese Ambassador to Paris, suggested that she sell her pups to raise money for Chinese refugees. She adores antique jewelry and has a great many fine pieces.

The daughter of one of China's wealthiest men, who made a fortune in rubber plantations in Java, Mme Koo was educated in Hongking. She met her present husband when she was living in London, where he formerly represented his country.

UNLIKE most of her countrywomen, Mme. Koo is fond of sports, and swims, rides horseback and plays tennis. Though rather reserved in manner, she is very fond of society, and cuts quite an impressive figure in the smart world of Paris. She speaks French, German and English as well and fluently as her native language.

Mme. Koo, who came to Washington on the invitation of the Ambassador, Dr. Hu-Shih, will probably leave for New York this week-end and will return to France next month.

THE Second Secretary of the Argentine Embassy and Senora de Zuberbuhler will leave the end of April for Buenos Aires, where the latter will meet for the first time her seven sisters-in-law. As all of them speak perfect English, and as Senora de Zuberbuhler has been studying Spanish diligently, she is not worried.

Mariano Zuberbuhler has been transferred back to the foreign office, much to the regret of their many friends here. They had tentatively planned a month's vacation in Paris before going to South America, but will go directly to Buenos Aires instead. They will stay with Senora de Zuberbuhler's father, George A. Garrett, and Mrs. Garrett, before leaving, as they are giving up their home on Leroy place April 1.

CORNELIA OTIS SKINNER is suffering neither from dithers nor jitters during her current stay in Washington. This very attractive actress and witty author is having rather a quiet time of it socially, her only big party being the tea which Mrs. J. L. Houghteling gave yesterday in her honor. Miss Skinner, who has dark hair and eyes, prefers simple black frocks, with which she wears different colored accessories and pearl necklaces. She says she has no hobbies, as what with writing, acting and managing her home (in private life she is Mrs. Austin Blodgett) she has no spare time. Miss Skinner speaks perfect French, having studied under the diction director of the Comedie Francaise.

PARTY NOTES: Mrs. Chester Wells will entertain at luncheon on Wednesday at the Metropolitan Club . . . Henry Collins and the Commercial Secretary of the British Embassy and Mrs. J. P. Summerscale will be joint hosts at a cocktail party on Tuesday at the latter's residence on Tracy place.

MRS. Frederick Sterling, wife of the United StSates Minister to Sweden, is visiting here as the guest of her mother, Mrs. John R. Williams. She arrived to spend the Easter holidays with a young son, who is at school here, and will sail April 25 to return to Sweden, which she says both she and Mr. Sterling adore.

Mrs. Sterling has inherited a great deal of the fabulous energy of her mother. She used to conduct the woman's page of a local newspaper, then ran a smart Connecticut avenue shop. Lately she has been decorating and renting apartments. Mrs. Sterling is a sister of Mrs. Joseph Leiter.

TRAVEL NOTES: Mrs. Jerauld Wright will go to New York next week for a week's stay with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Phillips B. Thompson, who have been vacationing in Aiken . . . Mrs. Kenneth Jenkins, of Warrenton, is in Palm Beach visiting Mrs. Eva Stewart Spilman, also of the hunt country. She will meet Mr. Jenkins, who has been on the famous schooner, Seven Seas, while it made a six-week cruise to the West Indies . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel S. Sands, who were married ten days ago in Baltimore, will return to their farm Middleburg for the spring season after a Southern honeymoon . . . Ogden Hammond, jr., has sailed for his first diplomatic post as vice consul in Vienna.

Kahns Honored At Buffet Supper

Honoring Dr. and Mrs. Ruben L. Kahn, of Michigan, Dr. and Mrs. Thomas Cajiras entertained at a buffet supper last evening at their home on Sixteenth street.

Mrs. Cajigas, who was assisted in receiving by her duaghter Miss Anita Cajigas, was gowned in royal blue, fashioned with a pattern of brilliants at intervals on the dress. Miss Cajigas wore a black crepe, with two costume clips at the neckline. Mrs. Kahn was in black lace with a corsage of red roses.

Among the guests were Rear Admiral and Mrs. Perceval S. Rossiter, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Harold W. Smith Maj. Gen. and Mrs. Amos A. Fries, the Military Attache of the Cuban Embassy, Maj. Felipe Munilla and Senora de Munilla, and the newly arrived Charge d'Affaires of the Chilean Embassy, Guillermo Gazitua.

Also Col. and Mrs. Harold P. Sawyer, Col. and Mrs. Rufus L. Holt and Miss Jane Holt, among many others.

Dr. Kahn of the University of Michigan, whose new medical discoveries have been of wide interest in the medical world, is here to do research work on his forthcoming two medical books, which will be published in September. While here he has lectured at the Army Medical School and the Naval Medical Center, and is contemplating a lecture tour through South America later in the season.

Also among the guests were the Commercial Secretary of the Chilean Embassy, Carlos Campbell del Campo and Senora de Campbell; Dr. and Mrs. Harry Anderson, Mrs. J. Newton Brewer, Dr. Luis Herrera, Col. and Mrs. James P. Crawford, Maj. and Mrs. Hugh R. Gilmore, Miss Rosita Crevella, Dr. and Mrs. Winfred Overholser, and Dr. and Mrs. Watson Eldridge.

Arthur Davis Weds Pearl E. Roach

In a setting of spring flowers and ferns, Miss Pearl Evelyn Roach, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Percy D. Roach, of Washington, was married at 8 o'clock last evening to Arthur Augustus Davis, son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Davis of this city. The ceremony took place at the Church of the Good Shepherd, the Rev. Cornelius S. Abbott officiating.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a white slipper satin gown made on princess lines, and a full length veil attached to a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried calla lilies.

Miss Elizabeth Roach, the maid of honor, wore orchid marquisette, made like the bride's frock, with a fitted jacket. A hat of the same material completed her costume and she carried Johanna Hill roses.

The bridesmaids were the Misses Florence Henderson and Nettie Barr. The former wore pink slipper satin, with large puffed sleeves and a matching hat, and Miss Barr was in a similar frock of blue slipper satin. They carried pink roses. John B. Foret was best man, and the ushers were David L. Reidy, Norman F. Kessler, J. George Gately and Raymond T. Foley.

A reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony. Mrs. Roach wore rose lace with blue accessories and a corsage of gardenias, and the bridegroom's mother was in Dubonnet lace and a similar corsage.

Feted at Dinner

Brig. Gen. and Mrs. Lorenzo D. Gasser were among the dinner guests last evening of Mrs J. D. Howe and her sister, Miss Maude Warren, of Tiffin, Ohio, in the Shoreham Blue Room. Also present was Miss Alice Thurstin, of Toledo.

Mrs. Lucas, Mrs. Clark Give Joint 'At Home'

Hostesses Establish Record for Standing In Receiving Line

By Elizabeth Ford.

While their husbands were busy making laws on Capitol Hill Mrs. D. Worth Clark, wife of Senator Clark of Idaho, and Mrs. Scott W. Lucas, wife of Senator Lucas of Illinois, were making social history on Massachusetts avenue. At least they hold the record this season for standing in a receiving line at a tea 1 hour lnoger than any other hostesses in town. Their joint "at home," which took place at the residence of Mrs. Lucas, began at 3 o'clock and lasted until 6; they shook hands with dozens of guests; and they looked just as perky, when the party was over as when it began.

Mrs. Lucas was attired in a floor length gown of soft dove gray with which she were a corsage of pink orchids. Mrs. Clark was dressed in a frock made with a black skirt, red saraband and sheer white blouse. Her flowers were gardenias.

Mrs. Edward Burke
At Tea Table

Among those who officiated at the tea table were rs. Edward R. Burke, wearing a black hat with touches of white; Mrs. James H. Hughes, Mrs. William O. Borh, Mrs. Ralph O. Brewster, whose hat was covered with pink roses; Mrs. Gillingham Morrill, Mrs. Robert C. Horner, Mrs. William Arnold, Mrs. Clarence Norton Goodwin in black chiffon; Mrs. Addison T. Smith, Mrs. Raymond Clapper in a black suit, and Mrs. Basil Manly.

Those who generally assisted and who couldn't have been any more gracious if they had been in the receiving line themselves were Mrs. Eugene Cox, in a wine-colored dress; Mrs. Lawrence Arnold, whose black dress with white braid trimmings looked unusually attractive with her light hair; Mrs. Ralph E. Church, Mrs. H. B. Arledge in a black dress topped with a silver jacket; Mrs. Phil Ferguson in fragile blue; Mrs. Charles Halleck, Mrs. Walter Wyatt, in black; Mrs. John J. Dempsey in pale lime, and Mrs. Harry B. Coffee in gray.

This was one occasion when guests didn't pile up at the last minute but arrived all through the afternoon, stopping to chat leisurely with friends whom they glimpsed here and there.

Among the Guests

Some of those at the party: Mrs. Bruce Barton, Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, jr., Mme. Constantine Oumansky, wife of the Charge d'Affaires of the Soviet Embassy; Mme. Mehmet Ertegun, wife of the Turkish Ambassador; Mrs. Daniel Reed, in a black dress figured in fuchisia; Mrs. Jacob Leander Loose, wearing a fox cape; Mrs. Ickes, Mrs. Louis Caldwell, in black; and Mrs. Charles F. McLaughlin whose black hat was trimmed with a blue veil.

Still others: Mrs. Ernest Lundeen, wearing a black dress with a fine silver stripe and a small red velvet hat; Mrs. Harry Engelbright in black with gold accents Mrs. Alben Barkley in black; Mrs. Walter F. Boren, in a brown tweed ensemble and many, many others.

If you stopped to admire the centerpiece of yellow roses, daffodils and daisies on the buffet table, you should know right now that Mrs. Clark arranged them herself, as well as the pink tulips and sprays of forsythia in the living room.

Easter Styles to Be Previewed Today in Annual Connecticut Ave. Fashion Promenade

Show Will Respond To Whims of Matrons

New Ensembles to Appeal to Mature Women As Well as Their Sub-Deb Daughters; Dancing Exhibits Will Be Held at Several Places

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THE GRACIOUSLY mature woman of the world will have her hour in the fashion firmament today, as well as her sub-deb daughter. In three handsomely set and cleverly arranged style showings the seventh annual Connecticut Avenue Easter Fashion Promenade will be presented. Showings will be held at 2:30 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon and at 8 o'clock tonight in the main ballroom of the Mayflower Hotel.

And the styles themselves? Well, they remain to be seen. But to let you in backstage for a moment, here is a preview of the really quite glamorous ensembles and accessories that will be applauded from time to time today. This will be one style showing that will respond to the demands and whims of the matron, as much as to those enfant - terribles who need little catering, save something new and gay to slip on their skinny little number twelves.

MARSHALL ADAMS

One ingeniously draped gown, which will appeal to the woman of largess is a dinner dress of cyclamen and chartreuse. Although these colors are exotic in themselves, this long sleeved frock is so adroitly draped that it achieves a Grecian simplicity of proportion on the mature figure.

For Fuller Figures

The bolero is another designer-trick which will be featured during today's showings. It is destined for immediate popularity with the older and fuller figures as well as with the sylphlike younger set. Any number of wisely subdued version of the never-fail bolero will be seen today, among them trim navy and black woolen and crepe models, their bodices or blouses as fine and sheer and dainty as a baby's cristening robe.

This baby influence will be noticed throughout these coordinated fashions. Emile, that indefatible coiffure stylist, who is busy now making the attractive mannequins even more beautiful for todays shows, is sculpting several heads with small infant-like ringlets, artistocratic looking but nevertheless babyish in char-ac-er. Many of the corresponding gowns and hats look almost too naive to be called "little girl" as they have that deceptive innocence of a new baby. One such frock is a school girl jumper outlined with a sweetheart neckline and ending in a demure lace shirred guimpe, fresh as paint.

Checks and Stripes

But you women of sturdier stuff—you who don't want to look like cooing small-fry—what is there in today's showing for you? There is, for one thing, a well assembled group of three-piece wardrobe suits, some in roughage fabrics, some in smooth lightweight woolens, some furred, others as honest of fur as a whippet. Color, strident and rich, is the kynote to these practical suits with their matching topcoats. Many are checked, either in tiny Shepherd checks or in bolder Scotch plaid tartans. One of the best looking of the ensemble ideas which you will see today is a pin-stripped woolen topper in white on black, proud of its new Alix panel treatment. Its dress beneath is black crepe with a blouse of white chiffon, pin striped in bright color.

Gown of Danger-Red Net

One sport frock you can't overlook sponsors a Joseph-coat-of many-color idea. It is simply tailored in washable and non-crushable rayon in the shirtmaker tradition. Shades of wine, brown and chartreuse are only a few of the tones blended in the fabric. As striking in its own way in an evening gown of danger-red net. It is as Spanish as tabasco sauce for its whole skirt is formed of cascading black ruffles. An immense cape of red taffeta will be worn with this, which will transform itself into an apron upon the slightest excuse.

Real Beauties Model

So many out-of-town visitors to these annual Connecticut Avenue showings are fascinated with the number of beautiful models and spectators present. Perhaps one of the reasons for the Washington woman's obvious charms is the number of authoritative beauticians, health culturists and dancing school experts, who aid these women to greater physical perfection. To prove that all is not sacrifice of self to electric horses and Scotch hose, several of these institutions will feature amusing dancing exhibits in conjunction with the fashion showing. Arthur Murray will present a Minuet in Swing, with Ethel Fistere introducing the "World's Fair Shag." Leroy Thayer, president of the Dancing Masters of America, will follow his success as local sponsor of the Lambeth Walk by presenting "The Chestnut Tree." Emile's Health Club will prove through reducing exercises how important good posture and weight control are for the youthful-looking new fashions.

James Style, usually busy unearthing antique fabrics and rare glass for his interior decoration clients, is at work on the decoration of the Mayflower stage. He has plucked thousands of greens to cover the curtain of the stage which will be centered with a pagoda of fresh flowers and fern. The promenade leading to the ballroom will be equally decorative with displays of Connecticut Avenue merchants' gifts, luggage and accessory suggestions.

A Woman's New York

—By Alice Hughes

Publicity Backfiire On Pretty Woman Lawyer of New York

New York, March 23.

EVERY NOW and then, in this publicity-crazy town, some of it kicks back and cracks the recipient a pretty nasty blow where it hurts. Promotion and publicity, I am increasingly convinced, actually run this large collection of angle-chasing villages, and—alas—not all of it can do good. Take the case of Counselor Estelle M. Barb, 23 years old and the prettiest young lady lawyer that ever harangued a jury of her peers. Of course, the counselor was real news, too!

ALICE HUGHES

The local tabloid press went stark crazy with delight when this cute girl appeared in court to defend a fellow named James Pryor, woh was charged with murder. Though all the gentlemen in the room smoothed their hair and straightened their ties, and even simpered slightly, some of the old lawyers were alarmed and distrustful. Trial Judge Bohan asked if she understood the responsibility.

"I wouldn't undertake it if I didn't feel I could do it justice," replied Counselor Barb, adding that she had already won 10 cases out of 11—no bad batting average.

Black-eyed, with lush brown hair and a pretty figure in black, she drew the cameramen, who snapped her variously, including the one with the knees crossed. Judge Bohan decreed an adjournment in the murder cause, whereupon Counselor Barb went into another court to defend a maid charged with snatching a $200 ring.

This, I am sad to say, turned out a Waterloo for pretty Miss Barb. The cute barrister was eloquent. She said her client was "not quite bright" and had only taken the bauble because she was mad at being paid only 75 cents a day. Suddenly Judge Brancato rapped for silence and pronounced these cruel words:

"I am not going to be cajoled by the sweet words of a Portia who seems to have set the town agog and obtained more publicity in one day than Tom Dewey!"

Bang! went the gavel and bang went the client to chokey for a spell! It is too bad that the attractive Counselor Barb got all this press notice! As for the judge—oh, these ment!

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Speaking of publicity, what did you think of that gag of kidnaping Charlie McCarthy here? So did I. Though Edgar Bergen, his boss and papa, vigorously denied that it was a stunt, I had mby own opinion, and so have you. Sorry, but it was too obvious. Yet it made Page 1 of almost every paper in New York. So it goes. Spouse Len Hal says he thinks of kidnaping Dorothy Lamour on the same basis. Silly old Sweet! He couldn't snatch a lead nickel from a blind man—but it does show that the dear old thing is still in there punching, even at his age! . . .

Mary Martin, the Texas cutie who still owns some of he town by singing "My Heart Belongs to Daddy" and by looking so cunning, caught even my eye at the Whirling Top Club a few nights ago in a strapless evening froth of white tulle with a full skirt and seed pearls on the bodice. As for the boys, lawks alive! They knocked themselves out just getting near enough for a good long stare at the baby-doll!

Our World's Fair is making frantic efforts to zip things up for its fast-approaching start. For one thing, its figure sharks say that admission and all the pay shows can be had for no more than $15—though the figger first quoted was four times that. There's been a dangerous lag out there in Flushing, but Grover Whalen and his helpers are now moving into high.

One of our most famous big stores just crashed out with a fine fashion show for "The Woman of Forty," highlighting numbers in the sizes between 36 and 44. Smart Amy Fagan, the store's stylist, ran the orgy in great shape—36 to 44 . . .

The week's favorite of your New York headline-hound—"What to Do When Lightning Comes." Naturally, the answer, in 250 ringing words, boils right smack down to "Nothing."

Our eye-poppers are still popping their pretty orbs at the four patinum fox skins just shown by an Avenue store. There are said to be only 11 of these biological mistakes in existence. Duchess Wally Windsor has one. They are beautiful—a light bluish gray with a fine luster—and the shoppey has smacked a price tab of $5,000 apiece on these fabulous pelts. But let's not feel badly!

Peales' Portrait of Lafayette To Be Returned to Stratford

Missing Work, Which Hung in Ancestral Home of the Lees, Is Located in California Home

The mystery of a missing Peale portrait has been solved, and a number of Washington notables will have the opportunity to see it restored to its original setting early in May. It is a likeness of Lafayette, painted by Charles Willson Peale and presented to Light Horse Harry Lee by Lafayette himself.

For two generations the picture hung on the walls of Stratford Hall, the ancestral home of the Lees—and then it disappeared. Recently discovered, it is to be returned to Stratford Hall at a formal ceremony on May 7 when the French Ambassador, Count Rene de Saint Quentin, will make the presentation. Several other members of the diplomatic corps, high ranking officials and prominent persons from all over the country are being invited to the event.

The search for the picture was begun some years ago by Miss Ethel Armes, who spent more than a decade investigating Stratford and its past and who assembled her material into a book, "Stratford Hall, the Great House of the Lees."

After a search that took Miss Armes abroad, the portrait finally was located in Ross, Calif., in the home of Thomas Claggett Berry. In response to the joint solicitation of Miss Armes and the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation, which is restoring Stratford, Mr. Berry consented to have the painting returned to Stratford and hung in the old mansion. It will be presented in memory of his brother, Brien Berry.

The event will be in connection with the annual meeting of the board of directors of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation. A number of prominent Washington women have taken an active part in work of the foundation for some time. Mrs. Harry B. Hawes, chairman of one of the committees, frequently spends spring week-ends at Straford, where she has a cottage adjoining the estate. Last spring she entertained at a buffet luncheon on the lawn of Stratford Hall, having as her guest of honor Mrs. John Nance Garner, president of the Senate Ladies Luncheon Club, a number of other Washington residents and several members of the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation.

At that party guests were seated at small tables arranged under the spreading beech trees, and, for the first time in more than 60 years, luncheon was served from the square brick kitchen—a separate building—where meals were prepared for Lees for many years. Among the guests was Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, who recalled that not so many years ago she and her late husband visited Stratford and found it virtually in ruins. That was before the Robert E. Lee Memorial Foundation began the work that has aroused Nation-wide interest.

Dr. Helen Miller To Be Speaker

Dr. Helen Hill Miller, distinguished writer on political subjects, will be the guest speaker at a dinner of the education committee of the Washington Branch of the American Association of University Women, this evening at 6:30 o'clock at the clubhouse, 1634 I street northwest.

Since 1934, Dr. Miller has been doing editorial writing for the Agricultural Adjustment Administration, and her latest book, "Democracy Has Roots," is just off the press.

Miss Elsie Green, second vice president of the Washington branch and chairman of education, will preside.

The art appreciation group will have as guest speaker Thursday night, Theodore Irving Coe. Mr. Coe, technical secretary of the structural service of the American Institute of Architects, will give an illustrated lecture on "Constructing the Supreme Court Building."

Miss Louise Newell, chairman of the group, will also show slides illustrating the two sculptured pediments of the building and the frieze around the walls of the chambers, and give an interpretation of this art work.

"When Should I Send Flowers?"

"Say It With Gude's Flowers, NOW" is a happy thought that bridges the dual impulse of economy and graceful giving.

Give Gude's flowers to gracefully discharge an obligation or extend felicitations, when the time comes to say au revoir, for the shut-in friend, weddings, birthdays, anniversaries—in fact, the thought of flowers does not cease with any special holiday or social season. The giving of GUDE'S flowers is a beautiful gesture which runs throughout the year.

A stunning group of daytime frocks from Connecticut Avenue's smartest shops. 1—Stark white stripes on coal black make this fresh-as-paint crepe dress a "must" on your spring dress list. 2—The popular coat and dress ensemble. The print is a seashell motif in caramel. The coat is a double-breasted model in sheer black wool. 3—For the sports scene: a dainty knitted chenille cardigan in dawn blue with a flared skirt in matching shantung-type crepe. 4—Colorful bolero dress in yellow and black with a delicate lingerie dress top. 5—In the vogue for jacket dresses: dusty rose combined with May wine. The dusty rose crepe of the dress is appliqued on the woolen jacket with dramatic effect. 6—The fact that Paris sponsors frothy touches of white this season brings this svelte black crepe bolero dress to the fore. Its little girl silhouette is very flattering. 7—Pleats! Pleats! They run every which way on the demure capri blue top of this navy crepe dress. The skirt is very full, boasting eight gores.

Don't Crowd A Room With Furniture

Too Many Chairs Rob An Intimate Place Of All Its Charm

By Elizabeth MacRae Boykin.

"THUMBS DOWN" on crowding a room with too much furniture, no matter how much of a tug it is to part with any specific piece. You have to be hardboiled about that. The room of your dreams may be as big as all outdoors, but if the living room you actually have on your hands is small and insignificant, a lady might just as well make the best of that. And remember that intimate rooms have their own charm.

Loraine R. has this problem on her hands: Her living room is small and the furniture seems to crowd it, and yet the furniture is too good to discard. She has three easy chairs, a sofa, large radio, a long sofa table, two small tables. Sofa and one chair are in burgundy covering, one chair is green and another rust. However, one of these chairs will be replaced by another chair that is going to be recovered. The question is, which chair to eliminate and what color for the new chair that is being brought in. And what color should the new rug be? What color for new lamps? What for curtains and sofa cushions? The wall paper is light sand color with dark doors and woodwork. Loraine wants our advice.

In the first place, I doubt if a 9x12 room can possibly hold that much furniture gracefully. And so I think it would be wise to try to manage with just two easy chairs—choose the least bulbous ones to retain. Then I have an idea that you may have to get rid of the large sofa table, though you just may be able to work it in.

The best recipe for this room I'd say would be, first to paint the dark woodwork in sand color like the walls; then have curtains of sand color voile finished at the top with a swag valance of jade green, but with no side draperies.

The heavy furniture I'd slipcover in softly patterned floral chintz with a sand ground, then add odd cushions in jade and lamp bases in jade color pottery with shades of the same chintz you've used on the furniture. You might get an attractive effect by painting narrow picture frames in jade, and you could have gold wall brackets to hold pots of green leaves. For the rug, choose a plain-effect sand color.

The reason I'm recommending a more or less monotone color scheme is to make the large furniture recede a bit. A small room gains inches—sometimes feet—if you eliminate decisive contrasts of color or pattern. And, of course, it will be pleasantly tranquil.

Washable Walls Like Blackboard Now Featured

WALLS TO write on—that we'd say is news. They're made of a new kind of glass that looks and works like a blackboard but it doesn't wear out. You just wash it off when it needs it—that eliminates the chalk dust atmosphere that lingers around most blackboards. So far, it's just available in black or dark green, but later there will be other colors.

Use a panel of this new blackboard glass in a child's room or else run it all around the lower part of the room like a dado or like wainscoating. Then the children can scribble to their heart's content.

Which set me to musing over the rest of a room like that. White walls and woodwork, perhaps, would be my choice with an animal wall paper border just above the blackboard and repeated again around the top molding below the ceiling. This same wall paper border could be run around the windows—then sheer white ruffled curtains. For the floor, how would natural plank patterned linoleum be?

Scotch plaid gingham for bedspread and chair covers would finish off the room with a fine fillip, and nothing could be nicer than Scotch plaid wool blankets to see such a room through childhood. Add Scotch plaid lampshades, too.

Children's Clothes Gay for Spring

New York (AP).—There is more color in juvenile clothes than ever. Hyacinth (a light violet), cyclamen roses and pinks, bright navy blue and teal blue are colors for coats as well as for frocks this spring.

Many coats are made of lightweight wools and tweeds and cut on a fitted silhouette with more fullness in the skirt than last year.

Another news note in clothes for the young crowd lies in suits. Designers have made them in the new colorful tweeds with fitted jackets, gored skirts and topcoats or capes to match.

Starched Look For Spring Frocks

New York, (AP).—The starched white touch is very important this spring. It appears in pique school-girl collars and cuffs, in white organdy guimpes, in yokes of eyelet embroidery or starched white lace. Scarcely a dark costume is complete without it. It is even seen in hat brims of eyelet embroidery or white guipure.

A number of the new frocks are topped by jackets of the same or constrasting material.

Norway Develops Rare Blue Fox Fur

Paris (AP).—Norway and nature have conspired to produce a new fur, claimed to be as rare as chinchilla or sable. It has been given the luxury name of "platinum."

The Norwegian government is backing the cross-breeding experiments which have produced the new variety. The animal that furnishes the pelt is a cross between an albino fox and the lightest variety of silver fox. This year, for the first time, the skins have attained the light, bluish-gray shade established as their standard of perfection.

The points of this new fur are, in addition to the light, bluish-gray color, a narrow, slightly dark center line or stripe, with shoulders and throat pure white, white predominating in the head and for a third of the way up the bushy tail.

Umbrellas Carried By Paris Models

Paris (AP).—That prime ministers can stir up fashions as well as Fascists, is demonstrated in Paris dressmakers' collections. Crook-handled umbrellas a la Chamberlain, are being carried by mannequins these days.

In New York it's Fifth Avenue—

IN WASHINGTON IT'S CONNECTICUT AVENUE

In chic accessories there's two ways about it! And both are shown above. Sketched at the right, an off-the-face hat in smooth black straw, with a spring garland of flowers as decor. The other good companions are comprised of an unusual pouch bag, and shoes that get down to brass tacks for chic. All sketched from Connecticut Avenue shops.

Sketched right, accessories for a spring suit: a jaunty sailor in rough straw draped with taffeta. A bag swung from the shoulder, and doeskin gauntlets chemically treated—when soiled, rub them together and the dirt disappears. Lacquered mesh shoes trimmed with white patent add le dernier cri to this accessory ensemble.

Build your spring wardrobe around a good foundation. The caprice of fashion has again given you a silhouette that demands a small waist while emphasizing the feminine curve at bust and hip. Meet the challenge with this model in sandglo, a new flattering skin tone. —FRI Post Mckone & Daggs.

Smooth Manner Aid to Success

"WELL BRED, a good background!" That's the way Mr. Executive mentally sums up Betty.

A new employe, she responds to introductions with the always correct, "How do you do!"

Obviously, she won't be the kind who interrupts her employer's conversation when she has a message to deliver. She'll wait until asked to speak. Nor will she refer to others as "Brown" or "Williams." She'll say "Mr. Brown, Miss Williams."

Smooth manners are admired by fellow employes, too—and you win the nicest of them as friends. So they'll find you as poised socially as in business, know the correct, considerate thing to do.

How shall you act when you're walking with a friends—and a friend of hers stops to speak? Walk on a step or two, wait until their talk ends or you are introduced.

What's smooth behavior when you and your new beau spend the day motoring in the country?

Let him assist you, open the car door for you. But if you wish the window raised or lowered, don't ask him to stop driving for that purpose. Ask pleasantly, "Do you mind?" and do the little chore yourself.

When you stop to dine at a smart restaurant or tearoom, keep purse and gloves on your lap, not on the table. You avoid embarrassment in ordering if you know the words "a la carte" on the menu mean larger portions of single dishes, "table d'hote" refers to complete meals of smaller portions.

And when a man comes to call, it's a courtesy to him to introduce him to your parents. When he leaves, cordial and correct for your mother to join you to say good-by, add her invitation to yours to call again.

Such Treatment of Walls Brings The Sense of the Out-of-Doors, Stimulating to Tired Nerves

A NATIONALLY known interior decorator said not long ago that vistas are the soul of a room.

Certainly in these days of crowded living when activities which would have filled up an entire week in the lives of our grandmothers are crammed into the short space of one day, a room with vistas of quiet waters, trees and flowers is a tonic to our overstrained nervous systems.

Yet it is not always possible to obtain such views from the windows of city homes and apartments where restful surroundings are even more important than in the country. One of the happiest ways of introducing vistas into a room that either has a scarcity of windows or else is so situated that the views from the windows are unattractive is the photo mural placed behind a large simulated window of plate glass.

Such a wall treatment brings into a room the sense of the out-of-doors and of wide reaches of sky and land that are stimulating to tired nerves.

If peach plate glass is used instead of white the effect is all the more attractive, giving the mural an appearance of being bathed in sunshine.

A showing of fall interiors recently held in New York contained several interesting examples of the use murals behind plate glass to simulate large windows. In a living room a bay window was created by placing curved panels at two wall intersections, using a large photo mural of a tropical scene and placing beneath it a curving sectional divan. In a dining room a ceiling-to-floor mural of a lake and mountain scene was placed behind glass and an adjoining wall nook was filled with potted plants to suggest further the out-of-doors.

Do you photograph well?

A thing to remember: A girl's best point is her hair when she is posing in front of the lenses, or doing anything else important. To make the most of her beauty she should have a coiffure by a shop that will give her that "little girl look" with clever bows and ringlets: Sketched: A pretty-as-a-picture dinner dress in white satin to put spots of loveliness before his eyes.

All admirers of Benny Goodman, attention please. In London they may be still doing the Lambeth Walk—but at the Connecticut Avenue fashion promenade something new will be done in tripping the light fantastic. It's the minuet in swing! The "Chestnut Tree!" "The "World's Fair Shag!" Guaranteed to make your heart beat faster, and your feet tap to time.

Action ahead? Whatever sports you intend to indulge in, be prepared with these hose that give you delightful freedom of the knees. This freedom from two tiny mesh sections under the knee of each stocking. They stretch as you bend, then come neatly back into place. They cut your stocking budget in two.

New Silhouettes For Younger Set

New York (AP).—Paris, Hollywood and the world of grown-ups have had great influence on juvenile fashions this spring.

The skating silhouette, basque bodice, Victorian fashions, petticoats and accent on color all launched in Paris for smart women this season or last, are repeated in little girls' clothes. The Hollywood vogue for slacks is reflected in togs for boys.

Today's Health Talk

By Logan Clendening, M. D.

Chemical Factors in Starches That Govern Digestibility and Absorption

Important practical work, checked by scientific standards, is being done on the value of various foodstuffs and methods of cooking them as it affects their digestibility. There is a common belief that imported starches, such as arrowroot, tapioca and sago because of their greater digestibility, are superior to the domestically produced starches derived from our own corn, wheat and rice grains.

The work of Day on the digestibility of cooked starches from various sources indicates that the factors influencing digestibility are substances known as rose and blue amylose. In the course of cooking apparently rose amylose is changed to blue amylose. This is the chemical change that makes cooked starches more readily digested and absorbed. There is more rose amylose in wheat, corn, rice and barley starches and relatively little in potato, arrowroot, tapioca and sago.

It requires about two hours to change the rose amylose into blue amylose, so a shorter cooking time is required to render potato, arrowroot, tapioca and sago digestible. However, the difference is more theoretical than real, because the greater appetizing effect of cooked corn and cereal offsets the question of cooking time.

Other experiments in which not only the length of time it took for digestion in the stomach to occur but also intestinal digestion and absorption, would indicate that corn, wheat and rice flours are more completely digested than potato and the other starches noted.

The most rapidly absorbed starch of all is the simple sugar, glucose, and, according to A. C. Roberts, who made "a study of the speed absorption of glucose," it enters the blood stream much more rapidly than any other type of carbohydrate and as an energy food would thus be the most efficient of all.

In cases where there is a sensitive digestive tract, in convalescent and other states, the exhibition of glucose as an energizer has good theoretical reasons for its use. In any such considerations the study should take into account not only the food itself but also the consumer, and the state of mind and physical health of the human individual is just as important as the food itself.

For a healthy individual we may assume that any vegetable starch cooked to his taste will be as efficient as any other, but these studies do indicate that the popularity of the potato and of corn has some sort of experimental scientific basis.

Milk Is Used In Fish Cakes

Fish cakes, hot from the griddle, browned to a turn, make an appetizing main dish. They are easy to prepare and are inexpensive. Canned fish flakes, potatoes and evaporated milk, with salt and pepper for seasoning, are the simple ingredients.

There are several varieties of canned fish flakes which may be used—a combination of cod and haddock is especially pleasing. Fish cakes provide a pleasing way of utilizing leftover boiled potatoes, or even leftover broiled or baked fish. Don't mash the potatoes too fine, for they give much more body and a nicer texture to the mixture if they are a little on the bumpy side.

Fish Cakes

1 can fish flakes or 2 cups cooked flaked fish
2 medium potatoes, boiled and mashed ½ cup evaporated milk
¾ teaspoon salt
Pepper

Potatoes may be hot or cold. Mix ingredients together thoroughly. Shape into little flat cakes and fry in hot fat until crusty and brown on the surface. Yield: 12 to 16 cakes, 6 to 8 servings.

Undiluted evaporated milk is used in place of egg as the binder agent in these fish cakes. This double-rich milk also contributes to the browning quality.

Small, Compact Kitchens Lighten Home Duties

The kitchen for the average housewife is the most important room in the home when you are building a new home, according to W. S. Lowndes, director of the school of architecture for International Correspondence Schools.

The small kitchen always may be arranged more conveniently than the large one. Also, an oblong design is better than a square, since nearly all equipment is placed along walls and the trips across the kitchen will be shorter. For the average family in a house of six or seven rooms, an 8 by 12-foot kitchen or at most a 9 by 13-foot one is sufficiently large.

In the small house, where work is done almost entirely by one person, pantries and dish-storage or refrigerator closets increase labor and create additional spaces to clean and maintain.

All windows should be high enough from the floor to permit the placing of equipment under them, and they should extend near enough to the ceiling to obtain ventilation by opening them from the top. As many windows as the outside wall space will permit without sacrificing equipment space should be provided.

The finish on the walls should be such that it will not readily take up dirt and may be cleaned easily. The color of the wall finish should be chosen with care as it will greatly influence the light in the room. Cream, light tan or light gray create much lighter rooms than do the deeper colors.

How to Train Your Dog

"WHAT'S a home without a dog?" you say, realizing what a pal one of these fellows can be.

And it's simple to keep a dog healthy, happy—when you avoid common errors in dog care.

It's not true, for instance, that your dog knows instinctively what food is good for him. He needs a carefully supervised, well-balanced diet. Neither does meat make a dog vicious, subject to worms. Safe to give your dog raw or cooked meat from the time he is three weeks old.

Another error is clipping a dog in hot weather. His coat protects him against sun, flies.

Frequent bathing is wrong too. It leaves the skin dry, cracked. Bathe your dog about two or three times a year. Dogs don't have sweat glands and they stay clean, free of doggy odors—if given frequent brushings, proper food, exercise and housing.

And how important not to confuse an ordinary fit with rabies symptoms. In spite of belief to the contrary, fits usually are neither dangerous nor fatal.

Be sure of right information when raising a dog. Our 40-page booklet, "How to Raise and Train Your Dog," has complete, authoritative instructions on diet, grooming, house manners. Tells how to recognize and treat various ailments. Gives directions for 20 clever tricks.

Send 15 cents in coins for our booklet, "How to Raise and Train Your Dog," to The Washington Post, Home Institute, 109 West Nineteenth street, New York, N. Y. Write plainly your name, address and the name of booklet.

Don't Let Meringues Weep, Shrink

Cooked Too Slowly They Are Also Likely To Become Tough; Recipes Suggested

THERE are three major troubles with pie meringues: They weep. They shrink. They become tough.

Meringues will weep if too much sugar is used, or if the sugar is too coarse to dissolve in the beating.

Meringues will shrink if baked in too slow an oven.

They will become tough and difficult to cut if long slow cooking dries the surface before it browns.

A light soft meringue gladdens both the pie and the cook. It can be achieved in this way:

To cover generously an 8 or 9-inch pie, 3 medium sized egg whites are needed. Beat the egg whites to a foam, then add a dash of salt and a drop or two of any desired flavoring. Beat until they are no longer foamy, and the air cells are very small and white but still glossy, smooth and moist in appearance.

Beat Till It's Peaked

Then add ½ cup powdered (not confectioners') sugar or very finely granulated sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, and beat well after each addition. After the last of the sugar is added continue beating until the mixture stands in peaks. Then taste. The sugar should not feel grainy on the tongue.

The meringue should not be mixed until the pie is ready to receive it. The cooled filling should be in the baked crust. Even when a filling is baked in the crust, the whole thing should be cooled before spreading with meringue. Putting a meringue on a hot filling encourages the three evils at once: weeping, shrinking and toughness.

Spread the egg mixture clear to the edge of the crust. This will help prevent moisture gathering between the filling and the meringue. Spread carelessly, but do not allow air spaces beneath the billows. The meringue will sink into them after it is baked, causing what appears to be shrinkage.

Serve Soon As Possible

Slip the pie into a moderate oven (350 degrees F. to 375 degrees F.) for 10 to 15 minutes or until the meringue appears to be tipped with a golden color. Take the pie from the oven and cool away from a draught.

Pies with meringues should be served as soon as possible, as the goodness of a soft meringue depends on its fresh baked quality.

To cut a meringue easily and neatly use a very thin sharp knife, with a plain or toothed edge. Then serve the pie with a regular pie knife. If the pie is to be cut in the kitchen, grease the knife just the least bit with a little butter. The meringue will cut like gelatin.

Poaching will produce a meringue as white as uncooked beaten egg white, but with the stable qualities of a baked topping. Make a soft meringue, using the same proportions as for baking, and drop the mixture by spoonsful into the water that is just below the simmering point. Let cook 1 minute, then turn and cook 1 minute on the other side. Lift out with a slit spoon and place on a cooked fruit custard or similar desert.

Pineapple Nut Custard

2 cups canned crushed pineapple
¾ cup heavy cream
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 tablespoons cold water
2 egg yolks
1 tablespoon lemon juice
½ cup chopped nuts

Heat pineapple. Combine cream, cornstarch and cold water. Add to pineapple and cook over hot water 15 minutes. Stir into egg yolks and cook 2 minutes longer. Add lemon juice and nutmeats. Turn into glass cups and cool. Serve with poached meringue. Approximate yield: 6 portions.

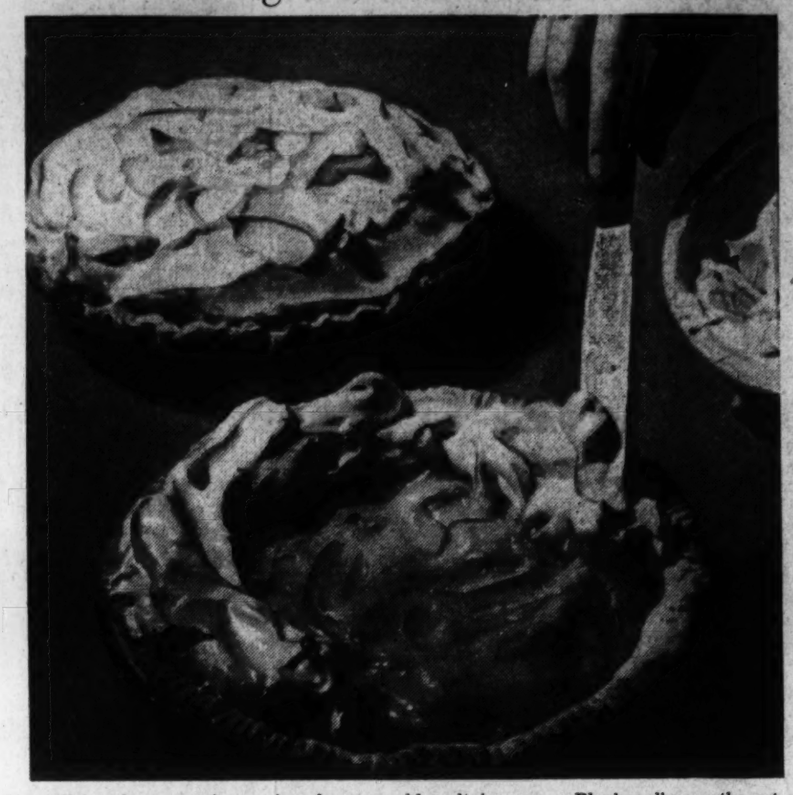
Meringue on Pie Perfected



The delicious lemon meringue pies, above, would melt in even a Bluebeard's mouth, not so much because of their tart acid flavor as for their frothy meringue topping. One of the most difficult of the culinary arts is perfect meringue preparation, but an art easy to master after reading the directions foar poaching, proper cooling, etc., given on this page

Milk Dishes To Be Theme Of Post Contest

During Lent there are always some appetites which react more favorably to dairy foods than to fish or other meat substitutes. If you have such an appetite, you will be interested in the theme of the new recipe contest. It is milk, a food rich in energy value and good taste.

Any of the by-products of milk may be entered in this new Post recipe contest. This excludes cheese, however, which, in recent years, has gained so in popularity that it stands alone as a food entity. Skimmed milk, fresh whole milk; buttermilk, cream, thin, sour or heavy; or butter may form the nucleus of your entry. Your milk selection may veer toward the beverage line, toward puddings or sauces or toward creamy milk soups.

Whatever your milky way of cooking preference, enter your kitchen-tested recipe at once. Mail this carefully written formula to Alice Clayton, The Post Food Editor, before April 1. If your recipe shows marked originality and perfect balance of proportion, you may be one of the fortunate winners of one of these cash prizes. First prize is $3, second is $2, and threre are three additional prizes at $1 each.

Jellies Gives Dash to Heavy Meats

Relish jellies go with the heavy meats of winter as sausage goes with buckwheat cakes. One complements the other. Serve a thick and steaming slab of rare roast beef, a symphony in scarlet, and with it a whooping dab of horseradish jelly. You can make the jelly—it's no major operation. The freshly grated horseradish with granulated sugar and lemon juice is set with liquid pectin. A green vegetable coloring gives the jelly emerald tones. With the roasted fowl, be it chicken or turkey, there is cranberry jelly, spiced with cinnamon and cloves, stepping high with the tang of grated orange rind. Here's a jelly that disappears faster than the white meat.

With the roast pork, serve our cider jelly made of full-flavored tart apples and lemon juice, sweet but edged. It has a sparkling barm, like good cider that nips the tongue and gives a clean taste.

Eggs Cooked Scotch Style Win Post Recipe Contest

Orange Buttermilk Eggnog Makes a Healthful Nectar

By Alice Clayton
The Post Food Editor

HAVE you ever heard of eggs so cheap that they were called Scotch? Would you believe that the price of eggs is so reasonable at present that their economy of preparation nets the creator a cash prize? Well, that is what happened in last week's recipe contest featuring egg dishes.

First award goes to Miss Evelyn Weisbacker, who is a bonny cook, as her prize-winning Scotch eggs published here will attest. Her egg entry was not the only dish with an international flavor. Chinese omelets, eggs foo young, and Chinamen's nests galore uphold the Orient's tradition for fine egg cookery. Curried, stuffed and deviled eggs were entered with characteristic mystery of Hindu flavor. There were many Creole, Spanish and Italian egg dishes, such as garlic, pimiento and tomato tinged mixtures and even a frothy zabyajone dessert of sherry, sugar and egg yolks was present.

Among members of the Americana egg family came the following ideas, several of which were from brave, lion-hearted men, who even submitted their photographs this week:

From Louisiana, a casserole of eggs, tomato soup, green peas and cheese; from Seattle, a bland egg, milk and butter souffle; from New Orleans, a fascinating omelet, borne blazing with rum to the table in true Southern hospitality, and from hard-boiled New York, softly scrambled eggs, onions, mushrooms and shoestring ham strips.

Thrifty Fare

For thrifty housewives, penny wise and taste conscious, the first prize winning recipe of Scotch eggs will have charm. A keen lass is Miss Evelyn Weisbacker, 4423 Eighth street northwest, and her award of first prize is $3 in cash. Her thrifty, yet very effective use of hard cooked eggs, bread crumbs and minced left-over meat add egg mixture. Place over medium heat. When sides and bottom begin to cook, lift with spatula and let uncooked part run underneath, first in one place, then in another. Sprinkle one omelet with 1-3 cup of grated American cheese, the second with 2 tablespoons of finely chopped scallions, the third with ½ cup of rye bread, diced, previously browned in bacon fat and the fourth with 3 frankfurters, cut in ½-inch sections. When omelets are set, turn heat high and brown quickly. Fold. Cut each in 6 quarters. Place side by side on a hot platter. Serve with sauce, if desired. A few sprigs of crisp parsley may be used to accentuate the varying omelets. Serves 6.

Scotch Eggs

Remove shells from six hard-cooked eggs, and wipe dry. Cook ½ cup of bread crumbs in 2-3 cup of milk until thick. Add salt and pepper to taste, and a little paprika or onion salt if desired. Add 1 cup of minced ham, pork or any left-over meat Corresponding amount of fish may be substituted during Lent. Mix together to form a stiff paste. Take a portion of this and press around each of the eggs, smoothly, having paste of equal thickness all over until the eggs are well covered. Then take a raw egg with one tablespoon of water and beat lightly. Dip each of the prepared eggs into this and cover with raw egg. As soon as covered, drop onto a paper contaning additional bread crumbs. Coat with this and fry in deep, hot fat or butter until golden brown. Cut in halves, stand side up and serve with cheesy white sauce, tomato creole sauce or meat gravy.

Dainty Morsels

The old nursery jingle about "wasn't this a pretty dish to set before a king," had nothing on the Assorted Omelets, below, Mrs. Kay Bickers Smith, Brexton Apartments, Baltimore, Md. has introduced an ingenious idea in egg cookery with her assorted little omelet servings. Her second $2 prize winning recipe may solve entertaining problems in Lent, for such a varied serving is sure to please every type of appetite.

Assorted French Omelets

Make four separate omelets. For each, beat 2 eggs slightly with 2 tablespoons of milk, ¼ teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper. Melt a tablespoon of butter or fat in an omelet pan or skillet. When hot, pour in one-fourth of the egg mixture. Cook slowly, lifting edges with a spatula to allow uncooked portion to flow underneath. When set, fold and turn out on hot platter. Serve with tomato sauce, cheese sauce or mushroom sauce. Serves 4.

Shortcake That Is Not Sweet

Although the general conception of shortcake is a toothsome sweet strawberry or fruit confection, here is a prize-winning cake which serves as an entree. It is egg shortcake, submitted by Miss Martha Ryan, 1627 Thirty-fifth street northwest, for which she wins a prize of $1. She cleverly uses the protein-rich egg in both her cake and sauce recipe.

Miss Ryan

Egg Shortcake

Sift 2 cups flour, ½ teaspoon salt, 4 teaspoons baking powder; cut in 4 tablespoons ing powder; cut in 4 tablespoons shortening; add 1 cup grated cheese, 1 beaten egg, ½ cup milk. Roll ½ inch thick on lightly floured surface; cut in squares or in rings; bake in hot oven (400 degrees) 20 minutes. Split; serve with egg sauce: Make cream sauce of 3 tablespoons butter, 4 tablespoons flour, 2 cups milk. Add ½ teaspoon salt, 1-16 teaspoon red pepper, 1 tablespoon minced parsley, 6 chopped, hard-cooked eggs. Serves 6.

Frozen Hen Food

Clucking mother hens would ruffle their feathers in approval if they could spy their handsome offspring gracing the egg and asparagus mousse, entered by Mrs. B. C. Philips. One of the most agreeable of company dishes is this green tinted mold, and one which subtly varies the usual Lenten serving and taste of eggs. Mrs. Philips, of 631 Allison street northwest, wins a prize of $1 for this recipe.

Mrs. Philips

Egg and Asparagus Mousse

Drain 1 can of asparagus tips and press them through a sieve. There should be about 2-3 cup of puree. Finely chop 4 hard cooked eggs. Sprinkle 2 tablespoons of gelatine on 4 tablespoons of cold water and dissolve over boiling water. Whip ½ cup of heavy cream, add gelatine, fold in puree, eggs, ½ teaspoon of salt and a few grains of pepper, adding 1 tablespoon of ketchup and ¼ cup of mayonnaise or salad dressing. Pour into individual molds which have been dipped in cold water. Chill until firm, unmold on crisp lettuce, watercress or chicory.

Healthful Nectar

The egg recipe submitted by Mrs. John D. Swisher, 61 West Washington street, Hagerstown, Md., takes an unusual turn. Of the many egg entrees, desserts and even egg soups entered Mrs. Swisher alone dared a egg beverage. The result is a prize of $1 not only for her originality, but for her good taste. Her orange buttermilk eggnog is certainly a health nectar, rich in energy units.

Mrs. Swisher

Orange Buttermilk Eggnog

Break 2 fresh eggs into a bowl and sprinkle with a few grains of salt. Beat with a rotary egg beater until light. Add 1 tablespoon of sugar and continue beating until well mixed. Add 1 cup of orange justice and 3 cups of buttermilk and stir. Pour into 4 tall, chilled glasses, garnish with thin slice of orange and serve at once, and cold.

Asparagus Mousse Also Is Agreeable Dish for Lent

Billie Burke, film comedienne, isn't the only one who cares for egg dishes. If the number of entries in last week's egg contest were any indication of what Washington women think of hen food, then Billie Burke does not stand alone. Above, she prepares one of her famous little omelets, which she beats with milk until foamy, then drops a bit at a time on a hot griddle and serves rolled up, like little crepes suzettes

Business Women Who Exercise Recoup Energy

WE'RE NOT so sure about the tired business man, but, on the average, the tired business woman does not play enough.

To get to the top in business, you must give it everything you have. And to keep going, you must have a seemingly endless supply of energy. That means knowing when to let down. Some of the most outstandingly successful women, we find, are as particular about allowing time for recouping their energy as they are about getting work done on schedule!

Knowing that these high-powered executives place so much stress on the importance of relaxation makes us realize the necessity for balancing work with play, mental activity with exercise. Perhaps hearing of their programs will persuade you to follow one of your own.

Attends Exercise Class

Mary Lewis, brilliant advertising writer, has massage three noons a week, attends a special exercise class at 5 o'clock three afternoons a week, and never accepts social engagements two evenings in a row. She is not a tired business woman!

Edith M. Barber, famous food consultant, is one of the most dynamic women I have ever known. The secret of her amazing energy is simply correct posture! Some years ago, when she found herself becoming overfatigued at the end of the day, she went to an authority on exercise who ascribed the trouble to incorrect posture. Miss Barber took corrective exercise and learned to save her energy by sitting and standing correctly, which is very important to the business woman.

Rose Taplinger started a regular "back to the farm movement" for tired business women. When in business, she found week-ends in the country so beneficial that she turned her farmhouse into a retreat for frazzled city nerves. She believes that occasionally getting away from it all is the whole solution to the problem of pressure.

"Every woman," Miss Taplinger declares, "has her own stop-signal right with her—soon as the back of her neck gets tired, it's time to relax!" Career women of all kinds agree with her. Not long ago, the entire cast of "I Married An Angel" went out for a week-end and spent a great deal of their time in relaxing exercises, which smooth out kinks in nerves by eliminating muscular tension. These exercises are good for you. Do them instead of the overstimulating type when you are tired.

Hunch Shoulders

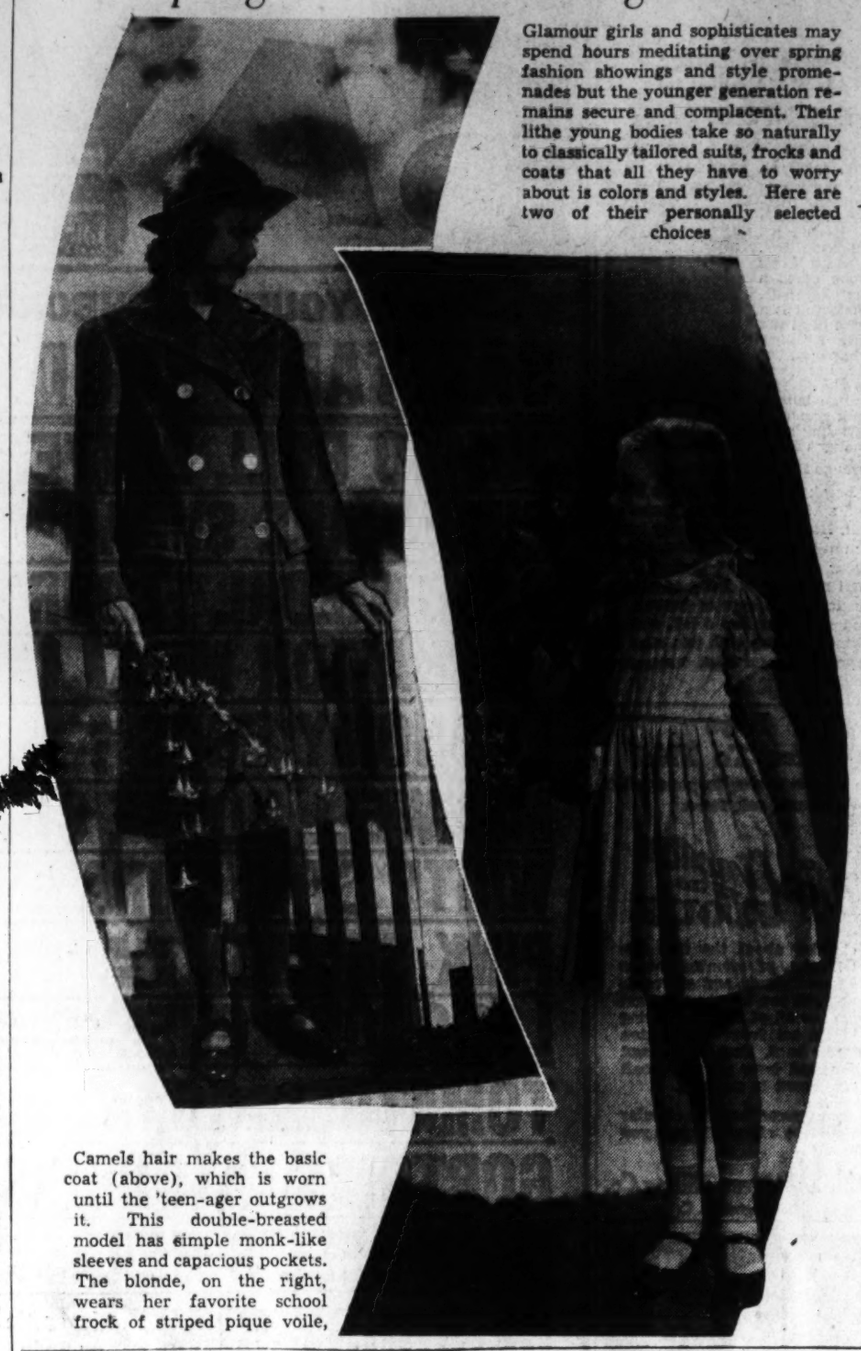
Begin by hunching the shoulders up and down, loosely. Bring the shoulders up about your ears and then let them drop back into place. Do this and all the relaxing exercises with the least possible effort and try to be absolutely loose jointed.

Then rotate the arms at the shoulders, hands hanging limply down at the sides. Rotate the shoulders slowly—it's good riddance to shoulder and back tension.

Now swing the arms, back and forth, loosely, easily. Gradually swing higher, higher—higher in front, higher in back, one arm coming forward as the other swings backward. Watch the movement of the arms as you swing, to get a nice throat exercise out of this, too.

That will be enough for the shoulders. Swing the legs, one at a time of course! Swing from the hip and with each swing raise the leg higher in back, higher in front, keeping it loose at the joints. Now shift to the other leg and keep it up until you feel as limber as a rag doll.

Spring Has Come for Younger Set



Glamour girls and sophisticates may spend hours meditating over spring fashion showings and style promenades but the younger generation remains secure and complacent. Their lithe young bodies take so naturally to classically tailored suits, frocks and coats that all they have to worry about is colors and styles. Here are two of their personally selected choices

Camels hair makes the basic coat (above), which is worn until the 'teen-ager outgrows it. This double-breasted model has simple monk-like sleeves and capacious pockets. The blonde, on the right, wears her favorite school frock of striped pique voile,

The Gentler Sex

—By Malvina Lindsay,

The Butterfly

"You know, Miss Hack, I certainly envy you. You must lead such an interesting life . . . Oh, well, yes; I guess you do have to work awfully hard, but then it must be wonderful to feel that you are doing things—I mean doing real big things in the world . .

"Oh, but I think working in an office is terribly important . . . Yes, think of all the marvelous contacts with men—that is, of course, I don't mean personally, but . . . well, you know what I mean. Now the people meet—oh, they seem so superficial . . . and insincere . . . and snobbish.

"Not, of course, that they aren't lovely to me. They're just on my neck night and day. I've got six parties on this week, and this morning, Mrs. Beresford Hatter—you know who she is, of course—well, she phoned and said I would simply have to pour at her tea. That's just the way it is all the time.

"Of course, I don't really care a thing for society. I can see through it all. I like to be around real people—like yourself—who are doing things. I'm terribly interested in people. I'm always making friends with the funniest people in the most out-of-the-way places. Now, I know an old man who runs a little bookshop down in a basement. I just love to go there and talk to him . . . Yes! And there's a man who has a flower cart—he's really a most interesting character . . . and then there's a little clerk down in Sailem's basement that I've struck up an acquaintance with . . . and then there's a young author I know . . . Oh, I've got lots of friends in all walks of life.

"I've always been independent that way. My society friends just can't understand it. And you know one thing? They resent it. You see, having connections the way I do on both sides, it makes it hard. But just the same, I'm going to lead my own life.

"Now, tell me about your work, Miss Hack . . . You write all those letters on the typewriter? How interesting! . . . And you first take them down in shorthand? . . . How marvelous! . . . And then I suppose there are a lot of people coming in the office? . . . I'd love that. I do enjoy people so . . . My, it must be wonderful to feel that you're right in the center of things, that way. Really, when I think of all you're doing you make me feel so inferior . . . Oh, but I do! I just feel so useless.

"You know what I'd like? . . I'd like to have a little job of some kind . . . Oh, yes, I know it's hard to go to an office every day—but then, just look how hard I have to work going to all those parties! And I don't get a cent of pay for it! . . . No, not a cent!

"You know, sometimes I just feel as if I were wasting my life . . . I'd like to get out and DO something. I suppose my husband would have a fit—but I really would. O course, I don't really need the money, but then there are lot of nice little things for other for . . . and then I'd like to do a lot of nice litte things for other people.

"Oh, no; I haven't had any training in anything. Now, if I'd just kept up my music . . . or my painting . . . Oh no, I can't type. I'm no good at all around machinery. I tell you one thing I am good at, though—meeting people. You know, I've always thought I'd like to be in an office just to receive the people. People always want to talk to me and tell me their problems.

"Well, tell me more about your work, Miss Hack . . . Oh, you don't have to go yet! . . . Only a half-hour for lunch! . . . And what time do you have to be at work? . . . Nine o'clock! . . . Well, what on earth do you do when you're out the night before? . . . Oh, I see.

"Well, Miss Hack, it's been grand to see you. I always feel so inspired when I see people who are really doing things. And now don't forget to keep me in mind if you hear of any nice interesting little job. I'm really in earnest about doing something with my life . . . Yes! I'll just do anything about an office—receive people or help out in any way I can. But say—maybe it might be just as well for me to start in on some kind of part-time job—just afternons or something like that—until I could get used to getting up mornings."

Bored at Work, She Saved, Travels Now

Miss Hyneman Got Tired of Job Here; Sees U. S. and Europe

By Genevieve Reynolds.

A WOMAN sat at her desk at one of the local Government offices gazing forlornly at a postcard she had just received from a friend touring South Africa. Visions of Carthage, Rome, Paris and Morocco were interrupted by the monotonous click, click of typewriters. With inward protest, the worker returned to her task. This woman, Miss Rebecca Hyneman, a stenographer in the Veterans Bureau, resolved that she, too, would travel.

A few years passed and her dreams became a reality. For recently Miss Hyneman returned from a trip that included ten European countries, parts of Asia and Africa. But first she saw the United States.

Free in Five Years

In less than five years from the day she resolved to become financially independent so that she might be free of irksome office routine and go wherever she desired she achieved her goal—"By saving and investing wisely."

"You can't have everything you want on a small salary, but can have the things you want most," she said. "I wanted to be financially independent before retiring age more than anything else, and that's what I worked toward. 'Each payday I'd figure out how much I could possibly save. This would go into bonds. When I'd see things that I wanted—such as a new spring outfit or automobile, I'd ask myself if I really needed them. If I did, I bought them, and if I didn't, the money went into more bonds."

Saved Money, Had Fun

As for amusements, Miss Hyneman sought the kind that did not require a great deal of money. "When I found that I could have a happy evening with a group of congenial friends," she said, "without spending money, or could go to some place that required some expenditure, I always chose the former. After practicing giving up the entertainments that were expensive, I soon found plenty of interesting, worthwhile things to do that cost practically nothing."

For example, she cited bridge, reading, lectures, free concerts and sightseeing as substitutes for picture shows, plays and cocktail parties.

Life without traveling or just sitting in an office all day when she longed to be roaming in the parks wasn't complete for Miss Hyneman. So in 1934 she sold off her surplus belongings, bought a coupe and started out alone for Florida. Leaving Florida, she went to the Mardi Gras in New Orleans. Traveling leisurely, she drove alone to California and Mexico, then up the west coast to Portland, Oreg., and Alaska. She found life so pleasant that she remained in Portland for one year. Then she returned at a slow pace to Washington, stopping at any place she found interesting in the Middle West.

Studied Foreign Languages

Returning to Washington, Miss Hyneman enrolled in McKinley High School to study French, German and other foreign languages. When she had gained a speaking and reading knowledge of several, she sold her automobile and set sail for Europe. Again she chose to travel alone, for friendships were easily and quickly made.

The jaunt in Europe took her to England, France, Denmark, Italy, Czecho-Slovakia, Holland, Belgium, Austria, Germany and adjoining countries. From Europe she journeyed into Africa and Asia.

Back in Washington for a few months, she lives quietly at the Dodge Hotel. But there's a twinkle and far-a-way look in her eyes that means just one thing—more traveling.

Beginning of Rayon

Did you know that we have some little sick silk worms to thank for the idea of rayon? Fifty years ago in the South of France an epidemic hit the silk worms, and an enterprising chemist named Chardonnet started experimenting with an artificial method of extracting cellulose from the mulberry leaves, then liquifying and spinning it as the silkworm did. Many a laboratory light has burned far into the night these 50 years since, to perfect that idea. But it finally was developed to the point where today rich and poor alike may enjoy the beauty of silken fabrics for everyday use.

Fudge Loaf Recipe Is Given

Chocolate seems to gain in popularity as a favorite sweet in Washington homes. Since last Friday, when a luscious chocolate fudge loaf photograph graced The Post's Food Page, requests have been coming in for recipes for this handsome cake. Among the enthusiastic fans of this fudge loaf were Mrs. Mary I. L. Newby, Oak Spring, Upperville, Va.; Mrs. Robert Blake, 2919 Cathedral avenue northwest; Miss Florence Close, Seat Pleasant, Md., and a chocolate addict who simply signs her name "Tillie." For these and the many others who have called about this formula the recipe follows:

Chocolate Fudge Loaf

2 cup sifted cake flour
2 teaspoons double-acting baking powder
¼ teaspoon salt
½ cup butter or other shortening
1 cup sugar
1 egg, well beaten
2 square unsweetened chocolate, melted
¾ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well; then chocolate and blend. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in greased pan, 8x8x2 inches, in moderate oven (325 degrees F.) 1 hour, or until done. Spread Fudge Frosting on top and sides of cake.

Fudge Frosting

3 squares unsweetened chocolate
1½ cups milk
3 cups sugar
Dash of salt
3 tablespoons light corn syrup
3 tablespoons butter
1½ teaspoons vanilla

Add chocolate to milk and place over low flame. Cook until mixture is smooth and blended, stirring constantly. Add sugar, salt and corn syrup; stir until sugar is dissolved and mixture boils. Continue boiling, without stirring, until a small amount of mixture forms a very soft ball in cold water (232 degrees F.). Remove from fire. Add butter and vanilla. Cool to lukewarm (110 degrees F.). Beat until of right consistency to spread. If necessary, place over hot water to keep soft while spreading. Makes enough frosting to cover tops and sides of 8x8x2 inch cake (very generously).

Mary Haworth's Mail

Spurned by Sweetheart Who Saw Him Intoxicated, College Sophomore Asks How to Clean the Slate

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I am coming to you with this problem, because I have no one else to whom to turn for advice, as I am away from home attending a local university. A few months ago I was introduced to the one girl for me. I have dated her frequently since. But she happened to see me one night while I was "slightly" inebriated. Her friends always maintained the highest standards and I know that she was shocked by my condition.

When I tried to contact her afterward she refused to talk to me and has declined to see me again. I realize she fears a recurrence of this kind while I am in her company, but because of her I have determined to change my ways. However, she will not give me a chance to explain this to her. What can I do to prove to her that I have turned over a new leaf, so to speak? Please advise me what to do. Respectfully, SOBERED SOPHOMORE.

DEAR S. S.: Only someone who had seen your performance while under the influence of alcohol could say whether you deserve to be forgiven by the young lady. It is perfectly possible, you know, that the girl was not so dismayed by the discovery that you could be guilty of consuming an unmanageable amount of alcohol, as she was outraged by your behavior while in that condition. From her point of view, you may have disclosed utterly detestable qualities of personality and character while temporarily off guard or out of conscious control. Her refusal to see or to talk with you may mean, simply, that she could no longer be interested in you no matter how beautifully you might behave in the future.

As you may or may not know, intelligently trained modern youngsters (of the latter teen-age and early twenties classification) hold very little brief for any of their contemporaries who incline to drink too deeply of the cup that cheers. They list alcoholic overindulgence as one of the unforgivable social sins. While not at all prudish in their attitude toward social drinking, so-called, they rightfully regard good manners, rooted in (and symbolic of) good character, as an indispensable characteristic of their accepted associates.

They believe that the boy—or girl—who drinks to excess if only on one occasion, has put a question mark on his record. They feel that he has been guilty of bad manners; that he has committed an offense against good taste, since good taste in all its forms is merely evidence of civilized self control; and that the boy who ventures to call upon a girl while in an intoxicated condition has tacitly insulted her—through registering a tacit assumption, I suppose, that "anything goes" with her.

In the lamentable episode which alienated this girl's friendship, you may only have hurt her deeply, through violating her sense of propriety; or you may, as I have already said, have acted in a rather revolting manner, thus killing whatever interest she had in you. It should not be too difficult for you to figure out which theory applies. If her feelings were hurt, it probably means that she cares greatly for you; that she was disappointed, humiliated and disturbed by your lapse, and that you have some chance of working your way back, gradually, into her good graces—through being properly penitent and consistently well-behaved in the future. But if you behaved badly while "slightly inebriated," you may have to accept her lasting displeasure as a deserved rebuke and turn it to account by "letting it be a lesson to you," as our elders used to say.

If your offense was primarily that of appearing in her presence in the guise of a gentleman at a temporary alcoholic disadvantage, I suggest that you persist in apologizing until you have convinced her of your repentance and intent to reform. Though she refuses to see or speak with you, that doesn't mean you can't get your message across. Try the mails; send her a floral offering with an earnest and urgent apology enclosed; send her a night letter by wire service (if you can stare down the clerk who transcribes the message; and such unabashed heroism ought to make a big hit with the lady, if she has any imagination or heart whatever). And having dispatched these messages, and providing she doesn't return them unopened—lie in wait for her at an immediately later date and have things out with her. Such a campaign is bound to earn her forgiveness, if she still cares about you and if you are worth caring for.

M. H.

A Question of Propriety

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: My daughter, who is now 20 years old and a student in Washington's finest college for girls, returned to Washington two years ago after attending a boarding school in another city for four years, where she won highest honors not only in her studies, but also for her fine character, etc. Upon her graduation from high school I purchased a new home in another section of this city.

Being allowed two names in the telephone directory. I listed both of our names, so that her former friends might keep in contact with her. Now she goes out with a young man from New England and he insists that it is improper from my daughter to have her name listed separately and suggests that her name be left out of the coming issue of the directory. She does not want to do this and I am seeking your advice as to the proper course.

The young man contends that nice girls do not have their names listed in the telephone directory where he comes from, and that he considers it in very poor taste. I am afraid that I have never given the matter much thought; therefore I may have overlooked something truly important. Thanking you, and assuring you that an early reply will be appreciated, I remain, respectfully,

PUZZLED MOTHER.

Do as You Like

DEAR PUZZLED MOTHER: If any tradition or precedent exists, which would seem to prohibit "nice girls" from having their names listed in the telephone directory, I do not know about it, and neither do a number of other persons to whom I have put the question. This impertinently opinionated young man has greater need to revise his own manners than he has justification for correcting yours. His high-handed, unsolicited criticism amounts to insufferable insolence—vulgar and indefensible.

I daresay that his implied respect for provincial customs, alleged, has nothing to do with his real reason for wishing your daughter's name kept out of the telephone directory. More likely, he doesn't want it listed for fear other young men may find it a convenient way of getting in touch with her, after having met her and perceived her charm.

He's probably a throwback to some ancestor who believed the way to hold a woman was to lock her up in a tower. I imagine he's a bit of a crackpot, with a dash of the witch-burner latently lurking. Pay no attention to him. Do as you like. Even if it should happen to be in defiance of every rule of the etiquette book, still you would be less guilty of bad manners in so doing that he is in making an issue of the matter.

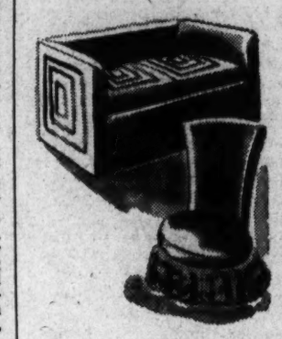
More Suggestions For Year-'Round Slip Covers

by "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of of The Hecht Co.



I told you a few days ago of the increasing popularity of slip covers for year-'round use . . due to the fact that Sanforizing has lessened the shrinkage of so many beautiful fabrics to 1% or less allowing you to make sleek, zipper-fashioned covers that cling to your chair as closely as if upholstered in the fabric. Today I show you a stunning modern divan, covered in a suede-like fabric, soft as a kitten's ear, quilted and stitched in white. The slipper chair is covered in deep pink Indian head, button-tufted and trimmed with white moss fringe.

Miss Perkins Thanks Club For Confidence Vote

Expresses Gratitude to Democratic Women at Banquet Address; Stress Work Accomplished by Her Department

By Jessie Ash Arndt.
The Post Club Editor.

Expressing gratitude for a resolution of "faith and confidence" passed yesterday afternoon by the biennial conference of the Woman's National Democratic Club, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins last night addressed the women at the banquet at the Mayflower, which closed their three-day session.

The resolution was one of three the delegates passed. The first of these commended President Roosevelt, "whose high purpose is always to advance the Jeffersonian principle of "equal opportunity to all and special privilege to none," and pledge "continued loyalty to Franklin D. Roosevelt and the New Deal" and gave assurance of "active and wholehearted support to his policies to the end that the United States will continue as the leader of the nations of the world to advance the cause of justice, freedom and peace." The third resolution was one of greetings and best wishes to May Dewson, former director of the women's division of the Democratic National Committee.

Past Two Months Have Been Hard

Secretary Perkins referring to the past two months, declared, "they have been months of some trial and pressure for me and the resolutions and other expressions I have had from women's Democratic Clubs all over the country have meant more to me than I can tell you."

She added that many individuals had written that they would pray for her that she might have strength t ostand. "I thank you for that," she said. "It is that kind of an attitude, which enables women who are conscientious, to go on serving the country."

She declared it was to the credit of the Democratic Party that it had encouraged such organizations as the women's Democratic Clubs and paid tribute to the leadership of Mary Dewson. She quoted Miss Dewson's statement that the only way to get Democratic women or any others to work was to give them something to do with their heads as well as their hands. The key to the party's success is the educational campaign it has carried on in political problems she said—not only for the Democrats but for all the people."

She said one of the beauties of a constitutional government such as this country's was the fact that officials could receive daily, and sometimes hourly, advice from the people they are supposed to govern. Officials at first listen with superiority, but later with humility, she said, and often learn their advisers were right.

Public officials must keep in mind that the Government is for all the people, for Republicans as well as Democrats, and for obscure pepole as well as those who are vocal in expressing themselves. She asserted a way must be found to make statute law reflect the meaning of natural law and declared people of this country must learn to be a united people, to stop hating each other and co-operate.

Points to Record Of Department

She listed among accomplishments of the Department of Labor during her administration, laying the groundwork of the social security program; setting standards for physical condition of working places; "putting a bottom to the fall of wages and a ceiling to the length of hours" and writing some basic, fundamental, underlying laws on the rights of working people to bargain collectively.

Murphy, a member of the Arts Club, last night presented tehre a talk on his good-will trip to Mexico for the Pan American Union last summer, giving not only a graphic description of the country, but also a thrilling account of his experiences in an airplane crash of which he was the only survivor.

He paid high tribute to the Mexican Red Cross, which dispatched aid to him as soon as word of the crash came out of the jungle in the vicinity of Oaxaca, where the plane fell. He described the picturesque scenery of Mexico and the quaint customs of the people in the villages and rural sections. A technicolor film of Mexico, lent by Stephen James, director of the highway education board, also was shown.

Dr. Pedro de Alba, assistant director of the Pan American Union, was guest of honor at the dinner preceding the program, and Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Leisenring were hosts for the evening.

Grace Seton, Migrating North With the Birds, Is in Capital

Migrating north with the birds, Grace Thompson Seton, has arrived in Washington after a winter in New Orleans and will spend two or three weeks in the Capital, waiting for warmer weather before returning to her home in Greenwich, Conn.

This time she comes as a club leader, with a new branch of the National League of American Pen Women of which she is former president, to her credit in New Orleans. The branch was formed March 10 and boasts Dorothy Dix as an honorary member. She is also preparing to do intensive work on the personnel of the Roundtable of Letters she will conduct in New York, May 25, as part of the Institute of Leadership along lines of human relations, to be held at Rockefeller Center, in connection with the Worlds' Fair.

Plans Another Expedition Next Year

If one knew nothing of Grace Thompson Seton's adventures, it would be easy to recount her activities in women's organizations as achievement enough and end there. But the apartment she has taken at the Mayflower for the period of her stay in Washington bears evidence of her other interests—exploration in far corners of the earth.

She has stayed "quietly at home" so far as exploration is concerned ever since her return from a journey into Indo-China, with hair-raising experiences, nearly six years ago, but if her present plans materialize, she will be off again next year.

This time she will undertake an expedition which will be "just next door," compared to that into Indo-China, but she expects it to yield valuable information. She hopes to go into Central America to study the pre-historic civilization there, and check it with that of South America and Asia which she has already studied first hand.

On the walls of her apartment at the Mayflower hang a crimson sari from Bali, with stars of gold and silver and a heavy border woven into the silk; a Mohammedan piece, raw silk woven with stiff geometrical design and the introduction of the human figure, contrary to all Mohammedan tradition, and indicating a bastard influence in the religion of the Zulu archipelago from which it came, she says.

There are also small boxes of beaten gold and silver whose designs identify them—one from South India, with its soft curves and lines and another from Indo-China, with its angular outlines and the sharply pointed headdress on the central figure. On a chest is a rare silk scarf of knot and tie dye work, which represents the work of a family of seven for six weeks.

Mrs. Seton always takes with her a few such treasures gathered in her unusual travels to contribute her own atmosphere to her temporary abode.

Jewelry Tells Story Also

The jewelry she wore was equally fascinating, a pendant, "The Hand of Fatma," white gold wire work, set with amethysts. Inside of it were three charms, one written in Arabic by an old witch in the Sahara Desert while Mrs. Seton sat on a camel.

Her bracelet was an example of the work of the North African Berbers, heavy silver, set with carnelians and yellow, green and blue enamel. The bracelet also had studs which, she explained, were often sharp-pointed, and were used for defense by the dancing girls.

Mrs. Seton, chairman of awards for the National League of American Pen Women, will attend the national board meeting to be held here April 3.

Mrs. Peoples Becomes Head Of League

Succeeds Mrs. Gasser As President of Service Society

Mrs. C. J. Peoples, wife of Rear Admiral Peoples, yesterday took office as president of the Women's Army and Navy League, succeeding Mrs. Lorenzo Gasser, wife of Maj. Gen. Gasser, who has served for the last year. She presided for the first time at the March meeting of the League, held at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club at Eleventh and L streets.

Other officers for the year are: Army vice presidents, Mrs. Malin Craig and Mrs. G. C. Marshall; Navy vice presidents, Mrs. George T. Pettingill and Mrs. H. L. Brinser; secretary, Mrs. Herbert A. Rinard; assistant secretary, Mrs. John Lindenstruth; treasurer, Mrs. Rex Rhodes; assistant treasurer, Mrs. O. C. Spaulding.

The league was incorporated in 1894. The club then was located at 317 C street northwest, but, in 1924, the present clubhouse, was purchased.

The object of the organization was to promote the general welfare and render financial aid and other assistance to the non-commissioned officers and enlisted men of the Army, Navy and marine corps and their families. The club welcomes any members of the services who are passing through the city. About 25 transients of the services were accommadated at the clubhouse last year.

Early in May a rummage sale for the benefit of the work will be held by the league. Mrs. George Sunderland will serve as chairman of the sale.

Glee Club, Talks Share Honors on 'Student Workshop Series

Excellently trained and ably presented, the voices of 106 boys and girls of Dunbar High School last night brought to the air the eighth in the current series of "Student Radio Workshop" programs, presented each week by undergraduates of the District's ten senior high schools, under the sponsorship of Station WJSV and The Washington Post.

Sung by the 73-voice mixed chorus, the program opened with Dunbar's "Alma Mater," words and music of which were written by Dr. Anna J. Cooper, former principal at Dunbar High School, and Miss Mary L. Europe, teacher of music.

Other selections by the full chorus included: "Morning," by Oley Speaks; Burleigh's "Response;" the traditional "Baptising Hymn;" and "Dunbar Love Song."

The Boys Glee Club, with Philip Walker and Aldrich Adkins as soloists, sang the familiar spirituals, "Go Down, Moses" and "O Mary, Don't You Weep."

Choir of 33 Voices

A speaking choir, the blended voices of 33 boys and girls, gave an unusual interpretation of Charles Kingsley's "Three Fishers" and brought the program to a conclusion with Eleanor Powers' "Benediction," against a humming background by the mixed chorus.

Brief talks were given by Constance Spottswood, senior at Dunbar High School, and by James N. Saunders, assistant principal.

The program was arranged and produced under the supervision of Miss Julia Brooks, assistant principal. The choruses were directed by Miss Mary L. Europe, teacher of music at Dunbar, and the work of the speaking choir was under the direction of Miss Mary P. Burrill, teacher of speech.

Next week's "Students Radio Workshop" will be heard Thursday evening, March 30, at 7 o'clock over Station WJSV—presented by undergraduates of the Anacostia Senior High School.

Transcript of Constance Spottswood's Talk In Radio Workshop Show Given by Dunbar

In man's very early stage of mental development the law of survival of the fittest was recognized as the supreme law of uncivilized man. It mattered not that something might belong to another individual if it was what a man desired and was determined to secure. Since there was no established law which protected a man's property, frequently the weak were forced to yield their cherished possessions to the strong. It was useless to protest. In as much as they were not exposed to the advantages of culture and education which people now enjoy, these barbarians are not to be blamed entirely.

Today, however, despite modern advantages, it is evident that many of the youth of today, in regard to respect for property, are little better than barbarians. Officials in charge of branch libraries, superintendents of public buildings and countless owners and managers of private properties report a wholesale disregard for and a general deleterious attitude toward property on the part of the public and of students in particular.

For example, merely examine the records of the destruction of school property in the District of Columbia. According to a report of Dr. Frank W. Ballou, super- Mr. C. W. Price, of the Capital January 18, 1939, at the meeting of the Board of Education, the cost of glazing in the public schools and special school buildings for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1938, has amounted to a total of $14,078.84.

In addition, there have been any number of articles ranging from typewriters, clothes and door mats to pencils, erasers and paper stolen from public schools. These, unfortunately, are only a few examples of stolen goods.

Moreover, vandalism may be seen in the case of public utilities. Mr. C. W. Price, of the Capitol Transit Co., recently reported the damage of 200 or .nore seats in buses and cars used regularly by students.

As we examine these reports, we may ask ourselves these questions: What is the cause? What is the remedy for such disregard of property?

The cause may be traced to the fact that the child is not always taught in his formative years to respect his possessions and those of others.

The remedy for this situation must come from the home, the school and public opinion working to inculcate in the youth a sense of responsibility for property. Modern youth, in turn, must demonstrate superiority over uncivilized men by their recognition of the rights of others and consequently by respect for their possessions.

Mr. Saunders Talk

Dunbar High School owes its origin to the Preparatory High School, established in 1870. Mr. G. F. T. Cook, Superintendent of the Colored Schools of Washington and Georgetown, in his report for 1876-77, referring to the Preparatory High School states the important objective of this school to be "To present to the pupils incentive to higher aim and education."

This objective has always been the impelling motive of the principal and teachers of Dunbar High School and its predecessors, the M Street High School and the Preparatory High School. Large numbers of pupils who enter Dunbar plan to go to college. The guidance function in connection with this group is for the most part educational. The students are brought early into contact with the college bureau, which instructs them as to the specific requirements for entrance to the colleges they plan to attend and advises and assists them to meet these requirements.

Some students do not know whether they will attend college or not; others have no vocational interests. To assist this group the general guidance committee encourages the doubtful ones to prepare and to make plans for attending college; this committee also sponsors assemblies at which men and women who have succeeded in their vocations outline for the students the abilities required, the personality traits necessary, and the advantages and disadvantages of their work. In the social studies classes the students get valuable vocational information. Those students who have special ability in music, drawing, oral expression and journalism get much training with vocational possibilities.

The general guidance committee also concerns itself with the students who have scholastic or behavior problems. Classroom teachers refer such cases to the committee for study and adjustment. The committee uses the educational research agencies, medical inspection service and child welfare clinics to discover the causes for the maladjustment. The causes discovered, a remedial program is put into effect for such students.

The course of study at Dunbar also provides for the students who withdraw from the school before graduation. This group finds studies which are assigned to give them a better understanding, and an intelligent appreciation of their natural and social environment and the institutional life of the communities in which they live.

The adherence of Dunbar High School to the objective "higher aim and education" has produced the following results:

1. A very high rate of retention; 80 per cent of those who enter remain to graduate.

2. Attendance at institutions of higher learning by a majority of the graduates, many of whom have been chosen to honorary scholarship societies.

3. Leadership of those who received their high school training at Dunbar in architecture, education, engineering, government, law, medicine and social relations.

Goldsborough Asks Delay In Milk Trial

Intervenes in Bootleg Cream Case for His Constituents, He Says

Representative T. Alan Goldborough, of Maryland, yesterday asked the District Commissioners for a three-week delay in the trial of the Fairfax-Embassy Dairy on charges of alleged "bootlegging" of cream into the District for fluid consumption.

Milk seized from the dairy was analyzed by Dr. Reid R. Ashworth of the District Health Department. He reported it was pure and equal in quality to that produced in the Washington milkshed.

The recently confirmed Justice of the District Court, who has not yet been sworn to office, said he acted in behalf of his Maryland constituents who ship to the Fairfax Dairies.

In a statement issued last night, Representative Goldborough said:

"I don't know who the Fairfax Dairies are, don't know what the trouble is about except that from the papers that were handed me and which I, in turn, handed to Commissioner Hazen, I assume that the Fairfax Dairies are accused of receiving "bootleg" cream, whatever that may be, from Indiana.

"As I understand the situation, if the permit of the Fairfax Dairies was taken away, it would interfere with the market which my constituents have for their milk products, which, in turn, is the reason why my constitutents are interested in having the litigation fairly presented in court."

In his petition to the Commissioners requesting the delay, Representative Goldsborough said one of the witnesses, John E. Kries, superintendent of the Fairfax dairy garage, was too ill to appear in court.

Corporation Counsel Seal, who was given the petition by the Commissioners, sent the following letter to Goldsborough:

"I know you will be happy to know that I am having a physician representing the District make an examination of Mr. John E. Kreis. Should the doctor agree that Mr. Kreis' condition is such as is represented in the memorandum, of course, I shall make no objection to the continuance of the case. However, should this not be the case I shall insist upon trial being had."

Chickens Now Lay Colored Easter Eggs, Even to Tinted Yolks—and That's the Truth

If on Easter Monday your child rolls an egg down the White House lawn, and it breaks the egg of another child, and the yolk of the other child's egg turns out to be blue, or green, or red, you may be sure that the other child has a parent in the Department of Agriculture.

Or if you get a strange-looking chicken which can cluck only in Spanish or Portuguese, and the chicken delights you by laying an egg with a sky-blue shell, you may infer that an experimental bird from the same department has got mixed up with the ordinary variety of fowl.

That there are such strange possibilities was discovered yesterday in the course of an investigation into the Easter egg business.

Poultry dealers, whose estimates of the quantity of eggs Washingtonians eat in the course of a year ran well above 200,000,000—served up, and down, and both eyes closed, scrambled, in omelets, and as ingredients of scores of dishes—were united in claiming an extra-large consumption in the week before Easter, and an extra-small consumption in the week following Easter. After Easter most families are trying to consume the vari-colored hardboiled eggs that their children didn't gorge, or throw at trees, or trample in the grass of public parks or the White House lawn.

One of the dealers said he had heard there is a man in the Department of Agriculture who can tell what to feed chickens to make their shells come out whatever color you want—and who thus menaces the Easter egg dye business, which flourishes along with egg sales in groceries and drug stores and other such places just before Easter.

Not As Silly As The Truth

It sounded silly; but not as silly as the truth. For inquiry at the experimental laboratory of the Department at Beltsville revealed that the Araucana chicken, from Chile, and the Colondoma chicken from Costa Rica, lay eggs with a uniformly deep blue shell. These have been crossed with white leghorns at Cornell, and eggs with light blue shells have resulted, and with Rhode Island reds, with the result that orange eggs result.

As for the yolks, the Government laboratory is producing eggs not only with red blue, green, orange, yellow and even white yolks, but those which have successive layers of these different colors. These results have been obtained, according to Dr. H. W. Titus, in charge of poultry nutrition investigation at the research center at Beltsville, in the course of experiments to show how eggs with uniformly colored yolks, preferably in the yellows, can be produced. Various substances have been fed the fowls on different days to get the more garish colors, so that the scientists can observe more clearly just what happens.

But unless you have an Araucana or Colondoma chicken, the chances are you will have to color your eggs this Easter with ordinary dye. The Government isn't ready yet to tell you how to color even the yolk.

Denied a Divorce, Wife, 84, Insists On Separation

Rogersville, Tenn., March 23 (AP).—Denied a divorce for the second time in 18 months, "Aunt Ellen" Jones, 84, insisted today "I ain't goin' to live" with William H. Jones, her 85-year-old husband of 59 years.

Chancellor W. H. Wallace yesterday refused a divorce asked on grounds of cruelty and nonsupport and said the action "appeared ridiculous."

Testimony indicated one of the couple's seven children. Alpha Jones, was a source of contention and Wallace ordered her to seek a new residence away from her parents.

"Aunt Ellen" and Alpha returned to the farm home near here and Jones went to a son's home.

Penn Yan, N. Y., March 23 (AP).—Height is more indicative of a sense of humor than weight, at least among women students, Psychologist N. Franklin Stump finds.

Despite the traditional picture of a fat person laughing loudest at a joke, Dr. Stump said 90 jokes and 12 humorous drawings brought more laughs from the taller students at Keuka College than from heavier classmates.

Burney Alpher, a son, said that his father was accustomed to taking a nerve tonic and apparently had taken the wrong bottle from the bathroom.

Bluefield, W. Va., March 23 (AP).—A man armed with a toy pistol held up the First National Bank here today of $1,021. He was captured after a short chase.

A bank teller directed Patrolman Charles G. Farmer's attention to the man as he fled from the bank shortly after it had opened for business. Farmer cornered the man in a blind alley and relieved him of the toy gun and the money.

Chief of Police C. N. Wilson said papers found on the prisoner gave the name Leland Rebert and showed he had been released March 16 from the Mississippi State Prison, after serving a term for bank robbery.

NELSON WINS NORTH-SOUTH GOLF PLAY

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

Orlando, Fla., March 23.—A bit hunch-shouldered, and just a trifle knock-kneed, the man whose ability to throw a fast ball is the yardstick by which all speed ball pitching is measured, stood by today at Tinker Field as Robert Ortiz cut loose.

POVICH

Walter Johnson was interested, if not exactly impressed. "Faster than Johnson," an inspired baseball writer had written of the Cuban Ortiz in the early days of the Nats' training. That was written even as baseball correspondents down the ages had been writing "better than Cobb," "another Ruth" and " a new Tris Speaker."

This workout of the giant young cane-cutter, only two months removed from the Cuban sugar fields, was something in the nature of a special performance for the appraisal of Walter Johnson. The Nats' bosses were eager to learn the reaction of the famed Johnson to the fast ball of Ortiz. And Radio Commentator Johnson watched intently.

"Faster than Johnson?" a newspaperman asked Johnson with as much naivete as he could muster.

Not "Faster Than Johnson'

The big fellow didn't answer. But a smile that spoke volumes spread across his features. He looked at his questioner and his smile assumed definite traces of a smirk. Ortiz is not "faster than Johnson" in the opinion of Walter Johnson. We could discern that even through the big fellow's modest silence on the point.

They plied Johnson with questions. "Is he fast?" They wanted to know.

"Yes, he's fast," said Johnson, "pretty fast."

Bluntly, what did Johnson think of the lad?

"I think he's at least two years away from the big leagues. Better make that barring a miracle, it might happen."

Ortiz Lacks Naturalness

"Well, one look at him working and you'd know he was a converted outfielder or something. He's not a natural pitcher, that's easy to see. He doesn't have the action of a pitcher. He doesn't let the ball go at the same point every time. But you can't count him out yet!"

Why?

"Well, he looks like a pretty good ball player. I saw him scramble around pretty well for those bunts. He moves all right. And he's powerful. Never say such a big Cuban. And he can fog that ball in there, don't mistake that. Right now he's got a better curve than I had when I broke in. That will help him. They tell me his control was pretty good, but out there today I thought he was wild. He looks a bit wild to me. That will make or break him. If he can come down in there with that ball, I think Griff has got himself a pretty good pitcher."

The man whose pitching record shames modern hurlers if only for the fact that he complained of a sore arm only once in 20 years of pitching and that not until 13 years after he had made his debut), was the center of attraction at Tinker Field today. He was in uniform, and he was tossing baseballs with the same smooth, rhythmic delivery that is matchless. And as he threw there were yet faint traces of the speed that is now baseball legend.

Three Innings a Day

"No, I can't understand all these sore arms," said Walter Johnson. "But I guess I'm not in a position to. The only time I was ever bothered that way was in 1920. And I brought that sore arm out of spring training camp with me. Thirteen nights on a sleeper, pitching three innings of exhibition games every day because they advertised that I would, finally got me. I woke up in Clarksburg, W. Va., one morning and couldn't raise my arm to tie my necktie."

That year, 1920, we presumed, was not a good season for Johnson.

"Well, not exactly. We pulled into Boston early in the season and I was still bothered by the soreness in my arm. Griff, he was the manager then, asked me if I could work. He said 'go ahead in there Walter for at least one inning and see how far you can go.'

"My arm wasn't any too hot. I got by the first inning, and didn't see much use in continuing. I told Griff I'd try to pitch four innings and then quit. He said 'go ahead.' I stayed in there, pitched the whole game and pitched the first and only no-hitter of my career."

At that story, Griff smiled. "It's the truth, too," said the Nats' owner. "I never expected Walter to go more than four innings that day. But did you ever hear of the time in Philadelphia?"

No.

"Well, we had a catcher named Rippy Williams. He was sulking most of the time because I wouldn't let him catch Johnson. Eddie Ainsmith and Pat Gharrity were Johnson's catchers and Williams was aching for a chance to catch him. Well, in the late innings at Philadelphia one day with both Ainsmith and Gharrity hurt, I gave Williams his chance.

"He proved right away why I shouldn't have given him the job. It was getting a bit late and Walter's first pitch skimmed right past Williams' mitt. It skimmed right past Umpire Billy Evans' ear too. A couple of pitches later, Williams didn't even get his mitt up to another high hard one. It clipped Evans' right on the chin of his mask. That was enough for Billy.

Reading Pro Shoots a 280, 8 Under Par

Wins $1,000 Prize At Pinehurst; Smith Finishes Second Two Strokes Back

By the United Press.

Pinehurst, N. C., March 23.—Byron Nelson, 27-year-old Reading, Pa., golfer, won the thirty-seventh annual North and South Open golf championship today with a card of 280, eight strokes under par.

Nelson, who went into the final 36 holes today with a one stroke lead, negotiated the first 18 holes in 70 and the final 18 in 71 to beat out Social Registerite Horton Smith, of Oak Park, Ill., by two strokes, Smith had a 282.

Sam Snead, the West Virginia siege gun, overcame a four-year jinx and finished the North-South tournament for the first time in four starts and tied with Dick Metz of Chicago for third with 286.

In a three-way tie for fifth with 287's were Craig Wood of Mamaroneck, N. Y.; Harry Cooper, of Eastern Point, Conn., and Henry Picard, of Hershey, Pa. Wood shot a five-under par 67 on the outgoing 18, but a 77 the first day of the tournament brought down the score.

Par Takes Beating

Par 72 on the rolling Pinehurst course, one of the most difficult in the country, took a beating throughout the three-day tournament and seven golfers finished one under the 54-hole par of 288. Wood's 67 tied the old course record, but Cooper set a new one yesterday with a 66.

Nelson, a former caddy who came from Texas, led with 139 with one round to play. Smith was second with 140 and Snead, pre-tournament favorite, was in third with 141. Neither Smith nor Snead were able to produce the sub-par golf needed to overtake the leader.

Smith was out first of the three leaders and scored a 35, one under par. He dropped back to even par at the eleventh with a five and held the par figure to the finish. Nelson, playing behind Smith, was out in 34 and coasted in with 37 to win.

Snead carried a large gallery as he started out behind the two leaders, but his followers proved fickle and deserted him when it became evident the young hillbilly was not going to produce the sort of fireworks needed to overtake the flying Nelson.

Greensboro Next

As soon as results were posted, many of the players left for Greensboro, N. C., where practically the entire field of the North-South is entered in the $5,000 Greater Greensboro Open which begins tomorrow. Snead, who won the event last year with a sub-par 271 to begin a long series of victories, was heavily backed to repeat.

Johnnies Win First Game, 34-20

D. C. Five Advances In Catholic Meet At Newport, Beating Springfield High

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Newport, R. I., March 23.—The only Washington, D. C., team in the Eastern States Catholic Prep basketball tournament, St. John's High, came through its opening round clash with Cathedral High, of Springfield, Mass., with a comparatively easy 34-to-20 victory.

Though the Johnnies, entered in their third tournament of the season, held only an 8-to-5 victory after the first eight minutes of play, a hot streak on the part of Jimmy Mulvihill in the second quarter took the ggame out of reach of the Cathedral quint. The chunky Mulvihill sank three field goals to give St. John's a 20-to-7 margin at intermission.

Cathedral came back somewhat in the third session, accounting for 7 points, while St. John's coasted and rang up only 3. With their customary hot hand in the final minutes of a game, St. John's scored 11 points in the last session, at the same time, however, allowing 6 on on the part of Cathedral.

For the loser, Center Roy was the outstanding performer, doing the club's first scoring in the opening period and lending a hand whenever the prospects became too dark. He was high pointman with 15. Joey Gallagher, named the outstanding player in the recent eMtropolitan tournament of Washington, proved the accuracy o fthe selection once again. Martin Hunt and Frank Cady, center and forward of the winners, also turned in sparkling games. Cady tallied 12 points to lead the Johnnies, and Gallagher was second with 10.

Cageman Is Jumper

Auburn, Ala.—Holder of the Southeastern Conference broad jump championship, Bob Dickinson, Montgomery, is a forward in the ranks of Auburn's No. 2 basketball club this season. The youthful Dickinson, who also is a valuable sprinter on the cinders, annexed the broad jump crown as a sophomore in Birmingham last year.

On the Line With Considine

New York, March 23.—If the European nations who are rarin' to fight can manage to control themselves until the summer of 1940, the Finnish Olympics will virtually insure peace for years thereafter to come.

If you don't believe this, well, then you're an old fusspot, and you should have been with us today when we went to call on Mr. Urho Toivola, head of Finland's press bureau and chief press man for the 1940 games at Helsinki. Toivola told us this and many other things, including the fact that the national drink of Finland is milk, after which revelation the assembled reporters—and Toivola—pulled up their three-legged stools and quaffed a beaker of cream, Highland Cream.

CONSIDINE

The Finns are a peaceful, sturdy optimistic race, particularly the latter. "It's not true that we opened our completed Olympic stadium the day after Japan announced that she wasn't going to hold the 1940 games," Mr. Toivola said indignantly. "We opened it a month before their announcement," he added, his red mustache twitching humorously.

Officials Important Men

The Finnish Olympic officials spring from high places. J. W. Rangell, the president of their Olympic committee, is a director in the bank of the Bank of Finland. Minister of the Interior Urho Kekkonen, who competed in track meets as a high jumper until two years ago, is head of the sports committee, and Eric Frenckell, a member of Parliament, is in charge of general plans.

About $6,000,000 has been raised by the little country to put on a good sports show. That amounts to 300,000,000 Finnish marks, and it was all raised by light taxes and a special sales tax on clothing that bears the Olympic symbol.

Finland, the country which set the world-deplored example of paying its war debt to America, expects about 25,000 Americans to visit the country during the Olympic year. With that in view, it is giving free courses in English to all Finns who want them. It has already got into a medicated tiff with the American Olympic committee over the allotment of seats for American fundiments. Tickets will be priced as low as 20 cents, in Finnish kale, and moderate prices will prevail at the concession stands—where between shot putts the customers will be able to have a fish pie, milk, lemonade or herring. The best way to get a drink, Toivola points out, is to button hole a cop and say "Missa on Baari?" Good morning is "hyvaa paivaa," and it will be used a lot during the Olympics because there will be only a couple hours of darkness at that time of year in Finland.

Winters Affect Runners

Toivola can't explain why there have been so many great Finnish distance runners, and so few outstanding sprinters. He thinks the cold winters might have something to do with it, but he wouldn't be surprised if it all went back to Hans Kolehmainen, who won three distance races in the 1912 Olympics at Stockholm and set Finland sports mad.

Sixty countries have been invited to participate in the games and Toivola has an idea that it will show the nations of this forlorn planet that men and women of different breeds and stripes and dialects can indeed live in peace. To lend a truer international flavor they've put in a new competition—gliding, and tossed out basketball, hockey and one or two other sports. There will be a demonstration of the Finnish sport of besaballo, which Toivola hurriedly assured us wasn't a steal from baseball. "Our game is much different," he explained. "In our game we use a bat and we hit a ball and then run. See?"

Toivola doesn't know just what will happen if somebody over there blows a bugle real loud, and the totalitarian states began to slug and get slugged. "There would be no Olympics then," he sadly mused. "Ah, but if they can only hold off . . ."

Bibber McCoy Wins Match As Fans Cheer

Bibber McCoy returned to the hero's role before one of the largest crowds of the indoor wrestling season last night at Turner's Arena by pinning Babe Zaharias in 18 minutes after a flying mare over the ropes.

The two also met last week and Zaharias was the winner with a right to the jaw with the referee out on the floor, and so for the return match two refs were hired, Benny Bortnick and Cyclone Burns.

McCoy earned the cheers of the crowd by refusing the disqualification verdict and winning legitimately three minutes later with a whirlwind attack that was climaxed by the flying mare over the ropes.

The semiwindup finished in a 30-minute scientific draw, with Australian Champion George Pencheff and Dr. John 'Dropkick' Murphy engaged in the clean bout.

Vic Christie, making his first local appearance in over three years, drew wth Jack Hader, one of the first time two no decision bouts have marked the local card.

Mrs. Davy Faces Miss Miley Today

Augusta, Ga., March 23 (U.P.).—Dorothy Kirby, Atlanta schoolgirl, today came back after losing three of the first four holes and defeated Jean Bauer, of Providence, R. I., one up on the twentieth green, in semifinals of the annual Augusta invitational women's golf tournament.

Mrs. Opal S. Hill, Kansas City, Mo., professional, had little difficulty eliminating Alice Rutherford, of Aiken, S. C., and Orange, N. J., 5 and 3. Mrs. Hill took an early lead and stayed ahead. She was four up at the turn. Finals are tomorrow.

Mrs. Myron Davy, Washington, D. C., won a consolation match by default and meets Marion Miley, Lexington, Ky., tomorrow.

Dodgers Hit Five Home Runs, Give Reds 2 Hits to Win, 9-1

By the Associated Press.

Clearwater, Fla., March 23.—The Brooklyn Dodgers' switch-hitting rookie shortstop, Harold (Pete) Reiser, who had a perfect day at bat yesterday to help beat the St. Louis Cardinals, came up with two home runs and another perfect record to lead the Dodgers to a 9-1 rout of the Cincinnati Reds.

The flailing of three Cincinnati hurlers also included home runs by Dolph Camilli, Oris Hockett and Pitcher Bill Crouch.

By contrast the Reds were held to only 2 hits, which with some sloppy Brooklyn fielding, accounted for Cincinnati's run in the eighth. Fred Fitzsimmons worked three innings and Tot Pressnell four in unapproachable fashion.

Reiser now has a record of three home runs and seven hits in seven times at bat for the two days he has had a chance to show in Manager Leo Durocher's shortstop shoes. He is on the roster of Brooklyn's Elmira, N. Y., farm in the Eastern League.

Harlingen, Tex., March 23 (AP).—Bunching four consecutive hits off Southpaw Jennings Poindexter in the sixth inning, Toledo, of the American Association, came from behind today to beat the Phillies, 5 to 2. It was the Phillies' seventh straight loss, not counting a tie game with the Browns.

Cafritz Makes Ace Just in Time for Pair of Shoes

The ace was a timely one as only yesterday a District shoe firm again decided to present a pair of shoes to members of the perfect shot club, and the salesman visited the course just a few hours before and tacked up the notice.

Ben Ourisman, Ned Bord and Herbert Glassman witnessed the shot, the latter to his sorrow. Cafritz had spotted Glassman 6 strokes on the nine and was still well back when he dropped the ace.

Nats' 2 Rookie Stars to Pitch Against Tigers

By Shirley Povich.

A Staff Correspondent.

Orlando, Fla., March 23.—Back to the pitching wars against the Detroit Tigers on Sunday will go the two prize prospects of the Nats' mound crop—Walter Masterson and Roberto Ortiz—according to a program outlined by Manager Bucky Harris today.

It was against the Tigers last week that both Masterson and Ortiz, with impressive performances, stirred within Harris the hope that he may have a pair of "finds."

"This is no time to awiddle or twaddle," said Harris, using one of his favorite expressions. "I've got to find out pretty quick how far I can depend on these kids and I might just as well send 'em back against the Tigers as anyone else."

Originally, Harris had planned to pitch only the Cuban Ortiz against the Detroit club, which Ortiz

Reds Appear Best Bet for Pennant

Werber's Acquisition Boosts Chances of Cincinnati Club

[Editor's note: Following is the third of a series on the major league baseball teams. Tomorrow the final dispatch on the tail-end clubs of the National League.]

By Harry Ferguson,

United Press Sports Writer.

Tampa, Fla., March 24.—The more you watch Bill McKechnie send his Cincinnati Reds through their paces, the more convinced you become that you are looking at the 1939 champions of the National League.

The team has a fairly good infield, plenty of power and what should turn out to be the best pitching in the league—maybe the best in either league. There is every chance in the world that the National League will have another dog-eat-dog pennant fight this season, but the Reds seem to have the class to come down to the wire ahead of the Giants and Cubs. There is not much threat from any other club.

The Reds' chances soared when they purchased Bill Werber from the Athletics to plug a gap at third base. Until then, the infield was as shaky as a bridegroom at the church door. But now with Werber on third and Frank McCormick on first, McKechnie's only problems are second base and shortstop. Billy Myers probably will be back at short when the season opens and either Lonnie Frey or Eddie Joost, up from Kansas City, will be on second. The outfield, with Wally Berger, Ival Goodman and Harry Craft, is all set. Craft has been a fielding fool down here this spring, catching them off his shoe laces and doing tumbling acts in center field to come up with the ball.

Ernie Lombardi and Bill Hershberger form a good catching staff, and that brings us to the pitchers. Illness has impaired the spring progress of the Reds' pitchers, but there or so many of them that it doesn't matter. Lee Grissom, Whitey Moore, Buckey Walters, Johnny VanderMeer, Paul Derringer, Gene Schott, Peaches Davis, Red Barrett and Jim Weaver are back. In addition, McKechnie has come up with a kid named

Jockey Ashcroft Pilots Four Winners at Tropical Park

Rides $21.90 Shot Home In Seventh

Scores on Sun Inplay In Feature; Jezreel Breaks Ankle and Is Destroyed

Tropical Park, Fla., March 23.—Jockey Jimmy Ashcroft stole the show here this afternoon with one of the greatest exhibitions of riding seen in Florida in many a day.

Ashcroft piloted Sun Inplay to victory in the feature event, after winning with Forfend in the second race and Little Bolo in the third. His last winner was the $21.90-shot, Almac, in the seventh. He has 23 winners for the meeting.

Ashcroft, one of the most promising apprentice riders to show here this season, booted K. A. Veit's Sun Inplay, the $3.60 for $2 favorite, to an easy three lenghts victory in the featured Tallahassee Purse of 6 furlongs.

Second money went to the Medway stable's William Palmer, which beat the Bomar stable's Detroit Bull by a length for second money. Over a track packed down into faster condition because of recent showers, Sun Inplay reported in the keen time of 1:11 flat.

Ashcroft, after his triumph aboard Sun Inplay, had 22 winners at the meeting, or two more than Chuck Charlton. Ashcroft, who is under contract to P. L. Kelley, doubtlessly would have beaten out Charlton in their close race for the apprentice leadership at Hialeah Park but for being grounded 10 days.

Sun Inplay and Detroit Bull broke very fast from the gate. Ashcroft urged the favorite into a comfortable advantage and quickly disposed of Detroit Bull. William Palmer took up the chase around the bend. However, Sun Inplay had plenty of run left in him. The Sun Briar colt widened his lead through the late stages as if much the best.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—GOLDEN THOUGHT, $18.70, $7.10, $5.80; CANDAR, $4.90, $3.50; FRENCH TRAP, $7.00.

GOLDEN THOUGHT, away fast, went into a long lead in the early stages under a hustling ride, but faltered through the stretch and just lasted long enough to stave off CANDAR'S bid. The latter moved into contention steadily on the inside in the run down the backstretch, but Stronsky never got himself tied on until straightened into the stretch and his mount finished with a belated rush. FRENCH TRAP, off slowly, gained gradually under vigorous pressure while saving ground and easily disposed of the others in the last quarter mile. HAPPY HOST was unable to improve his position. MILK was under a drive the entire trip, but never menaced the leaders.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $900; allowances. For 3-year-olds. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 2:33. Off 2:36. Winner, John O. Whitlow's br. f. (3), by Saxon—Petite. FORFEND, away forwardly, went in nearest pursuit of the leader in the early stages and, closing with determination in the final furlong through the stretch under extreme pressure, got up in the last strides. DONNA LOPEZ, quickest to begin, drew off into a good lead in the opening half mile, but faltered gradually the remainder of the trip. CO-LARMES, on the inside and compelled to pull up in the first three furlongs, stole through on the inside the remainder of the trip, but could not get up. MANY FLAGS responded to punishment and closed ground through the stretch. GREEDAN hung in the final drive.

Daily Double, Golden Thought and Forfend, Paid $77.30.

THIRD RACE—Four furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 2-year-old maidens. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:03. Off 3:07. Winner, Fanfare Farm's ch. c. (2), by Byrd—Mary Helen. Two-dollar mutuels paid—LITTLE BOLO, $15.00, $7.70, $5.40; COUNT NATURAL, $31.90, $18.10; ATUM RE, $8.30.

LITTLE BOLO, off forwardly, shook off his opposition in the opening quarter mile, saved ground entering the stretch and opened up a winning lead in the stretch, but had to be strongly ridden to withstand COUNT NATURAL'S bid. The latter saved much ground all the way, swung around the leader after straightening out into the stretch and finished gamely to punishment. ATUM RE, well up early, also saved ground and had no excuses. AIRTIGHT was carried very wide by FRAIR'S SCOUT on the stretch turn. The latter, a prominent contender rounding the turn, bore out badly turning into the stretch. DARBY DALLAS was forced out all the way and had little chance to settle into his best stride. TOTACHE stumbled when the start came.

FOURTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:33. Off 3:36. Winner, L. M. Biggs' b. or br. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHA HAE, $13.80, $6.60, $4.30; BLACK ARROW, $7.40, $4.80; CHANCER, $3.60.

WHA HAE, going in improved form, moved to the front swiftly in the opening quarter mile, raced CHANCER into submission rounding the turn, responded with determination to punishment through the stretch and outlasted BLACK ARROW. The latter worked his way up on the inside in the first half mile, was taken around the leader turning into the stretch and moved up menacingly, but faltered from his early effort when the final test came. CHANCER, in close attendance of the leader early, continued gamely to outstay CROWNING GLORY in the stretch run. CHIMNEY TOP had no mishaps, ON THE DOT made a wide turn into the stretch. LADFIELD broke alertly, but dropped out of contention in the first furlong and was never a serious threat thereafter.

FIFTH RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,000; allowances. The Tallahassee. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 4:00. Off 4:06. Winner, K. A. Veit's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SUN INPLAY, $3.60, $2.60, $2.40; WILLIAM PALMER, $4.10, $2.80; DETROIT BULL, $3.10.

SUN INPLAY held his opposition safe for speed and, saving ground entering the stretch, drew out when shaken up to win with something in reserve. WILLIAM PALMER gradually improved his position on the outside and moved up menacingly on the stretch turn, but faltered. DETROIT BULL, under extreme pressure and saving ground all the way, was easily best of the others. JOSH and PUMPGUN had no mishaps. GO HOME was forced to pull up on the inside in the early stages and was never a formidable threat thereafter.

SIXTH RACE—One mile and 70 yards. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:31. Off 4:32½. Winner, J. W. Barnes' ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BRILLIANT ROCK, $10.40, $4.30, $2.70; DISTRACTIBLE, $3.20, $2.30; CONTINUITY, $2.80.

BRILLIANT ROCK, steadied off the early pace while racing on the outside in the early running, went around the leader leaving the backstretch and drew out, but had to be briskly ridden to withstand DISTRACTIBLE'S challenge. The latter, in tight quarters on the inside rounding the first turn, followed the leaders under restraint until well around the lower turn and closed gamely, but could not overtake the winner. CONTINUITY, vigorously ridden from the start, showed good speed, but faltered in the final drive. TEPIN, on the inside all the way, had no excuses. JULIUS CAESAR finished stoutly from a slow beginning. JEZREEL broke down.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:00. Off 5:01. Winner, W. R. Reed's ch. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—ALMAC, $21.90, $9.40, $5.70; NIPPONESE, $12.50, $6.80; WILD COUNT, $4.40.

ALMAC, hustled into a contending position in the run to the first turn, went in close pursuit of the leaders while racing on the outside in the early stages, took command rounding the lower turn and, responding gamely to pressure, held NIPPONESE safe in the final drive. NIPPONESE worked his way up on the outside after entering the backstretch, made a bold bid through the stretch, but could not get up. WILD COUNT, strongly ridden throughout, swung to the outside in the last quarter mile and wore FREESTONE down in the last stride. FREESTONE was in tight quarters the last half mile. LACONIC was whipped to the front, but retired after going six furlongs. SUN APOLLO lacked speed and was never a serious contender.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $800; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:30. Off 5:34½. Winner, Cosgrave Stable's ch. h. Two-dollar mutuels paid—CELESTINO, $6.80, $4.20, $2.80; CHICHARRA, $4.10, $2.80; ONCAVE, $2.50.

CELESTINO, full of run, took command at his leisure rounding the first turn, was rated in front under stout restraint until straightened into the stretch, then drew away to win as his rider pleased. CHICHARRA, always in nearest pursuit of the winner, made a bid on the stretch turn, but was no match for the winner. ONCAVE, hard ridden in the final half mile, was unable to better her position. BROADWAY JUEL broke into the air at the start, but had no mishaps the remainder of the trip.

Md., Va. Stars in Bowling Tournament Tomorrow

Lucky Strike Alleys Host To 43 Teams

Marlboro Hotel Tops District Entrants; National Champions Dot Heavy Program

Temporary leaders in the twelfth annual National Duckpin Bowling Congress tournament at Lucky Strike will probably be shunted to lesser positions by late tomorrow as a crack field of 18 women's teams and 25 mens combinations, a majority in the championship class, await their turn at a share of the $5,500 prize money.

Baltimore, Norfolk and Richmond are sending their best pin splillers for the week-end's rolling devoted mainly to the Maryland and Virginia entrants, although the District will be well represented and the defending women's team champions from Bridgeport, Conn., will be on hand.

Two Alleys Used

Bill Wood will turn virtually every alley of the spacious Lucky Strike plant over to one of the finest field of duckpin artists ever to roll here on a single day, while many of the entrants will move further up Fourteenth street to the Columbia Alleys for the mixed-doubles championship and John Dennis sweepstakes. A total of 237 teams have entered the tourney.

Several other of the present title-holders in addition to the W. I. C. C. girls from Bridgeport will be on hand, including the District's top pin performer, Astor Clarke, present singles champion, who will roll with Joe Harrison in doubles in the afternoon and with the Marlboro Hotel team at night.

Helen Randlett and Olivia Schmidt, women's doubles titleholders, will be here with the Health Center Girls from Richmond, while Mark Akers, half of the mixed doubles championship team, will roll with the National Premium Beer five of Baltimore.

Feature match among the women bowlers tomorrow night will find Rosslyn's former champions and Bridegport rolling together, while other ranking women's teams out for the lead will be Tivoli Grils of Baltimore, Imperial Girls of Baltimore; Jacob Ruppert, Richmond; John Marshall, of the same ctiy; Health Center's two teams from Richmond, and National Premium, Baltimore.

Marlboro Pinmen Feature

Marlboro Hotel's second-place District League quintet will atract a majority of the gallery-seeking new leaders among the men's teams, with Wallace Barnes 1,867 total that took the lead from Charlotte Wednesday night, the score that must b ebeat.

George Isemann, executive secretary of the Bowling Congress and in charge of the event, labeled several of the invading duckpin quintets from Baltimore as possible men's leaders, including Plaza Sellmayer, Maryland Casualty, Regent, Rintoul Five, Rosetta, including Art Felter, of the doubles champions, in its line-up, and Fidelity and Deposit.

Richmond's hopes depend mainly on John Marshall Statesmen, with Ray Barnes in the line-up; Health Center, with George Demeres rolling, and Rheingold Beer.

Marlboro Hotel will probably roll in competition with the classy Peninsular Bus five, of Norfolk, a real threat for the team title.

The individual stars of a majority of the teams competing at night will roll in singles and doubles in the afternoon, with the duckpin spilling spree starting around 2 p. m. and continuing well after midnight. Another big day is on tap Sunday.

18-Game Card Set for Club At Bridgewater

Baseball Prospects Only Fair; Three Lettermen Back

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Bridgewater College, March 23.—The athletic council of Bridgewater College released today an 18-game schedule of baseball, 8 at home and 10 away.

Coach Stanley Houser has been putting his 32 candidates through grilling practice since the first call March 4. He has the task of building almost a new team since only three lettermen from last year's squad are back. "Pop Skelton, Capt. May and Simpson, veteran pitcher, are the leftovers from last year. Six new pitchers and a flock of hustling youngsters are battling it out for varsity placement. "Herb" Ruby, Illinois; "Dapper" Reed, Mount Airy, N. C.; "Submarine" Grossnickle, Myersville, Md., and "Fireball" Shull, of Bridgewater, seem ready for first-string hurling.

Capt. May will hold conterfield, but the other two places in outfield are wide open with a nip-and-tuck struggle by several clouting youngsters. Siple at short, Suter on second, and Shirkey cavorting around the hot corner, with "Pop" Skelton a fixture on first, will make a four S combination infield which will bear watching.

Three games are scheduled for next week with University of Delaware Monday and Haverford Wednesday on Riverdale Field. March 30 the team journeys to Lexington to engage W. & L. April 3 V. M. I. will be met also at Lexington. The schedule after the Easter recess is as follows: Randolph-Macon, April 15, home; April 16, Virginia Medical, away; R. M. C. away; Juniata, April 20; Elizabethtown, April 21; Wilson Teachers, April 22, away; Hampden-Sidney, April 25; Lynchburg, April 26, away; Roanoke, April 29, home; Roanoke, May 3, away; Hampden-Sidney, May 4; Wilson Teachers, May 5; Virginia Medical, May 6, and Lynchburg, May 11, home.

Williams Seeking Fourth Ring Title

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Woodstock, Va., March 23.—George Williams, Woodstock, 16-year-old, 145 pounder, will strive to attain his fourth consecutive crown when the sixth annual Shenandoah ounty Golden Gloves tournament gets under way here Friday night. Bill Allen, now of Alexandria, is the only other three-time winner in the annuals of Shenandoah County boxing. William will meet Otiz Zirckle, of Mount Jackson, and although the defending champ has experience over his opponent, the latter has a slightly longer reach and put in a brilliant performance during the high school tournament last week by smashing Robert Perry, of Newmarket, to the canvas and registering a technical knockout at the end of the second round. The card for Friday lists 14 events ranging from 85 pounds through the 170-pound division.

Rockville Wins Another

Rockville girls' basketball team hung up its eighty-first consecutive victory Wednesday night when it won a close 28-23 decision over a powerful Hagerstown Y. W. C. A. team at Frederick, Md. The latter is champion of the South Atlantic section. Margaret Lanier was high scorer, while Mrs. Howard Nusbaum paced the defensive.

Western Ties Wilson, 33-33, In Swim Meet

City Championship Decided Friday When Central-Western Vie

The deadlock between the three teams entered in interhigh swimming competition—Woodrow Wilson, Western and Central highs—continued yesterday at the Y. M. C. A. pool as the first two ended a dual meet with a locked score of 33-33. It was the fourth tie in the series this season, and the second one in which Wilson's tankmen have participated.

Western might have won the meet with a victory in the last event on the program, the 213-freestyle relay, but saw the chance slip from its fingers when the Wilson team of Little, Fratt, Crane and Criesemer splashed to a victory in 2:07.8. Miller was the outstanding performer for Wilson, registering triumphs in the 50 and 100-yard freestyle events. Holden, of Western, helped the team to an early lead when he came in first in the 100-yard breaststroke, and later accounted for another point with a third place in the fancy diving.

Barring another tied score, generally a rare occurrence in swimming the interhigh championship will be decided next Friday when Western and Central meet in the latter's pool. The winner will be champion, the loser in last place. Wilson can be no worse than second.

Favorite Role To Easy Mark At Middleburg

Webb Entry Backed Heavily in Point Race Saturday

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., March 23.—Easy Mark, owned by Gerald B. Webb, jr., is a red-hot favorite for the annual Middleburg hunter point-to-point races which will be held Saturday. This big chestnut gelding, son of Hustle On—Cleopatra, is entered in the heavyweight division and will be ridden by Mr. Webb.

This good horse won the open race in the Warrenton point-to-point last Saturday and the week before captured the heavyweight race at the Piedmont meet on the Paul Mellon estate.

Crompton Smith's Mary Barry, who ran second in the Warrenton race, and Amory Lawrence's Rack-a-Rock, who finished third in the same race, are entered in the middleweight division Saturday, and will be big contenders for the Middleburg Challenge Bowl. Mary Barry won a leg on this trophy two years ago. This handsome bowl is given to the most suitable hunter at the meet, and the first three horses in each division will compete for the bowl.

There are 20 hunters, seasoned from a good winter for foxhunting, entered in the three races. More are expected to enter at the post and indications point to a good afternoon of sport for the foxhunting gentry.

The first race will be called at 1 p. m. and the place of start and finish will be announced Friday evening.

The judges will be J. R. H. Alexander, Delancey Nicholas, Capt. Ewart Johnston and Stirling Larrabee.

Merrick was out in front by a single point as the game neared its end, but Capone, of Stanton, deadlocked the count with a foul throw. In the extra period, Jim Downs dribbled in for the two points that gave the host team its triumph.

Two 'Surprise' Teams Clash In Post-A.A.U. Game Tonight

Rockville Girls in One of Feature Battles at Eastern

Two "surprise" unlimited teams will clash tonight on a Post-District A. A. U. Tournament program which includes a semifinal battle of the sensational Rockville girls' club and the Mount Rainier lassies. The unlimited clash will bring a head-on struggle between the up-and-coming Interior Department five and the hard-playing Army Medicos.

The Rockville girls will have much at stake tonight. They have not been defeated since the 1937 season and have a winning streak of 53 games to risk against the girls from Mount Rainier, who provided a distinct upset when they downed Agriculture, champion of the Community Center League, 14-9, last Wednesday night. In addition, Rockville is seeking its third straight Washington Post Trophy as District A. A. U. champion.

The young Mount Rainier girls, former and present high school girls from Prince Georges County, are considered a match for their Montgomery County sisters. Both teams boast forwards who shoot like boys and guards who give opponents few chances at the basket.

Star Forwards

Rockville will have its star forwards, Margaret Lanier, Marguerite Howard and Audrey Nusbaum, groomed for point making, while Mount Rainier will depend upon Betty and Willa Ott to keep them in the scoring running.

The Interior-Army Medicos clash, victory in which will take the winners into the semifinals against Dapper Dan, should make the Eastern gym fairly sizzle with action and is likely to mark the third thrilling point-for-point struggle in a row in the unlimited class. Last Wednesday's games brought tie scores on 12 occasions.

Army Medicos barely clung to its lead to score their upset triumph over Regal Clothiers, runners-up in the recent Middle Atlantic tournament. The score was 43-41 and climaxed a brilliant exhibition in which Frank Elliott, former Yale star, and Charles Dickenson played leading roles. It was the second hard tournament game for the Medicos who had a rough road in downing the Georgetown University intermurals, 43-34, i nthe first round.

Smashing Victories

Interior Department, with its Indian stars, was not considered highly when the tournament started. However, the club has turned in a pair of smashing victories and aims to jump into the semifinal against Dapper Dan tonight. In its first game Interior turned back General Accounting Office, 44-21, and then followed by eliminating the formidable Greenbelt A. C., headed by Johnny Bozek, former Gonzaga High and Georgetown star. Interior's Indians, Cornelius, Ray and Ironteeth will be ready for anything the Medicos have to offer in a basketball way. They will bring their Indian and office following.

Tonight's 145-pound class should prove a worthy preliminary for the big girls' and unlimiteds' battles. Regal Neon, 50-40 winner of St. Mary's Boys Club earlier this week, tackles Al's Billiard Parlor, victor over the Y. M. C. A., 29-27, in the first round. The winner of this clash enters the semifinals.

The 135-pound game, opening the program, will bring Eckington Bakery into action against the Roosevelt Community Center.

A pair of naturals are booked for tomorrow night. Jewish Community Center's unlimiteds meet Bolling Field for the right to face Delaware & Hudson in the semifinals while the Jewish Community Center 145-pounds take on St. Martin's. These are considered two of the outstanding survivors in that division.

Admission to all the tournament programs is 25 cents.

Roderick Scores K. O. For British Title

Liverpool, England, March 23 (AP). Ernie Roderick knocked out Jake Kilrain in the seventh round of their scheduled 15-round bout for the British welterweight championship tonight.

Roderick weighed 145, a pound less than Kilrain. The victory was expected to lead to a world's welterweight title fight between Roderick and Henry Armstrong, of Los Angeles, this summer.

Field Trials Start Today AtGermantown

One of Largest List Dogs Entered in Two-Day Event at Johnson's

The Germantown (Md.) farm of Walter Johnson, erstwhile Big Train of big league pitching fame, will be the scene today and tomorrow of the eleventh annual spring trials of the National Capital Field Trial Club, with competition listed in three staes for the two-day event.

At 8 a. m. this morning, regardless of the weather, one of the largest entries in the history of the event will take to the field for competition in classes for puppies whelped during 1938, for dogs of all age, winners or non-winners, and for shooting dogs.

Judges will be Claude B. Stickley, of Vaucluse, Va., and Ralh D. Kellam, of Wilmington, Del. These two men have had wide experience judging field dogs, and Trial Club feels they are ably qualified to officiate.

In an effort to make the trials as interesting as possible, as well as facilitate the work of the dogs, a larger-than-usual supply of Bob White quail will be liberated on the course and in the bird field. The gallery was expected to get a fine view of the action in the bird field due to its location. There will be no charge for spectators.

Though regular entries closed several days ago, dog owners are invited to add their names to the entry list for a reasonable extra charge. The Germantown church will serve turkey dinners for dog fanciers, as well as spectators on both days.

Politics Out Of Finnish Olympiad

By the Associated Press.

New York, March 23.—The Finnstance runners and folk who come notable in America as long disup with a fistful of folding money when the war debt installments come due, are preparing for the 1940 Olympiad. They promise it will be free from politics and propaganda, a direct return to the sports for sports sake principle.

Uhro Toivola, director of the press bureau of Finland's Ministry of Foreign Affairs, is here and when he says every Finn wil lhave a direct interest in the games he is not joking. The Government has granted rights to make Olympic ties, boots and sweaters to Finnish firms. Everyone in Finland is buying the articles and 2 per cent of the profits goes to the Olympic fund.

"We have appropriated $6,000,000 for the games," Tiovola said. "The government of Finland gave two-thirds of it.

"I want to point out that this doesn't seem a great deal contrasted with the budgets for the Los Angeles and Berlin games. But I must emphasize the Finnish committee and the Finnish people want to come as close as possible to the old Olympic idea of sports for sports sake."

The Finns aren't planning a mammoth stadium. It will have a cpaacity of 63,000. The other stadia fo rswimming, rowing, riding and the other minor Olympic sports also will be smaller than usual.

"But stands of 150,000 would be too small, too," said Toivola, "because everyone in Finland wants to see the games and especially the track events. Half the tickets will be reserved for foreign spectators.

If you have sometimes wondered what a fellow in an alimony jail thinks about, a letter just to hand may prove interesting. It comes from an inmate of the Long Island City Alimony Jail, where are immured New York gentlemen in arrears in alimony payments to their once ever-loving wives.

RUNYON

We present it herewith just as testimony from one side of the marital barbed wire. The writer signs his name, but requests that it be not used unless necessary. We do not deem it necessary. The letter:

"It seems to me that there should be some sort of an amendment to the marriage laws of the State of New York. Criminal laws have been changed from time to time, modernizing and fitting them to better define and carry out the law. Why has there not been any changes in the stupid and old-fashioned marriage laws?

Congressional Announces Golf Schedule

Match Play Handicap Tops Slate

Walter Johnson Event Opens Card; Balance Of Schedule Virtually Same as Last Year

Dr. O. U. Singer, Congressional Country Club golf committee chairman, announced the 1939 schedule yesterday, with the spring match play handicap event the principal added feature.

Otherwise the card was a virtual carbon copy of last year's successful program, with the exception of a change in the play of the club championship. The match play rounds will be played Friday, Saturday and Sunday, September 29, 30 and October 1, with the semifinals and finals the final date. Last year the final was 36 holes.

Play for the Walter Johnson trophy opens the attractive card, while the major affairs include play for the R. P. Smith Trophy, Wiffy Cox Trophy, President's Cup and greens, golf and house committee tourneys.

The Maryland State women's championship, May 16-20, is the only sectional affair scheduled to date, in comparison to last year when the club played host to several major events.

A new rule that will aid the higher handicapped golfer more than the better players was put into effect on the tenth hole where there will be no penalty for shots catching the ditch short of the green. Previously the penalty was one stroke. The ditch is about 300 yards from the tee, and catches only the longest drives in midsummer when the ground is hard, but more often penalizes the shorter hitter on the second shot.

Congressional Tournament Schedule

April 22, 23, opening day handicap tourney for Walter Johnson Trophy; low net gross, driving, pitching and putting contests; 29, 30, blind bogey.

May 6, 7, sweepstakes tourney; 13, 14, two-ball, best-ball sweepstakes, full handicap; 20, 21, qualifications spring handicap, match play event, four classes, full handicap; 27, 28, 30, first three rounds of match play, spring tournament.

June 3, finals, spring tournament; 10, 11, R. P. Smith Trophy; 11, mixed Scotch foursome; 17, 18, qualifications for President's Cup, four classes, three-fourths handicap; 24, 25, point tournament.

July 1, 2, first and second round matches, President's Cup; 4, handicap tourney, driving, pitching, putting contests; 8, 9, semifinals and final round matches, President's Cup; 9, mixed Scotch foursome; 15, 16, greens committee tourney, four classes, full handicap; 22, 23, two-ball, best ball sweepstakes; 29, 30, Wiffy Cox tournament, four classes.

August 5, 6, sweepstakes tournament; 12, 13, golf committee tourney, four classes; 19, 20, kicker's handicap; 20, mixed Scotch foursome; 26, 27, match play against par, handicap limit 21 strokes.

September 2, 3, 4, house committee tourney, four classes, full handicap; 9, 10, 3, 4, 5, tourney; 16, 17, seniors' championship; 23, 24, 27, qualifying round, club championship, in classes; 28, Calcutta pool drawing; 29, first round of match play, club championship; 30, second round of match play, club championship.

October 1, semifinals and finals, club championship, 18 holes each; 7, 8, handicap tourney; 14, 15, Tatum Cup; 21, 22, sweepstakes tournament; 22, dinner dance, presentation of tropies, ladies and men's club championship; 28, 29, handicap tourney, nine holes, selected by committee.

blanked without a hit in his first three-inning turn of the season last week. But his decision to toss both Masterson and the Cuban against the Tigers was prompted by Owner Clark Griffith.

Harris had told Griffith an eloquent story of Masterson's performance against the Detroit club at Lakeland, a game which the Nats' owner did not attend, and Griffith expressed his curiosity about the former Philadelphia sandlotter.

"All right, then," said Harris. "I'll show him to you on Sunday. I'll let him pitch five innings against the Tigers and then show them Ortiz for the last four. You'll see, at least, one good pitcher out there on Sunday."

Notes of the Nats—Tom Baker, the big right-hander obtained from the Giants in the Bonura deal, is slated for release to Charlotte on Monday, along with six other rookie pitchers . . . Baker, who came to the Nats with a reputation for being wild, proved it in his brief outings here . . . The Nats will go to Ocala, 85 miles away, on Saturday for a game with the Milwaukee Brewers . . . Roberto Ortiz, after showing commendable control all week, was wild in his pitching workout today . . . The Nats are now leading the Grapefruit League with three victories in three starts . . . The Nats' bosses are now convinced that Bobby Estalella will give them adequate protection in left field, but George Case needs more polish in his work as a centerfielder . . . and Taft Wright is not all to be desired, defensively, as a right fielder . . . It is increasingly apparent that Sammy West will be in the Nats' outfield when the season opens.

the home and there she was supposed to stay.

"If her husband left her, as was usually the case, she had no way of earning a living and was totally dependent on the courts of law. They in turn enforced the law and compelled the husband to support and care for the wife and —if any—the children.

"In this modern age, women have secured almost all the privileges that have been man's inalienable right for centuries—the right to vote, the right to sit on juries, etc. They can go out in the business world and secure employment, working side by side with men.

"They cried aloud for equal rights, but when it comes to marriage troubles they immediately fall back on the laws that were made for their grandmothers and their great-grandmothers. In comparison, that's like a prize fighter who, while he is winning, fights fair, but when it seems he is losing resorts to foul methods.

"Those laws of another generation should be revised and made to fit conditions as they are today. They should be modernized. A woman may imply, insinuate or actually accuse a man of *adultery and have enough evidence to obtain a legal separation. She may lie and accuse him of every known and unknown offense and her testimony will be regarded as true. She receives a nice sizable part of his salary and then lives in a style to which she is unaccustomed.

"On the other hand, a man could go to court with enough evidence and proof to show beyond a reasonable doubt the infidelity of his loving spouse, but instead of winning the case by not having to pay her alimony, 99 times out of a hundred he would get it in the proverbial neck.

In Alimony Jail

"At the present time I am an inmate of the alimony jail of one of the counties of Greater New York. Since I have been incarcerated in this so-called penal institution, I have heard stories that I didn't believe possible in this enlightened age.

"One man in particular has been jailed for not contributing to the support of his son, who has been dead over three years. This same woman who is responsible for this man's incarceration by her own testimony admitted to the charges of immorality. She was at the time living as the common-law wife of another man by whom she had a child.

"It doesn't seem just or lawful that this man, whose only offense was not paying for the support of a dead son and an immoral woman should be forced to stay in jail while she is free to do what she pleases. The foregoing case is, in my opinion, the most pitiable, inasmuch as the man in question is now married to a woman that is as fine and as good as the other was miserable and corrupt.

"My own, in comparison to other cases here, seems quite small and of no consequence, but still I believe justice has not been done. My wife left me because, as she told me privately, she no longer loved me. The filthy and lewd charges she had set forth so rottenly in her complaint she admitted to me were untrue, but was the only possible way she could get a legal separation or have sufficient grounds for one.

Agreeable to Her

"When I found out that this was the only reason she had left me (because she no longer loved me), I decided not to give her anything for her support, but would support the baby. Naturally, this wasn't agreeable to her, and she had me arrested and put in jail. I have spent over six weeks in this jail, and while it is not a hardship, nor are warden, keepers or deputy sheriffs overbearing or brutal, the unjust and persecuted feeling caused me to write this letter.

"If it has in any way served to enlighten the people of the city and State of New York to the old-fashioned and outmoded marriage laws, and there is one lawyer who believes there should be a revision of the laws relating to marriage and does something about it, then this letter has not been written in vain."

Fred Haney's men just couldn't fathom the offerings of Ed Linke, who hurled for the Browns last year, but they landed on his successor, Bill Strickland, in the seventh and eighth inning to remain undefeated in the Grapefruit League, this spring.

Emil Bildilli, who started for the Browns, held the Texas Leaguers scoreless for four innings. Linke then drove in San Antonio's run in the fifth off Bob Muncriff.

Giants Lose to A's

Baton Rouge, La., March 23 (AP).—Outfielder Long Tom Winsett was sold outright by the New York Giants today to their Jersey City farm and made his last appearance with the National Leaguers as a pinchhitter in the ninth inning of today's exhibition game which the Philadelphia Athletics won, 9 to 7.

As in their victory yesterday, Connie Mack's youngsters came from behind with a rush after the Giants regular hurlers, Cliff Milton and Harry Gumbert, had completed their chores.

Held to one hit and trailing 4 to 1 for the six innings this pair performed, the Athletics splurged with eight runs in three innings off Johnny Wittig. The rout was helped along by home runs by Bill Nagel and Earl Brucker.

Gene Thompson, who spent most of last season with Columbia, S. C., where he won 16 games and had an earned run average of 2.81. If he keeps up his early spring pace he is going to make some of the older pitchers hustle for their jobs.

Manager Pie Traynor sends back into this year's race almost the identical team that blew sky high last year when it seemed to have the pennant wraped up to take home. Although the Pirates were second last year, they may slide all the way into second division this season. The same infield of Gus Suhr, Pep Young, Arky Vaughan and Lee Handley will start the season. Johnny Rizzo and Loyd Waner are set for the outfield, but Paul Waner is a stubborn holdout. Fern Bell who hit .327 for Louisville last season, probably will step into the shoes of "Big Poison" if Paul's holdout persists. Ray Mueller, obtained from the Boston Bees, will do most of the catching. The "B men"—Bauers, Blanton, Bowman, Brandt and Brown—are back, and will be assisted on the mound by Bob Klinger and Jim Tobin. All in all, things look dark for the Pirates.

Bill Terry will go North with a potentially strong squad of New York Giants, but the line-up is dotted with question marks. Zeke Bonura, bought from Washington, will give the Giants more power at first base and should spend most of the summer rattling the Polo Grounds fences. His fielding is something else again, and he may let in more runs than he drives in. Burgess Whitehead at second still has to prove he is physically ready to play ball. Bill Jurges at shortstop will do all right and George Myatt may be able to hold the fast pace he set at third base toward the end of the 1938 season. Two old dependables, Joe Moore and Mel Ott, will take care of two outfield positions and Frank Demaree, slated for the third place, may find the change of scene from Chicago beneficial to his batting eye. The only important addition to last year's pitching staff is Manuel Ealvo, a fast ball slinger who comes up from San Diego in the Pacific Coast League with a great record.

Much depends on the left arm of Carl Hubbell. He seems to be making steady progress in recovering from his operations, but time will be the only answer as to whether he will be the Hubbell of old. Harry Gumbert may be ready for another great year. There is nothing to indicate that Castleman, Lohrman, Schumacher, Vandenberg and Wittig will be any better than they were last season. Harry Danning will do his customary capable job on catching.

The one and only Dizzy Dean remains the key man to the Chicago Cubs' chances. If he comes through, Gabby Hartnett will get the kind of pitching he needs to make a fight for the pennant. Clay Bryant and big Bill Lee will come through with their share of the victories. If Hartnet can get Hank Leiber to hit, his trade with the New York Giants will look good. Otherwise, it will look terrible. Besides Leiber, the Cubs have Augie Galan, Joe Marty, Carl Reynolds and Jim Gleeson, up from Newark, from which to select an outfield. The infield will be just what it was last year except that Dick Bartell will be at shortstop in place of Jurges. Hartnett and Gus Mancuso will divide the catching.

Fencing, Lacrosse On Navy's Slate

Annapolis, March 23.—Sports of winter and spring will overlap here this week with fencing and lacrosse. A special intersectional match of swordsmansip has been arranged for Saturday, with Navy meeting the Sword Club of Philadelphia and the Charleston Fencing Club, of Charleston, S. C.

Tomorrow, St. Johns and Lehigh will play a practice game of lacrosse and on Saturday the B squad lacrosse teams of the Navy and Lehigh will contest.

Outdoors

The eighteenth annual spring trials of the National Capital Field Trial Club get under way at 8 o'clock this morning on the broad rolling acres of Walter Johnson's Germantown farm, with one of the best entry lists in years.

ACKERMAN

There will be the usual three events, starting with the stake for puppies whelped during 1938. This event should finish early, so that the "All-Age," for winners or nonwinners, can be started early in the afternoon, and probably finish early Saturday morning to make way for the "Shooting Dog" stake.

This event, for nonfield trial winners, of other than shooting dog stakes, is always the most interesting to the large gallery of spectators clustered atop the great ridge bisecting the farm. For the first time this year the judges, Claude B. Stickley, Vaucluse, Va., and Ralph D. Kellam, Wilmington, Del., will be asked to judge this stake purely upon the qualities of hunting, stamina, finding of birds, and style for shooting dogs, without necessarily requiring that dogs be too severely penalized for not being entirely steady to wing and shot, but should be penalized for flagrant chasing after the flush.

Entries closed and the drawings were made last evening at the Manor Club after the testimonial dinner in honor of Ford E. Young, secretary of the club for a quarter of a century.

The second Mac Hart shoot will be held by the National Capital Skeet Club on their field on Bradley boulevard April 1 and 2, with the promise of Don Knowlton for a real show.

Shooters from the District, Maryland and Virginia (the Richmond contingent being headed by "Col." Mac Hart himself) will compete in this annual affair that has come to rank second only to the North-South shoot.

It is hardly possible that anywhere in this section is there a sportsman who doesn't know and love Mac Hart, chief enforcement officer of the Virginia Conservation Commission. His mounting years only serve to increase the height of the monument he has built by his service to sportsmen, and by his conservation of game in his cherished Old Dominion.

According to a survey by Ducks Unlimited, a national organization of wildfowlers, the largest migration of wild ducks and geese in five years is winging toward the Canadian breeding grounds. The survey, covering the 25 most important species, brought in 3,745 reports of an increase of the waterfowl, as compared with 758 reports of a decrease. This is the fourth successive yearly increase to be shown since 1934, when wild ducks hit the bottom in the worst waterfowl depression in history. But the birds are not out of the woods yet, for on the breeding grounds, snowfall this winter has been below normal, which in turn has a direct effect on the new crop by the lowered water levels in marsh and pond. With normal spring and summer rainfall, however, this loss will not be noticeable.

Simon Pure Mat Athletes Set Dates

The annual A. A. U. wrestling championships of Washington will be the highlight of athletic endeavor on April 6, 7 and 8 at the boys gym of the Y. M. C. A. Junior title events will be staged on all three days, while the senior class of amateur groaner will limit his activity to the seventh and eighth.

Bob Morgan, of the "Y," has been appointed head of the wrestling committee, his aides being Dan Armstrong, Tom Clayton, Roy Engle, Tom Gerrity and Charley Reynolds. Two mats will be used on Friday and Saturday so that both junior and senior contest may be held at the same time.

All registered amateurs in the District are eligible to compete. Blanks and information can be obtained from any member of the committee.

Intercollegiate Golf Event to Des Moines

Chicago, March 23 (AP).—The Wakonda Country Club of Des Moines, Iowa, was selected today as the site of the annual intercollegiate championship golf tournament which will be held June 26 through July 1.

Noggin-Busters Warned to Keep Foes in Circle

Harrisburg, Pa., March 23 (AP).—If State Athletic Commissioner George J. Jones has his way, members of that noggin-busting profession known as wrestling hereafter will do their slam-dancing inside the ring in Pennsylvania—not outside.

Hurling of opponents into the customers' laps, the commissioner said, has got to stop—"it endangers the fans lives."

Tip's Topsy Top Wins Dog Honors

Petersburg, Va., March 23 (AP).—Tip's Topsy Top, pointer owned and handled by Raymond Hoagland, of Cartersville, Ga., was declared the champion today in the Southeastern States amateur bird dog trials at Camp Lee.

Running of two braces this morning completed the trials, but none of the dogs approached the outstanding work of Tip's Topsy Top, paired with Ben's Ikey in the seventh brace yesterday.

The trials were the first held by the newly organized Southeastern States group, embracing Virginia, Maryland, North and South Carolina and the District of Columbia in Region No. 3.

Judges for the trials were Emory Beetham of Cleveland and C. B. Strickley, of Vaucluse.

Richmond Beats Buckeyes Again

Richmond, Va., March 23 (AP).—Richmond's Spiders made it two straight over Ohio State's touring Buckeyes with a 4-to-2 victory in city stadium this afternoon.

The game was a pitchers dule for five innings with Richmond's A. B. Marchant opposing Gene Donbrook, Ohio State ace. Both gave way for relief hurlers in the sixth and Ned Butcher, a sophomore, received credit for the Richmond victory and John Dagenherd was charged with the defeat.

Score by innings:

Ohio State	000	002	000—2
Richmond	000	022	00x—4

Pneumonia Is Fatal To Filly Royal Pam

Lexington, Ky., March 23 (AP).—Johnson N. Camden, chairman of the Kentucky State Racing Commission, announced today that his speedy 3-year-old filly, Royal Pam, daughter of Imported Royal Ministerial, died Monday of pneumonia.

The filly, which was stricken while being shipped from Florida to Lexington, whipped Technician, a Kentucky Derby favorite, by a quarter of a length in winning the Bahamas Handicap at Hialeah February 4. She paid her backers $33.30 for a $2 ticket.

'John H. Morris Handicap' Honors Dean of Turfmen

Lexington, Ky., March 23 (AP).—The bluegrass horse country will honor John H. Morris, dean of American horsemen, with the running of the "John H. Morris Diamond Anniversary Handicap" at Keeneland April 15.

Morris, 84, has seen the Nation's top thoroughbreds race during the past 75 years. He is a breeder, trainer and owner of racers. The handicap, celebrating three-quarters of a century of Morris' racing experience, has a purse of $1,200 and will be for 3-year-olds at a mile and a sixteenth.

The veteran horseman, who saw his first horse race when he was 9, witnessed Harry Bassett's win over Longfellow for the Saratoga Cup in 1872. He shipped East in the same car with Ten Broeck when the Kentucky champion was humbled by Parole in the Pimlico Sweepstakes. He broke Salvador as a yearling and in 1892 trained Azra to take the Kentucky Derby and Travers Stakes and Ignite to win the Alabama Stakes.

Mortgage Corp. To Reorganize Its Capital

Preferred Stock to Be Retired and Dividend Rate Cut

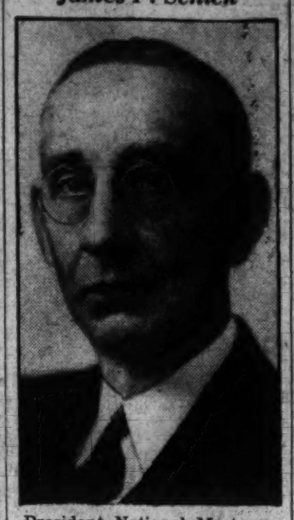
By Thomas M. Cahill.

James P. Schick, president, National Mortgage & Investment Corporation, announced yesterday that at a special meeting of stockholders of that organization this week, the capital structure was reorganized. Reorganization provides for retirement of 80,000 shares of preferred stock held in the corporation's treasury and a reduction of par value of the remaining outstanding shares from $10 to $7 per share.

Dividend rate on the preferred was reduced from 8 to 5 per cent, and now preferred stock will be non-cumulative instead of cumulative as at present. This action reduces the capital of the corporation to about $1,500,000, according to Schick, who explained that common stock is not changed but that under the reorganization, preferred stock will have a vote in the management of the corporation together with the common.

Financial condition of the corporation is excellent, Schick said, it having no obligations except current operations and mortgages on various pieces of real estate. It is expected that dividends on the preferred stock will be resumed by the middle of this year.

James P. Schick



President National Mortgage & Investment Corporation, who yesterday announced the capital reorganization voted at a recent special stockholders meeting.

A. B. A. Advocates Thrift

A national thrift movement was advocated for young people at the recent regional conference of the American Bankers Association in New York which numerous local bankers attended, those attending were impressed by the number of speakers who urged a return to thrift in the form of steadily maintained savings accounts.

The savings idea was made by P. R. Williams, vice president of the Bank of America, Los Angeles, and president of the savings division of the bankers' association, who explained the "Young America Tithes Movement."

Discussing his plan, he said: "We propose that under the leadership of the Treasury Department, a form of savings be devised, through the use of postage stamps—that when a child has his dimes, instead of putting them in home savings boxes that can be so easily tampered with, or temporarily borrowed, that he be urged to buy postage stamps and affix them to a 10-square form. When these spaces are filled with stamps of 10 cents each or an equivalent amount, the child is instructed to take that dollar in postage stamps to the nearest bank and open with it a Y. A. T. account.

"The bank will be provided with a red, white and blue passbook, uniform in design throughout the Nation. The bank would be given the privilege of forwarding the stamps to the Federal Reserve Bank for credit and accounts would be opened on its own books. Interest might be desirable at the postal savings rate.

"When no bank is available, postoffices could be authorized to receive the deposits. Federal savings and loan associations could be included. The F. D. I. C. and F. S. & L. Insurance Corporation would provide insurance as now authorized, and a limit of $5,000 could be placed on such accounts if desirable.

"The mere casual savings, however, is not the goal we seek," Mr. Williams said, "but that systematic habit of laying aside from youth, a certain definite proportion of that which he received for his own needs."

Underwriters' Luncheon

District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association will hold its next luncheon meeting at the Willard Hotel, Tuesday afternoon, at 12:15 o'clock, with Albert W. Atwood, magazine writer, editorialist for the Saturday Evening Post and a national authority on economics and finance, as the guest speaker.

His subject will be "Life Insurance Meets Another Test." Speaking from his experience as a policyholder, his observation of the recent insurance hearings, and his knowledge as an authority on economics and finance, Mr. Atwood is prepared to give a talk which will be of timely interest to policyholders throughout the country.

Security Storage Dividend

At a meeting of the board of directors of Security Storage Co. held recently, a dividend of $1.25 per share was declared on the capital stock of the company payable April 10 to stockholders of record at the close of business, April 5. Books to be closed between these dates, respectively.

Paint Salesmen's Club

Washington Paint Salesmen's Club will hold its regular monthly meeting this evening at 8 o'clock at the Continental Hotel. The meeting proper will be preceded by a dinner at 6:30.

Every member of the organization has been requested to bring a prospective member with him as his guest. The program committee has arranged for a guest speaker and entertainment, according to an announcement by J. M. Smither, secretary of the organization.

SEC Registrations Issued in February Lowest in 4 Years

The Securities and Exchange Commission made public yesterday an analysis prepared by the research and statistic section of the trading and exchange division indicating that a gross amount of $21,676,000 of securities registered under the securities act of 1933 became fully effective during February, 1939.

This was the smallest gross amount effective in any single month since January, 1935. Of the securities fully effective, $16,360,000 was proposed for sale by issurers. This latter figures compares with $135,939,000 in January, 1939, and $140,527,000 in February, 1938.

The manufacturing industries led all other groups with $5,490,000 of securities proposed for sale by issuers, accounting for 33.5 per cent of the total. The electric and gas utility industry was second with $5,090,000, or 31.1 per cent, all of which amount was registered in a single statement of the Central Maine Power Co.

Contrary to the trend during recent months, common stock issues in February led all other types of securities, with $8,670,000 or 53.0 per cent of the total, proposed for sale by issuers. Second in importance were long-term secured bonds amounting ot $5,138,000, or 31.4 per sent of the total, followed by preferred stock aggregating $2,552,000, or 15.6 per cent of the total.

Wheat Prices Lower as War Fears Fade

Prospects Brighter For Improved European Trade

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, March 23.—As fear of European war waned, the wheat market weakened today. Trade volume diminished and bearish market factors pushed into the background by the war scare again assumed importance.

Prices dipped as much as ⅝ cent but moderate commercial buying, based partly on indications of improved international trade, pared early losses and the market closed unchanged to ⅝ cent lower compared with yesterday's finish, with May at 67⅝@67¾ and July 67¾@67⅞.

Cancellor Hitler's speech at Memal got most attention and the way foreign and domestic security markets responded to the turn of European events encouraged confidence here.

Except for moderate selling of corn, trading in other grains was dull. Corn closed ¼-⅝ lower, May 47½@47⅝, July 49¼; oats unchanged to ⅛ higher; rye ½@⅝ lower; lard 2 to 5 down.

Europe Comparatively Quiet So Stocks Rally Mildly; Wall Street Calls It 'Technical Rally,' However

New York, March 23.—Hitler didn't take anything over today, so nautrally there was a rally in the markets. Memel, the trade pact with Rumania and the Italian approval of recent German conquests had been discounted the previous day so there was nothing to do but cogitate on the many benefits that accrue to mankind when a state of peace on earth has been re-established. Of course there were a few threats here and there, such as that one contained in Berlin dispatches which said that Hungary had violated the frontiers of Slovakia, despite the Reich's recently asserted guaranty of that state. Apparently Hungary hadn't been told the facts of life in central Europe and her troops wandered too far from their barracks.

Nazis' Strength Gains

This mass conversion of those who had hitherto been hopeful took place within a single week, but not within a single day. It was not an explosion, but the kindling of a fire which rose steadily hour by hour to an intense furnace heat of inward conviction. Nothing is more impressive than the outward calm which has been preserved. It has hardly been thought necessary to argue the matter. Those who have seen in these events the melancholy fulfilment of their belief and warning have not exulted. Too, those whose eyes are now opened have not recanted nor need they do so. Their aims were honorable. All are united in a resolve to meet the awful danger which threatens the civilization of the world. There is a pessimistic feeling that events have inexorably shaped our path and that we can do not other than follow it with steadfast perseverance.

That path has become more arduous and hazardous than in September. The military strength of Nazidom has received enormous reinforcements. The distribution of the well-organized, thoroughly equipped Czech army and the capture by Germany of all the arsenals, artillery and munitions of the murdered republic constitute a loss to the western democracies of the first magnitude.

On the whole, however, it was a quiet day in Europe and that meant a good day for the United States, and those who are trying to place their savings where they will not be too drastically depreciated by the actions of the world's militarists took heart. There was a shadow of hope that all will not be lost, that no open warfare will develop abroad and that a dollar invested today will not sink entirely out of sight.

Called Technical Recovery

The technicians in Wall Street did not break out into any huzzahs, however. They described today's rally in the very mild terms of a technical recovery, and added that it meant nothing. For they noted a slackened volume of trading on the upside—only 833,690 shares changing hands on the big board—and gains in the leaders of fractions to 3 points compared poorly with the losses of the previous day, when Herr Hitler was not travelling anywhere in particular.

It is true that the recovery was modest by any standard, amounting to only 0.32 point in the composite average. Utilities did poorly but other groups contributed to share to the slight advance.

One straw which the bullish forces sought to grasp, in their consideration of foreign affairs, was the unofficial report that the Vatican is acting as an intermediary in the French and Italian discussions. There was the possibility that the prospect for peaceful settlement of Italian demands might be enhanced by this method. The street is waiting anxiously for Mussolini's speech of Sunday.

Texas Oil on 6-Day Week

Within the borders of this country there were a few items in the news which were on the favorable side. Oil shares were firm, along with the balance of the market, not being disturbed by the announcement that Texas will return to a six-day producing week in place of the present five-day rate.

Bank clearings, reported today, showed a sharp increase, but this was due to the first installment of the Federal income tax payments. Over a year ago the activity was up 16.2 per cent while in New York City the betterment was 18.3 per cent.

Leadership in today's market was in the hands of the customary pivotal shares, the leaders in point of activity being General Motors, Steel and United States Rubber. Their respective gains were 1, 1⅞ and 1¼ points while Chrysler was up 2¼ and Bethlehem Steel 2¾. The list of most active stocks was virtually devoid of the so-called cats and dogs, which was a good sign, offsetting to some extent the dwindling in activity.

It was a quieter day in the leading commodities, wheat closing unchanged to ⅝ cent a bushel lower and cotton advancing 1 to 3 points.

Bond Trading Improves

Listed bonds developed modest strength in quiet trading today. Latin-American dollar bonds had the best appearance, owing to the cautious assurance by Dr. Oswaldo Aranha that service is to be resumed on Brazilian issues. Most European issues remained ragged in view of the Memel incident and fighting between Hungarian and Slovak troops. United States Treasury issues were slightly improved and most domestic corporation bonds also were in demand. Turnover in all issues was $5,970,000.

Brazilians Advance

Brazilian government, State and municipal bonds came into renewed demand on the statement made by Dr. Aranha after his arrival in Rio. Net gains of 1 to 2 points were recorded, and other Latin-American default issues were stimulated. German bonds advanced modestly and Belgians were good owing to assurances by the Reich as to Eupen. Scandinavian issues were irregular and Italians also reflected some uncertainty. The Australian and Canadian groups hardly varied.

Treasury Issues Rise

Long term United States Treasury obligations were mostly a little higher, but there also were a few recessions, and the changes resembled "evening"-out-operations. Guaranteed bonds of the Farm and Home Corporations were dull. Small fractional advances were the rule among best grade utility, railroad and industrial bonds, most of which are again at or just under top figures.

Steel Employes Wages Increase

New York, March 23 (AP).—The American Iron and Steel Institute reported today that wage-earning employes of the steel industry received an average of $18.40 for every ton of steel and pig iron they turned out in 1938.

This average, said the Institute, was the highest in four years. It was calculated without regard to the salaries or pay rolls of mining or transportation subsidiaries.

Pig iron now is quoted at about $22.24 a ton and steel billets at $34 a ton. The Iron Age magazine composite price on finished steel is $43.72 a ton.

During 1938 the average production per man per hour was 102 pounds. In 1937 the average wage per ton was $17.40 and the manhour production was 107 pounds.

Stock Exchange Promotes Four

New York, March 23 (AP).—Four key members of the administrative staff of the New York Stock Exchange were made vice presidents of the institution today. They are Howland S. Davis, director of the department of member firms; John Haskell, director of the department of public relations, and Charles E. Saltzman, secretary.

All four will continue their present duties, but will have "added authority" in the administration of the big "board," it was said at the exchange.

The naming of the four vice presidents, it was added, was the final step in the reorganization of the administrative machinery of the exchange begun when William McC. Martin, jr., assumed the presidency of the institution last year.

Business Needs Good Manners Says Rukeyser

Visiting Salesmen Should Be Received In a Friendly Spirit

By Merryle Stanley Rukeyser,
International News Service Economic Commentator.

Perhaps some day an imaginative statistician will correlate the effect of good manners on business success.

In praising the way in which Henrik W. Van Loon treated his fellow men, Frank Case, owner of the Algonquin Hotel in New York, in his "Tales of a Wayward Inn," said: "In the final test of a civilized, well-bred man, he is up toward the head of the class—he is polite to servants . . . It takes a gentleman to be polite to a waiter."

Well-conducted business enterprises are becoming increasingly cognizant of the importance of making friends. Accordingly, they have been scrutinizing every phase of their operations. Many progressive companies are seeking to improve their relations with visiting salesmen. They are recognizing that it is not constructive to treat "drummers" shabbily.

The old-fashioned habit of some buyers of tyrannizing over salesmen and making them wait interminably is being supplanted by a more receptive policy. There is sheer economic waste in forcing traveling salesmen to cool their heels in outer offices. Such wasted time adds to the operating cost of suppliers of merchandise, and must ultimately be reflected in the markup of goods sold to retailers.

Campaign for Salesmen

There ought to be a Nation-wide campaign to recognize that competent salesmen employed by makers of desirable merchandise are useful cogs in the machinery of distribution. Accordingly, they ought to be graciously received. Buyers should be considerate of the time of visiting salesmen.

Charles P. McCormick, chief executive of McCormick & Co., used to be a traveling salesman himself. He was impressed with the rudeness with which many firms received salesmen. As a matter of fact, mistreated salesmen tend to become bearers of evil gossip.

Mr. McCormick decided that this firm would go out of its way to be hospitable to visiting salesmen, wnether they were invited or not. On the seventh floor of his Baltimore headquarters there is a regular technique for being kind to visitors. Salesmen and others who are forced to wait are treated as guests, and are served tea and crackers. This turns them into friendly boosters for the firm.

The good salesman can be an asset, bringing useful economic and style information as well as merchandise. Moreover, the salesman is an important symbol of American democratic institutions, being an exemplification of the freedom of the consumer to make his independent choice.

In dictator countries, where decisions are made by decrees, there is not much room for salesmanship. Man's inhumanity to man is frequently shown in treatment of salesmen. It is high time to stop the economic loss inherent in wasting the time of salesmen. Buyers ought to be organized to keep visiting salesmen in motion.

Income Tax Payments Reduce Excess Funds

By the Associated Press.

Income tax payments temporarily reduced idle money in the banks in the week ended March 22. The Federal Reserve Board yesterday reported excess reserves on March 22 were $3,360,000,000, a decrease of $80,000,000 from the previous week. The withdrawal of bank funds to meet March 15 income tax installments interrupted a rising trend in lendable bank funds which had continued for four preceding weeks.

The board reported that the 12 Federal Reserve banks bought $31,000,000 of Treasury notes and sold the same amount of Treasury bills during the week.

Cotton Futures Close Higher in Light Trading

New York, March 23 (AP).—Washington struggles to evolve a plan for solution of the United States cotton problem gripped attention of the cotton futures market today. Buying and selling orders were kept to a minimum, leaving closing prices 1 to 3 points net higher.

A flurry of trade bidding late in the day ran up quotations as much as 7 points but the market fell back at the final bell.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Without telling us what the eventual contract was or the result, A. B. R. submits this hand and asks for the correct bid, saying: "The fate of the contract depends on the opening bid. Please advise what call should be made." The hand:

♡ A K Q 7 5
◇ J 10 8 6 3

South could, of course, pass, but few expert players would do so today. Most of them would bid a heart, planning to show the diamonds later if partner made an encouraging reply.

A psychic bid, which resulted in declarer's failure to take one single trick, netted the bidder a fat reward of "top on the board" when it developed that the adversaries could have bid a grand slam.

The present undertrick penalties, which the new law drafters would like to change, and the vulnerability feature were responsible for South's success.

Today's Hand

East-West Vulnerable
EAST DEALER

	♠ 9 5 ♡ J ◇ K Q 9 8 7 ♣ K Q 10 9 6
♠ A K Q 10 4 ♡ Q 9 7 6 ◇ 5 ♣ A J 8	NORTH WEST EAST SOUTH	♠ J 7 6 2 ♡ A K 10 5 3 ◇ A 6 2 ♣ 5
	♠ 8 3 ♡ 8 4 2 ◇ J 10 4 3 ♣ 7 4 3 2

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Dbl.	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: K ♠

The hand and the bidding are shown in today's box. Contributor J. C. W. comments on it as follows:

"This hand was played last night in a duplicate game. The majority of tables played it at seven spades, and there was no difficulty in making the contract. At one table however, an unusual result was obtained when South put in a psychic spade bid, was doubled, did not take a trick, but got an excellent score. Was East or West at fault in permitting the larceny?"

East was to blame for letting the one-spade double ride, having the five-card heart suit in his hand and strong top tricks. While he could have no inkling of the psychic the vulnerability situation ond his strong heart suit should have persuaded him to take aggressive action.

Seven hearts can be bid and made as easily as seven spades, and as honors are not scored at duplicate, it is quite likely the pair would reach six or seven at a heart contract had East bid instead of making a penalty pass.

The Federal Diary

By Scott Hart

Help Wanted!

THE WASHINGTON Self-Help Exchange, 2529 Pennsylvania avenue, (an organization that helps the unemployed to help themselves) asks retired Government employes who are skilled in one line or another to volunteer some of their spare time in helping the unemployed at the exchange. The unemployed people there are for the most part unskilled and retired, Federal people who are skilled workmen, could give a great deal of cohesion, it was stated.

AN ITIMIZED statement of conditions in Gallinger Hospital was brought this week to the attention of the District Appropriations subcommittee and some of the facts stand out—like this: Each attendant in the medical and surgical wards must handle and care for from 35 to 50 and sometimes even more patients. When an attendant happens to be absent, a remaining attendant takes the double load.

In the pediatric ward, attendants are often required to carry 12-year-old children up four flights of stairs. In the tuberculosis ward, the attendants come into contact with a deadly disease, when resistence is lowered from the tour of duty that continues for 72 hours a week. In the communicable diseases ward, two men stationed there care for approximately 300 patients.

SPEAKING FURTHER, the U. F. W. A., which appeared before the sub-committee, narrated: Another request . . . is on behalf of the maids who have money deducted from their salaries each month for food which many of them never receive. Many of these maids are married and have families to care for and cook for, and they do not eat the flood furnished by the hospital. Our understanding is that these monies are appropriated under the heading of maintenance instead of salaries; therefore we request that in the coming estimate these monies be placed under the head of salaries so that the maids may be paid this amount."

Concerning the pay of the Gallinger employes, generally, the subcommittee was told: "For instance, the minimum salary prescribed by law for attendants is $1,260 a year. While the classification act provides for a salary range of up to $1,620 a year, in a majority of instances very few of the employes have ever received a raise in salary in spite of long years of service."

The need of additional personnel in the laboratory was emphasized, on the ground that there all examinations and tests of patients are made. The number has increased from 34,000 in 1929 to 156,000 in 1938, while the staff performing the work has remained exactly the same over the nine-year period.

So there it is—or a very small part of it which might be considered while money is being spent on counting the trees in Cleveland.

NOTES: The Patent Office members of Group Health Association, Inc., have elected the following delegates and alternates to the Advisory Council: Thaddeus A. Riley (classification division); Simon M. Newman (classification division); Clifford Hultin (division six); Arthur E. Donnelly (division four), and Thomas B. Hudson (design division). Similar elections are being held in 43 agencies and bureaus to provide a liason group for the 2,200 families now being served by the co-operative . . . The devastating New England hurricane, which everyone has forgotten except the forest service that now contends with a gigantic fire hazard problem in the millions of acres where the trees fell, is to bring some employment through civil service. The forest service will employ needed supervisory forces under the civil service, and day laborers will be hired under terms similar to those that have governed forest service employment of fire fighters, tree planters and other workmen on the national forests in the past . . . In strictly formal mood, the Agriculture Chorus takes the stage tomorrow night, 8:30; in its spring concert. It will be presented in the Agriculture Auditorium and the public is invited. There is no admission charge.

Bob Burns Says—

Out in New Bern, North Carolina, two girl basketball teams was locked in mortal combat. The girls was tearin' into each other for all they was worth—puttin' up a scrap that would do credit to a he-man outfit. An' then, all of a sudden, somethin' happened. A teeny weeny mouse ran across the floor! Quick as scat, them girls dropped their basketball an' ran screamin' in all directions. The poor mouse darned near died of fright—an' so did they!

Now, what there is about a little mouse that can upset a woman is one of them eternal mysteries. My Aunt Sophie used to claim she wasn't afraid of the devil with his horns an' spiked tail an' his breath of fire—but I've seen her jump three feet high an' hang onto the chandelier when someone even mentioned the word "mouse!" I asked her "how come," one day, that she didn't fear the devil but did a mouse, an' she said: "Bob, that's a foolish question. I'm not afraid of the devil because I know what to expect from him—but you can't ever tell what a pesky mouse is goin' to do next!" An' that explantation'll have to stand for all women till a better one comes along!

Bedtime Story

By Thornton W. Burgess.

Danny's Mistake

Avoid mistakes. Make sure you see Exactly what things seem to be.
—Old Mother Nature.

What had happened to Harrier the Marsh Hawk? He was falling from high in the air. A moment before he had been circling about up there with Mrs. Harrier, as much at home in the air as was Danny Meadow Mouse or Peter Rabbit on the ground. Now something must have happened, for he was falling. Ha! He had gone heels over head in a complete somersault. Such a fall would certainly kill when he hit the ground.

Were Danny and Nanny Meadow Mouse sorry? Well. not exactly. No, they were not just what you would call sorry. Of course it was too bad for Harrier, but for them it promised to make one less hungry hunter to be constantly on watch for, from dawn to dark, one who did not spend just part of his time hunting over the Green Meadows, but practically all of it. You know the Marsh Hawk is a bird of the open spaces. He keeps away from the Green Forest. He loves the meadows and the marshes and the low open pastures. And there he does his hunting for Mice, Snakes, Frogs in low wet places, just occasionally one of the small feathered folk, a young Rabbit if he happens to see one, and in season grasshoppers, lots of them.

"Something has happened to Harrier. Perhaps we won't have to watch out for him after all!" Danny had squeaked excitedly as they watched the big Hawk falling out of the sky, or seeming to anyway. Alas for Danny! That is just what it was—seeming to fall. Down fell the big Hawk. and suddenly he wasn't falling. Instead he was going up as easily as if nothing at all had happened. He fell again. He turned another somersault. Then he was flying up once more. And all the time Mrs. Harrier was looking on with the utmost unconcern. She didn't appear in the least worried. She wasn't. The fact is she was admiring him. Yes, sir, she was admiring him. But she didn't show that either.

Gradually Danny Meadow Mouse realized that he was mistaken. "I guess that fellow isn't hurt after all," said he.

"I know he isn't," declared Nanny. "I know what he is doing."

"What is he doing?" demanded Danny.

"He is showing off," replied Nanny.

"Showing off! What is he showing off for?" cried Danny, looking much puzzled.

"You mean"——

"Mrs. Harrier," said Nanny, taking the words right out of Danny's mouth. "He is doing all that foolishness just for her."

"Oh," replied Danny. "It is silly if you ask me."

"Nobody has asked you, and it isn't silly," squeaked Nanny. "He wants her to admire him, so he is showing her how clever he is with his wings. Do you know what?"

"What?" asked Danny.

"I believe he is courting her all over again," replied Nanny. "You never show off for my benefit, Danny Meadow Mouse," she added.

"I haven't any wings. Besides I think it is silly," squeaked Danny.

"I don't. I think it is nice," said Nanny.

"Anyway, I hope they will go away from here. I would feel a lot easier if they were not around. You know they might take it into their heads to stay around here all summer and perhaps raise a family," said Danny.
